Reich Stages Second Purge, 100 Are Dead, Saar Foes Say

Pre-Plebiscite Attack on Hitlerism Reopened With New Force.

Nazi Press Denies Any Were Killed

But Admits Arrests of About 600 on Charges of Immorality.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Saarbruecken, Sarr Basin Territory, Dec. 27.—A violent pre-plebiscite campaign against Hitlerism got under way today in the Saar as anti-Nazis charged Hitler's henchmen had staged another "blood purge" in Germany.

"One hundred have been killed and 1,000 arrested in another June 30 directed against the SS (Schutz Staffel, picked Nazi guards) and the Hitler youth," the anti-Nazi newspaper Volkstimme said.

German officials obviously were alarmed by the sudden attacks, for both sides agreed that another such bloody housecleaning in Germany as that of last June would prove the ace of trumps for partisans of the status quo, government of the Saar by the League of Nations.

Anti-Nazi Charges.

The anti-Hitler faction asserted thousands who intended to vote for reunion with Germany at the plebiscite January 13 have swung to sympathy with the French cause, or with continuance of league rule, since Adolf Hitler purged his forces six months ago.

In reply to Volkstimme's charges the Nazi newspaper Abendblatt, in what appeared to be an officially-inspired story from Berlin, quickly admitted 300 had been arrested on charges of immorality in Berlin and probably as many more elsewhere in Germany.

Denying any persons had been killed, however, Abendblatt charged the anti-Nazi press with "abominable attempts to stir up trouble."

The sensational assertions in Volkstimme, which is edited by the Socialist leader, Max Braun, came soon after the Christmas truce on political activities ordered by the Saar Governing Commission ended.

Border Is Closed.

Simultaneously the commission in charge of arrangements for the balloting closed the border to all except those having urgent business in the Basin, and those merely passing through, seeking to keep out possible troublemakers.

Earlier in the day proponents of the status quo circulated what purported to be—but were not—reproductions of the leading Catholic pro-Nazi newspaper in Germany, the Landes-Zeitung.

The bogus reproductions carried death notices of many of those killed in the June purge, reports of more recent executions, and an explanation. In tiny type, that such would be the appearance of Landes-Zeitung were it allowed to print the truth.

In addition to its own charges, Volkstimme quoted another publication, Weltbuhne, as saying those slain in the asserted new purge number 230 and those arrested in Berlin alone 3,000 to 4,000.

Alleged immorality of those arrested in Germany, Volkstimme said, was merely the "pretext" for the arrest. It declared the real reason was "to clean out the dangerous sub-leaders."

4 Small Girls Drown in River

Schoolboy Rescues Their Mother, Swimming Icy, Swollen Stream.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Four little girls, sisters ranging in age from 2 to 8, were drowned, and their mother, Mrs. Hilda Mason, narrowly escaped with her life when a rowboat used as a ferry struck a submerged snag and was capsized in the swollen, icy waters of the North Fork of Hughes River, 15 miles from Harrisville, in Ritchie County, today.

The victims were Maggie, 2; Marie, 5; Betty, 7, and Laverna, 8. Teddy Cunningham, student at Cairo High School and son of the Rev. J. F. Cunningham, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church at Petroleum, was a passenger in the boat with Mrs. Mason and her children. He grabbed the woman and swam with her to shore after a heroic struggle. Mrs. Mason for a time was reported in a critical condition.

The body of the youngest girl was recovered soon after the drowning while searchers dragged the stream during the afternoon for the others. The children, with their mother and young Cunningham, were crossing the river to visit a neighbor, Forest Pribble, when the acident occurred. Mrs. Mason is the wife of Dexter Mason, a farmer and FERA worker of Route 1, Petroleum.

Pittman Seeks Silver Profits To Pay Bonus

Nevadan's Plan Presages Tie-up of Veteran and White Metal Blocs.

A tie-up between pro-bonus forces and the Western silver bloc was foreseen yesterday when Senator Key Pittman, Nevada Democrat, declared at the White House he will introduce a bill to pay the veterans' certificates with profits obtained in the Government's purchases of silver.

This proposal, which the Senator termed a half-way compromise, came as President Roosevelt worked long hours putting the finishing touches to the program he will present to the incoming Congress. This program, it has been made clear, makes no provision for payment of the bonus.

Returning to his Senate seat for another six-year term, Senator Pittman was one of the first congressional leaders to call at the White House. After a handshake with the President, he expressed satisfaction with results of the silver-purchase program and predicted action at this session on the World Court.

Effect of Program.

Payment of the bonus by use of the Treasury's seigniorage on silver was seen as an effort to bring about a combination which might enhance chances for the bonus and also speed up the Government's acquisition of silver. A vastly greater amount of the metal than has yet been purchased would be required under the Pittman plan.

The Treasury already has on hand $275,000,000 in seigniorage or other profits resulting from purchase of silver and its conversion into money over a period of years, the Nevadan explained. His bill, he added, will provide that this be used as the basis for new currency, which would be augmented as new silver is acquired.

Under the Pittman proposal, the bonus certificates would be dated back to actual signing of the armistice, a bookkeeping arrangement which, he said, would cost the Treasury about $500,000,000 less than the present estimates of $2,300,000,000.

Need of Legislation.

The Senator declared he will be undecided on the need for additional silver legislation until after he confers with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., The latter is in charge of the Administration's silver, program, which has for its ultimate purpose the establishment of silver on a 3-to-1 basis with gold.

Senator Pittman contended that the United States Government, by

West Virginia Train Explosion Kills 16, Hurts 42; Probe Starts

300 Miners Riding to Work Are Victims of Blast; Police Seek Vandal Blamed for Railroad Crash in Ohio Which Took 2 Lives.

Powellton, W. Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Sixteen men were killed and 42 injured, four perhaps fatally, by the explosion today of a locomotive hauling a train in which 300 miners were riding to work.

The terrific blast shook this isolated settlement and when the great barrage of escaping steam had cleared from the wreckage the dead and dying lay sprawled over an area of more than 100 yards.

The cries of the injured could be heard for considerable distance and families in nearby homes—some of whom had just seen their men off to work—rushed to the scene.

The wreckage of the train cluttered the narrow right-of-way, making the progress of rescuers difficult.

Two Inquiries Launched.

Tonight, frantic mothers and wives kept vigil at the morgue and hospitals in nearby Montgomery, to which the dead and injured were rushed, and children cried in their mining homes for fathers who did not return.

Both Federal and company officials are investigating the cause of the explosion.

C. R. Stahl, division superintendent of the Elkhorn Piney Coal Co., owners of the mine train, said the top of the firebox of the locomotive buckled, loosening the boiler tubes.

The train had made its last stop to pick up workers before continuing to the mine at the top of a nearby hill at the time the explosion took place.

The engineer and fireman both were killed. The body of the fireman was thrown 265 feet.

U. S. May Seek Control Over Holding Firms

Power Group Supervision Designed to Reduce Electric Rates.

(Associated Press.)

A bill designed to give the Government control of holding companies last night was authoritatively said to be contemplated by the Administration as a part of its campaign to reduce electric rates.

An official, who declined to be quoted by name, said a report on a study of holding companies by the Federal Power Commission and other groups would be submitted to the President by mid-January. He added that a complete draft of the proposed measure for supervision of power holding groups would accompany the report.

Chairman McNinch of the power commission called at the White House late yesterday, but declined to comment on the proposals.

The promise of legislation came at a time when New York City, the home of many utility companies, was pushing plans for its own power plant as a part of the latest effort of the Roosevelt Administration for whittling utility rates.

The arrangement, under which the city would light the streets, was discussed yesterday by Basil Manly, vice chairman of the Federal Power Commission, and Maurice P. Davidson, the city's utilities commissioner.

Glass Again Attacks Cut In Bank Rate

Senator Says Protest Is Aimed to Prevent Illegal Action.

Eccles Failed to Reply to FIDC Charge, Says Virginian.

Returning with sharpness to his attack on a recent order of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation lowering deposit interest rates of nonmember banks, Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, asserted yesterday that his protest was inspired by a desire to prevent "further and more dangerous exercise of authority for which there is no sanction of law."

The Virginian's latest statement was given to the Associated Press at Lynchburg and was in reply to the explanation made Wednesday night by Governor Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, placing responsbility for the deposit interest order on the FDIC.

Senator Glass, in what he said he hoped would be his "last newspaper word" in the controversy, contended that though he had made his original letter of a week ago "as clear as the English language could make it," Governor Eccles apparently had missed the point and was replying to something not charged. He added that Governor Eccles had not answered him "nor has anybody else."

Vandenberg for Uniform Rate.

Incidentally, while the Virginian hoped he would not have to say anything further in statements to newspapers, he asserted that the "evil consequences of the action taken by both the Federal Reserve Board and the Insurance of Deposits Corporation" might be "more appropriately treated at another time and place."

Meanwhile Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, joined the controversy and while he did not take issue with Senator Glass' contentions that the FDIC had acted illegally, contended that the requirement of uniform interest rates on insured deposits was "vital to the integrity of the system." Otherwise, he asserted, "banks may be lured into rash competition for deposits, using higher interest rates as bait in this unhealthy rivalry."

Contending that such competition spelled disaster for the State deposit guarantee systems, Senator Vandenberg argued that unless the FDIC could control the interest rates of the insured nonmember banks they would jeopardize banks in the reserve system which are under the rigid control of the reserve board.

Up to Counsel for FDIC.

"The FDIC lawyers will have to speak for themselves respecting the legal phases," the Michigan Republican asserted. "The control of interest rates is 'necessary'—indeed vital—to the effective exercise of all other FDIC powers. If the existing language does not legalistically suffice, it should be immediately and adequately amended by Congress next week."

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, who has been out of the city since the controversy started, explained that his agency was responsible for the order lowering nonmember bank deposit interest rates from 3 to 2½ per cent effective February 1. He added that the FDIC had acted on "implied authority" in the deposit insurance law to prevent discrimination and to grant equal rights to all members of the corporation.

"If our action should not have proper legal sanction," he asserted, "the entire responsibility rests upon this corporation as the Federal Re-

7(a) Dispute May Go Up To Roosevelt

U. S. Chamber Opposed to Majority Rule in Labor Bargaining.

New Deal Leaders Rally to Defense of Plan in Hot Fight.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Sentiment for a declaration favoring the majority rule labor principle in the revised recovery act began to crystallize yesterday among influential New Dealists.

Such a course would involve drastic revision of the section 7 (a) of NIRA to eliminate its ambiguities and give the force of congressional edict to the decision of the National Labor Relations Board in the Houde case, which gave the union with the most votes exclusive authority to represent workers in collective bargaining negotiations.

At the same time revamping of the recovery act by the new Congress along diametrically opposite lines was demanded by the United States Chamber of Commerce. It argued that "in any new legislation it should be made unmistakable that collective bargaining is bargaining with representatives of all groups of employes that desire to act through spokesmen, without the right of a minority group to deal collectively or the direct right of individual bargaining being precluded."

Interstate Limit.

Another recommendation of the chamber was that the reshaped recovery act should be limited to businesses engaged in or affecting competition in interstate commerce. That would strip NRA of its authority over tens of thousands of firms specializing in strictly intrastate business.

Members of the National Labor Relations Board and spokesmen for organized workers in NRA and on Capitol Hill, it was learned, hope to write the majority rule principle into the new act so the intention of Congress, as originally expressed in section 7(a) may be definitely stated.

It is by no means certain, however, that the majority rule advocates will prevail. Big business already has begun to exert pressure against such legislation. Even spokesmen for the American Federation of Labor, who would stand to benefit most, have withheld demand for inclusion of the majority rule idea in the altered act and have merely asked that 7(a) be renewed as is for fear they would get something worse should it be redrafted.

Fought by Employers.

Employers have fought the Houde decision tooth and nail lest it enable A. F. of L. affiliates to virtually wipe out of existence many company unions by polling more votes in elections conducted by the Labor Board in plants where authority to represent workers is contested.

With the majority rule fight nearing a showdown, President Roosevelt himself may have to decide whether 7(a) shall be left alone or in just what manner it shall be revised when submitted to Congress along with other new NRA legislation. Not since the controversy between the labor board and business generally flared several months ago has Mr. Roosevelt committed himself on 7(a).

Big business, it is understood, has another tussle on its hands at NRA. A proposal has developed there to remove from code authorities power to administer pacts. The plan would vest all administrative functions in the Government and transform the code authorities into advisory and obedience-seeking agencies.

Other Points in Bill.

Proponents of the scheme argued it would prevent large firms from controlling code authorities and thus being in a position to take advantage of their smaller competitors. Observers, however, believed the proposal never would materialize as the trend of NRA for months has been toward increasing rather than limiting the self-governing authority of business.

All existing NRA legislation should be permitted to lapse, the chamber held. Other points in the

New U. S. Policy Cuts 4,000,000 Off Relief Rolls

Unemployables to Lose Federal Funds; States Get Burden.

100% Work Aid Government Plan

Cabinet Today to Get Roosevelt's Public Works Program.

By Felix Bruner.

The Government is cutting its relief rolls 20 per cent through the removal of all persons classed as unemployable, Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, announced yesterday.

The burden of caring for unemployables, who include aged, infirm and all others who could not obtain jobs in normal times, will be exclusively that of the States, cities and counties, Hopkins said. He revealed that unemployables have for some time been gradually dropped from Federal relief rolls and that henceforth it will be the policy of the FERA to assist only employable persons and their families.

Hopkins' announcement followed a visit to the White House, where he was called for a conference with President Roosevelt. Also in the conference were Secretary Ickes, Secretary Morgenthau and Daniel W. Bell, acting Director of the Budget. The discussion had to do with completion of the President's relief and public works program, which will be presented for consideration of the entire Cabinet today.

4,000,000 to Lose Relief.

There were indications that the President wishes to eliminate as far as possible direct relief, and substitute jobs for all persons who can work. Direct relief would thus become exclusively the province of the States and local communities.

There are approximately 19,000,000 persons receiving relief from the Government. On the basis of the estimate made by Hopkins of the number of unemployables, this figure would be cut by nearly 4,000,000. Hopkins was noncommittal as to whether reduction in numbers would cut relief expenditures. He said it probably would result in more adequate relief for those on Government rolls.

If the Government program constitutes a 100 per cent, or a nearly 100 per cent work relief program, the per capita expenditure for relief would necessarily be increased because of the difference between the cost of direct relief and work relief. Hopkins estimated that work relief costs only 15 per cent more than direct relief. Other estimates have placed the difference in cost as high as 50 per cent.

Ickes for Expansion.

Secretary Ickes, in discussing the possible future of the Public Works Administration, advocated expansion of both the housing and the subsistence homestead programs. He added, however, that the terms of the new PWA policy were "something for the President to announce."

Ickes said that more than 9,000 PWA projects are now completed and that more are being rushed to completion.

"There has been some criticism," he said, "but I am perfectly willing to be criticized from now to the end of time for being too careful."

Ickes said that he planned a more decentralized PWA organization with more responsibility in the hands of local and State heads and not so much work being done in Washington.

"When we started I had no idea of the magnitude of the job," he said. "There can be no question that it has been effective."

The Secretary pointed to housing as one of the most effective solutions of unemployment problems and said he wanted the program extended.

"I have always been for housing," he said, "because of its social value, because of its effect on the durable goods markets, and because it puts to work craftsmen who have been the hardest hit.

"The subsistence homestead program also should be extended. All things considered, I think we have made a success there."

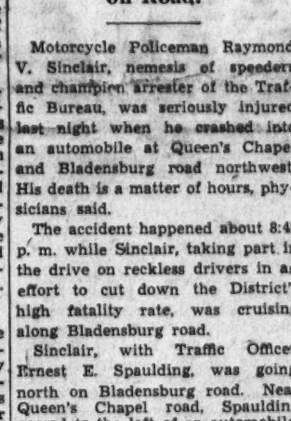
Near Death



RAYMOND V. SINCLAIR.

Sinclair Dying After Crashing Into Motor Car

Motorcycle of 'Champion Arrester' Hits Auto on Road.

Motorcycle Policeman Raymond V. Sinclair, nemesis of speeders and champion arrester of the Traffic Bureau, was seriously injured last night when he crashed into an automobile at Queen's Chapel and Bladensburg road northwest. His death is a matter of hours, physicians said.

The accident happened about 8:45 p. m. while Sinclair, taking part in the drive on reckless drivers in an effort to cut down the District's high fatality rate, was cruising along Bladensburg road.

Sinclair, with Traffic Officer Ernest E. Spaulding, was going north on Bladensburg road. Near Queen's Chapel road, Spaulding passed to the left of an automobile.

Collides With Car.

As Sinclair attempted to pass, the car made a left turn and Sinclair crashed into it. He was taken to the hospital in a laundry truck.

Sinclair was taken to Casualty Hospital. His wife and a priest were hastily summoned.

Doctors said Sinclair has a compound fracture of the skull and a crushed chest.

The driver of the car was George A. Nolte, 30, a paperhanger, of 50 Quincy place northeast. He was held for investigation.

Sinclair received his title of "world's champion arrester" in 1926, when he made 3,482 arrests in 12 months and obtained convictions in all but 13 cases. All were for minor traffic violations.

He was severely injured October 17, 1929, while chasing an automobile on New Hampshire avenue when his motorcycle skidded and he fell to the pavement at Rock Creek Church road. At that time he was unconscious in a hospital for five days.

Sinclair was made a patrolman on April 2, 1925, was mounted on a bicycle on August 1, 1927, and became a motorcycle policeman on October 16, 1927, when he was allowed $120 a year for the upkeep of the motorcycle that became the terror of Washington speeders.

His wife is Mrs. Margaret G. Sinclair. They have no children. They live at 5218 Illinois avenue northwest.

Price Fixing Is Held Illegal By U. S. Judge in Kansas City

'Fair Competition Destroyed,' Court Says in Ruling on Lumber Code Provisions; NRA May Appeal.

Kansas City, Dec. 27 (AP).—NRA code price fixing, even in transactions a part of interstate commerce, was held unconstitutional today by Federal District Judge Merrill E. Otis in a decision which NRA legal authorities indicated would be appealed.

Judge Otis denied the Government an injunction to restrain the Sutherland Lumber Co. from selling at prices below those fixed in the retail lumber code.

He ruled price fixing destroys fair competition and said therefore the President has no power to approve price fixing provisions in recovery codes. In a more sweeping pronouncement, the opinion stated:

"Congress has no power to fix prices even in transaction undoubtedly a part of interstate commerce."

NRA legal experts in Washington said no action would be taken until the case is studied further, but added they "wouldn't be surprised" if an appeal were taken.

The Sutherland Co., with headquarters here, operates lumber yards in Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa on a "cash-and-carry" basis.

The suit was based on the sale by the company's Oklahoma City yard of six squares of Oregon cedar shingles at $4.20 a square, against the code price of $4.45.

Girl Kills Sister, Takes Own Life

Christmas Family Reunion Broken by Tragedy.

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 27 (AP).—Tragedy entered a Christmas family reunion here today when Miss Christine Burroughs fired a pistol bullet into the head of her 14-year-old "favorite" sister, Clare, and then ended her own life with the same gun.

Members of the family heard a shot and, investigating, found the older sister dead on the floor, and the younger one in bed. Assuming that Clare somehow slept through the confusion, they did not at once discover she was dead. The bed-clothing had been carefully placed about her.

Members of the Burroughs family said the older girl suffered a nervous breakdown recently.

U. S. Auto Wrecks in 1934 Kill 36,000—One Every 15 Minutes

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 27 (AP).—At least 36,000 persons in the United States were killed in automobile accidents in 1934, year-end statistics of the Travelers Insurance Co. showed today.

The death and injury list for the year, the insurance company report said, marked the high point in destruction on streets and highways.

The record showed a person killed every 15 minutes and 1 injured every 31 seconds in automobile mishaps.

While the death rate showed an increase of 16 per cent over 1933, the statistics showed a decrease in the frequency of accidents.

Every section of the country reflected the increase in automobile deaths. The Middle Atlantic States, including New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, showed the slightest increase, however, a gain of less than 1 per cent.

The toll by States included:

Middle Atlantic—Approximately 6,500 killed. New York and New Jersey had fewer deaths than 1933.

New England—More than 2,000 killed, a 12 per cent increase. New Hampshire and Connecticut had fewer deaths than last year.

East North Central (Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin)—Nearly 8,500 killed; an increase of 16.4 per cent.

East South Central (Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi)—Nearly 2,600 killed; an increase of 34 per cent.

South Atlantic (Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and the District of Columbia)—Four thousand, nine hundred killed; an increase of 21 per cent. Delaware showed a decrease.

Pacific States—Three thousand, seven hundred killed; an indicated increase of more than 18 per cent.

Libby Holman Agrees to Take $7,000,000 Legacy for Baby

Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 27 (AP).—A representative of baby Christopher Smith Reynolds today declared his willingness to be content with a $7,000,000 share of his father's $25,000,000 tobacco fortune.

R. C. Vaughn, appointed "next friend" in the litigation over the late Smith Reynolds' millions for the infant son of Libby Holman, former Broadway blues singer and Reynolds' second wife, advised Forsyth superior court that he was agreeable to the distribution proposed by Reynolds' brother and sisters.

R. J. Reynolds, jr., the brother, and Mrs. Charles Babcock and Mrs. Henry W. Bagley, the sisters, proposed a distribution of $750,000 to Miss Holman, 37½ per cent of the remainder to Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d, Reynolds' daughter by his first marriage; a similar amount to themselves, and the residue to Christopher.

The sum received, they said, would be used for a charitable trust to Smith Reynolds.

Since the fortune is in securities its value fluctuates, but roughly the proposed distribution would give little Anne $9,000,000, a like amount to the brother and sisters jointly, and between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 to little Christopher.

Vaughn's answer said he was apprehensive of "long and tedious litigation" if all the questions raised in connection with disposal of the fortune were brought to final determination and that all things considered the wisest course seemed to be to accept the proposal.

Miss Holman, he advised the court, concurs in this opinion.

Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, daughter of a wealthy textile

Saito to Decree Naval Treaty's End Tomorrow

Formal Denunciation Will Terminate Agreement Dec. 31, 1936.

(Associated Press.)

Hirosi Saito, envoy of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, at noon tomorrow will tell the United States that the Washington Naval Treaty will be a dead document on the stroke of midnight, December 31, 1936.

Saito's long-expected and formal denunciation of the pact will be made to Secretary Hull. At about the hour Saito enters Hull's office, under present plans, Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, American spokesmen at the London naval talks, will be boarding a steamer for home, their fruitless mission done.

Pact End in Two Years.

Saito's official denunciation, repeated by other Japanese envoys in capitals of the remaining signatories to the pact, will consummate an act long predicted by Japan.

By notifying before December 31 of its intention to abrogate, Japan insures termination of the treaty two years hence. That date is the earliest of which notice of abrogation can be accepted.

While Japanese envoys in London, Paris and Rome are to notify the other treaty signatories, the United States, as custodian of the pact, also is required to inform the other powers officially. The State Department will undertake that duty in the near future.

Saito to Explain.

The framers of the Washington treaty wrote a new page in the history of naval affairs 12 years ago by definitely limiting the size and fighting efficiency of the sea powers' fleets.

Since the London naval treaty automatically expires on the same date, Ambassador Saito, through that sequence of events, will decree the end of all naval limitations.

Although Japan's attitude towards the treaty has been well publicized the ambassador is expected to issue a statement explaining the necessity for taking such drastic action and restating the Japanese objectives in naval affairs.

Saito, pending his epochal visit to the State Department, has declined to make any statements on the situation.

Japan Delegates Told To Weigh Offers

London, Dec. 27 (AP).—Naval and diplomatic circles tonight seemed convinced future British-Japanese naval discussions were unlikely to produce any compromise naval plan satisfactory to the three major sea powers—the United States, Britain and Japan.

As the Japanese unofficially advised the British that the Tokyo government will denounce the Washington treaty at Washington Saturday, it was revealed the Oriental delegates had been instructed to consider various British compromise suggestions.

An authoritative source, however, said the Japanese will maintain their demand for naval equality.

Justice Proctor Warns Bootleggers

No Excuse Now, He Says, in Sentencing Man.

Asserting there was no excuse for bootlegging in the District now, Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court yesterday warned he would deal more severely hereafter with purveyors of illicit liquors.

His admonition was issued when he sentenced Irving West, colored, who admitted he had three gallons of illegal liquor when policemen arrested him four months ago. In passing sentence, Justice Proctor took into consideration the four months West has already spent in jail, and gave him four more.

In his remarks to West, Justice Proctor intimated that in his opinion bootlegging is as prevalent in the District now as during the prohibition era. "I am going to treat these cases more seriously in the future," he said. "We are getting the same thing we had before repeal of the prohibition amendment. There is no excuse for bootlegging now, and this makes the offense all the more serious."

Mrs. Ulm Continues Search for Lost Flier

Honolulu, Dec. 27 (AP). — The schooner, Lanikai, chartered by Mrs. Charles T. P. Ulm, continued today the fruitless search for Ulm and two fellow Australian aviators, lost December 4, on a flight from Oakland, Calif.

Finding no trace of the plane, Star of Australia, or the missing men, at French Frigate Shoals, 550 miles northwest of Honolulu, the Lanikai departed for Layson Island.

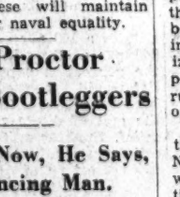
A Schenley IMPORTATION



DUBONNET
THE GREAT FRENCH APPETIZER

Between You and Me

Watch H. R. Tolley; New Deal Absentees; Sea Treaty; White House Strategy.

By Raymond Clapper

The man to watch in AAA is H. R. Tolley, director of the program planning division. His rise to influence there is the phenomenon of the year. He is a rival of Dr. Rex Tugwell and there is some coolness between them. His influence is increasing and Chester Davis, administrator of AAA, leans o. him heavily for advice. This team, Davis the harmonizer and executive, and Tolley the planner, is pretty much running AAA now. Tolley keeps out of the spotlight which is why he has been able to develop inside strength without being shot at from the outside.

He is 45 years old, short, rolypoly. He has the advantage of long experience in the Department of Agriculture, where he served 15 years, winding up as assistant chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in 1928. In 1930 he became professor of agricultural economics at the University of California and a director of the Giannini Foundation for agricultural study on the Pacific Coast. This was his big meal ticket. He has been on leave from that work since the AAA started. The only question of his continuing here is whether he will be able to retain his toehold in the foundation without returning to active work.

While Secretary Wallace and Dr. Tugwell bore the brunt of the attack on the AAA mendments last winter, it was Tolley in the background who insisted upon pushing them. They would extend AAA control over small fruits and specialty crops. Tolley, with his interest in California where such crops dominate, was determined to get action. He failed but he is pressing again this year.

Though he and Tugwell keep at some distance from each other, they are not so far apart as to ideas, except that Tolley is a little more inclined to maneuver and trim a corner off if it will get his basic idea through. That has given some processors the idea that he is not as hard as Tugwell, but it is because he operates a little different and they just think he is easy. Actually he is one of the strongest advocates of grading and full descriptive labeling in AAA. Some critics call him an agricultural Fascist. That may be going too far, but he's pretty tough.

President Roosevelt is slaving through the last minute preparations for his annual message without the help of a number of key men in the New Deal. The absentees include:

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who remained in Houston, Tex., after Christmas, so that his fellow townsmen could celebrate Jesse H. Jones Day yesterday. They unveiled his bust—the only bust Big Jesse ever had any personal connection with—in the public library. Known around the RFC as "the Emperor Jones" because he so completely dominates that huge lending organization, he is even more important in Houston. He not only runs the place, he practically owns it.

Donald R. Richberg, director of the executive council and so-called No. 2 man in the Administration, who has been in bed with intestinal flu. With Mrs. Richberg as his nurse, he left for Cleveland last night to make a speech, against her advice.

James H. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, who is away on a Christmas week yacht trip.

Postmaster General Farley, who is in New York lining up his forces for the meeting of the Legislature next week and, so it is gossiped here, preparing to relinquish the State Democratic chairmanship a little later, as a step preparatory to being a candidate for Governor in 1936.

To the disappointment of some State Department attaches who were making plans for a long New Year's week-end, Japan has decided to present her formal denunciation of the Washington Naval Treaty to Secretary Hull tomorrow morning. That makes a working day out of it.

Japan apparently elected Saturday morning as the time to deliver this blow at naval limitation with an eye on the Sunday morning newspapers. She is expected to make public at the same time a statement of her case designed to placate American opinion and to attempt to set the record straight from Tokyo's point of view. At least there will be such a Japanese explanation if the home government agrees with the view of its Washington embassy on that point.

Japan is anxious to erase the impression that she is out to wreck naval limitation or is itching for a building race. Japanese diplomats have gone to considerable lengths in recent weeks to break down that impression and to hammer in the point that Japan instead wishes to seek new limitation at a lower level but on a basis of equality.

Two reasons lie behind Japanese policy. One is that Japan wants to pull down the general level of naval strength so that she will be insured a free hand in the Far East. The other is that prestige is important to strengthen her in dealing with China and that she will swing more weight if she stands in the eyes of Asia on a parity with the United States and Britain in naval ratio, instead of being rated as a second-class power. It is a matter of national pride and Japan will insist upon that. She will, on the basis of that condition, continue to tell the world that she is ready to negotiate for an agreement to replace the Washington Treaty which expires in two years.

Democratic leaders in Congress are a little disappointed that President Roosevelt is not taking them more into his confidence. Vice President Garner spent an hour or so in conference at the White House on his return from Texas but nothing happened except that Mr. Roosevelt asked him about fishing and was very affable. Senator Pat Harrison, one of the party wheelhorses in the Senate, had the same trouble. President Roosevelt is fond of using surprise strategy, of tossing proposals without warning into the lap of Congress. He likes to act suddenly so that the opposition will not have time to form its lines. The only disadvantage is that his own leaders have not time to form any lines either, but maybe he knows that there are few secrets on Capitol Hill and that the best place to keep a secret is in the White House itself.

One Government official comes back from a trip through the moonshine country of Kentucky convinced that times are changing. He knew those counties in the days when the customer always laid a quarter on a stump and retired to a discreet distance with his tongue hanging out to wait for his mountain dew to appear. Robinson, Here Today, to Start Senate Set-up

McNary Seeks Conference; Byrns Holds White House Parley.

By Robert C. Albright.

Organization machinery in both houses of Congress will swing into action today, as Democratic leaders of House and Senate, instructions in hand, confer on routine matters of program and committee alignments of Republican colleagues.

Return of Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, will set the wheels in motion. Foundation for preliminary talks was laid yesterday, when Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, heir apparent to the Speakership, led the Congressional trek to the White House.

What was left of Republican opposition maintained discreet silence, pending Robinson's return and a threatened scaling down of Republican representation on both House and Senate committees, proportionate with minority voting strength.

McNary to Confer.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary will seek a conference with the Arkansan as soon as he arrives. He will not fight a proposed 25 per cent reduction in Republican membership on Senate committees, so long as each Republican gets two major committee assignments. House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell is opposing any such slash in the lower chamber.

The President presumably will personally deliver his message to massed House and Senate members next Friday, the second day of the session. A question mark still hovered over the message, although parts of the text were discussed yesterday with Representative Byrns, whose White House visit supplied first Administration recognition of his claims to the Speakership.

The message is expected to glance backward, as well as forward, comparing conditions today with the first lean days of the Administration. Conjecturing legislators, speculating in the dark for the most part, anticipate a lack of emphasis on new legislation, and resumption later on on the Administration's "surprise" legislative tactics of last session. Such strategy would give the White House a positive advantage, discouraging advance formation of opposition blocs.

Byrns Noncommittal.

Leaving the White House, Representative Byrns disclosed that the conference there concerned in a very general way some parts of the President's message and program. He declined to reveal their nature or the time of delivery, which he said would depend on how early Congress gets organized. He likewise was noncommittal on the time of adjournment.

"Certainly I'm not bold enough to say at this time how long the session will last," he said laughing.

Byrns is taking no hand in the House floor leadership contest, he insists. Just now Representative William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, is in a brisk four-cornered race for the honor with Representatives James M. Mead and John J. O'Connor, of New York, and Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts.

"Any of them would please me," said Byrns.

Robinson will lose no time today in contacting congressional Democratic leaders, and a trip to the White House is slated soon after his arrival. Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Senate Democratic whip, will confer with the leader this afternoon, he said yesterday. Monday Senate Democratic policy and steering committees will map organization plans. This later conference will include a discussion of program, probably speeding right of way for such domestic matters as are covered in the President's program.

Republicans in both houses concede they want a peep at the President's message before critically commenting on any phase of the program. They are concerned immediately with how their committee organization will shape up under the new Democratic apportionment ratios. In the Senate, committee realignment hinges on Robinson's return.

Leader Reconciled.

Proposed reapportionment was received philosophically by Senator McNary yesterday. It is only "fair," and customary, he said, that Democrats be assigned to committees in ratio to their voting strength. Under the present arrangement, some Democrats would be deprived of the two major committee assignments to which they are entitled, and Republicans would have as many as three. The ratio worked out by Robinson is expected to call for representation on the basis of 16 to 6 on most committees, instead of the 14 to 8, that now prevails. In the House Minority Leader Snell is insisting Republican representation on Ways and Means, Appropriations and Rules Committees be left undisturbed.

Whether Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., of Wisconsin, who returns to the Senate under a new "Progressive" label, is retained as a Republican committee assignment, is up to the Senate Republican Committee on Committees. Republican leaders said La Follette probably will be claimed again by the G. O. P.

Black Drafting Health Bill

A health insurance bill to provide medical attention for the indigent will be introduced by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, when Congress convenes.

Black said yesterday he was drafting the bill, the Associated Press reports, as a supplement to the Administration's program for social legislation. The medical service would be financed by contributions from all wage and salary earners.

"Millions of people are not receiving adequate medical and hospital treatment," Black said. "In many cases it is because they are too proud to call the doctor when they have nothing to pay him.

"Also many trained nurses are on relief rolls."

Meantime, among other pre-Congress activities on the "Hill," Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, charged that "Wall street" was behind the move to increase the number of House petitioners necessary to force a bill out of committee.

The motive, Lemke contended, was to forestall passage of the Frazier-Lemke bill to refinance farm indebtedness at low rates of interest.

Bills not reported out of committee now may be brought before the House for action provided 145 members sign a petition for their removal. There have been reports that some Democratic leaders had in mind increasing the number of necessary signatures to 218, a majority of the membership.

"This is perpetuating gag rule with a vengeance," Lemke said.

Grandparents Ask Court for Custody Of Cusack Boys

Cuero, Tex., Dec. 27 (AP).—Charles Cusack's contest with his estranged wife over custody of their children became more complicated today when Mrs. Cusack's parents sued for custody of three young boys.

In their petition Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Hamilton asked custody on ground that "recriminatory and irreconcilable acts of Mr. and Mrs. Cusack were dangerously injurious to the children." Hamilton said "neither parent is a suitable custodian of the children."

District Judge J. P. Pool issued an injunction restraining Cusack and his wife from taking any action while the suit is pending.

Cusack, Los Angeles broker, accompanied by an attorney and a Los Angeles County deputy sheriff, came here today from San Antonio, and Sheriff G. A. Markowsky served him with papers in the suit. Without seeing his wife, Cusack returned to San Antonio.

Mrs. Cusack has kept the children under guard since bringing them to her parents' home from Beverly Hills, Calif., in violation of a California court order.

Michigan Boy, 3, Reported Kidnaped

State Police Begin Hunt for Laborer's Child.

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 27 (AP).—State police and the authorities of a half-dozen northwestern Michigan counties and municipalities started a search late today for 3-year-old Warren Morris, reported kidnaped from in front of his home here.

The child, the son of Walter Morris, a factory worker, was playing in front of his home here at the time he was carried away. Lucy Morin, a maid in a house across the street, told police she saw a small coupe containing two men stop in front of the Morris house.

She said one of the men got out of the car, picked up the screaming child and carried him into the coupe, which then drove away swiftly.

Alabamans Organize To Fight Prohibition

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 27 (AP).—Advocates of repeal of Alabama's bone dry prohibition laws today named State Senator J. Sanford Mullins, Alexander City, chairman of the League for Prohibition Repeal, which they formed to lead the campaign for a change in dry laws expected early next year.

A referendum on repeal of the present laws, legalization of wines, beer and liquors under State control, is regarded as virtually certain to be ordered by the Legislature, which meets January 8 at Montgomery.

Marchesa Wins Divorce.

Reno, Nev., Dec. 27 (AP).—The Marchesa Carignani, formerly Mary Denman Clark, St. Louis social registerite, divorced Marchese Giovanni Carignani, Italian nobleman, today. She charged extreme cruelty. Married June 16, 1926, in Naples, they have two children.

2 Officers Charged With Candy Theft While in Uniform

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Sergt. Charles Kenny, walking down Broome street early today, saw Patrolman Joseph Colombo and John Lewan apparently investigating a parked car. He hurried up and asked if he could be of assistance.

According to his official report, his two brother officers didn't seem at all anxious for help. He peered into the rear of the car and saw that it was filled with boxes of candy. He looked at the door of the candy store across the street and saw that it had been forced.

He took his brother officers reluctantly but firmly by the elbows and led them around to the station house, where they were booked on burglary charges. Both protested their innocence.

'24 Amendment On Child Labor Dead, Says Bar

Special Committee Insists Redraft Is Necessitated by Lapse of Time.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—A special committee of the American Bar Association, appointed to oppose ratification of the child labor amendment, held today the proposal could not be "resurrected and validly ratified."

More than a reasonable length of time for ratification, the committee said, long since has elapsed.

In a foreword to the committee's report, Scott M. Loftin, president, stated the opposition of the bar association to the proposed amendment.

"The association is opposing the proposed amendment, but it is in no sense opposed to effectively protecting and regulating the employment of children," he said.

Held "State Business."

"• • • the association holds that this matter is peculiarly the business of the States; that the majority of them have already dealt efficiently with the problem; that the others, with a few exceptions, have made advances in the right direction; and that a State's solution of its problem which will take into consideration local conditions will unquestionably be more satisfactory and workable than a general uniform plan imposed by a central bureau."

After recalling the child labor amendment was first proposed to the States by Congress on June 2, 1924, the committee said:

"The primary inquiry is whether, after the lapse of more than ten years and six months since its proposal . . . this proposed amendment can be held to be still pending for ratification and also whether a State Legislature may, after an interval of many years, now withdraw or cancel a due rejection by a prior Legislature and thereupon validly ratify the amendment."

The shortest period of ratification, the committee said, was nine months and 13 days in the case of the Twelfth Amendment, and the longest yet taken was three years, six months, in the case of the Sixteenth (income tax.)

Court Opinion Cited.

By June, 1931, the report said, the proposed child labor amendment had been ratified by six legislatures and rejected in 38 States by one or both branches of the legislature.

The committee also recalled that Congress, in proposing the prohibition amendment in 1917, fixed a time-limit of seven years, but that an effort to do this in the proposed child labor amendment was defeated.

In addition, the committee cited a Supreme Court opinion (Dillon vs. Gloss, 1921) which concluded "ratification must be within some reasonable time after proposal."

In 1933, the committee said, attempts were started anew to resurrect the proposed amendment and have it ratified.

"Long Interval" Emphasized.

"It is understood," the committee added, "that it will be reintroduced by its proponents in 20-odd State Legislatures that have not ratified and that will convene in 1935.

"It is the opinion of the special committee that by January 2, 1933—that is, eight years and seven months after the amendment had been proposed by Congress to the State Legislatures—more than a reasonable time had elapsed since June 2, 1924, and that after such a long interval it could not be resurrected and validly ratified by State Legislatures unless a second time were proposed by Congress.

"The special committee is further of the opinion that a State Legislature which has duly rejected a proposed amendment, and particularly so when it has duly certified such action of rejection to the Secretary of State of the United States, can not • • • validly annul, withdraw or revoke its prior rejection."

Dulin & Martin Co. To Change Locale

Dulin & Martin Co., one of the oldest business establishments in Washington, will be located at 1106 G street northwest early next year. This was announced yesterday after the close of negotiations whereby the company has leased the five-story-and-basement, brick and stone building at this address for a term of five years.

The building is being vacated by Remington-Rand, Inc., who will move into its new location at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and F streets northwest. Space now occupied by Dulin & Martin Co. in the La Salle Building, southwest corner of Connecticut avenue and L streets northwest, will be taken by the planning and research division of the National Recovery Administration.

Negotiations incidental to the Dulin & Martin Co. lease were conducted by Weaver Bros., Inc., in conjunction with the office of Theodore M. Judd. Mr. Judd represented the owners of the G street property, Darwin E. and Charles S. Gardner, of Boston and New York.

1,200 Newspapers Are Called To Decide NRA Code Case

San Francisco Call-Bulletin's Dismissal Employe Is Considered Grave Issue by Authorities.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—An immediate convention of 1,200 newspapers to consider the National Labor Relations Board action in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin case "as it affects their continuance" under the daily newspaper code, was announced tonight by Howard Davis, chairman of the Publishers National Code committee.

Davis, who also is president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, issued his statement after the Labor Board at Washington asked the NRA compliance division to remove the Call-Bulletin's Blue Eagle for failing to heed the board's order for reinstatement of Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man.

The board's action was termed by Davis "an attempt to usurp power over the code for the daily newspaper publishing business, which is specifically prohibited" by provisions giving the Newspaper Industrial Board jurisdiction over all labor disputes.

"It is regarded by the six associations of daily newspaper publishers which cooperated in the preparation and submission of the code as a violation of the code," his statement continued.

"Representatives of these associations met in New York on December 17 and 18 to consider the issue raised by the National Labor Relations Board. After a thorough discussion, they submitted their views in writing to NRA.

"Under instructions from these associations a convention of the 1,200 daily newspapers which have assented to the code will be called immediately to consider the situation as it affects their continuance under the code.

"The issue raised by the National Labor Relations Board," he said, "has precipitated the gravest problem with which the press of this country has yet been confronted."

The Labor Relations Board yesterday asked NRA's compliance division to remove the San Francisco Call-Bulletin's Blue Eagle for failing to reinstate Dean S. Jennings, a rewrite man.

Jennings Makes Complaint.

Jennings complained to the board he had been forced to resign because of his activity with the American Newspaper Guild.

The board upheld Jennings' contention, over the argument of Donald R. Richberg, director of the Emergency Council, that the Labor Board lacked jurisdiction. Richberg and Blackwell Smith, NRA general counsel, maintained, with the Call-Bulletin, that the complaint should have been heard by the Newspaper Industrial Board.

The paper did not present any testimony regarding the circumstances of Jennings' departure from his job, confining its case to its claim that the Labor Board had no jurisdiction.

"In a letter transmitting the case for action by the compliance division," the board's announcement said, "the board pointed out that the newspaper had been afforded ten days in which to notify the board that reinstatement had been offered Dean S. Jennings, the editorial employe who was the complainant in the case, or that the newspaper desired to submit evidence on the merits of the case.

"The letter states that the Call-Bulletin had failed to avail itself of either of the opportunities so afforded it, and concludes with the following recommendation:

"'By reason of these failures and of the violations found, the matter is referred to you with the recommendation of this board that the Blue Eagle be removed.'"

Delegates from the American Newspaper Guild who walked out of an NRA hearing on hours, wages and working conditions on December 5, will be given another opportunity to present data at a hearing here on January 17, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Gustave Peck, assistant to the administrative officer on employment problems, has been designated to represent the administrative officer.

The Guild delegates left the hearing on December 5 as a protest against the setting aside of an order that the San Francisco Call-Bulletin should reemploy Dean S. Jennings, a former rewrite man.

700 Ford Dealers Get Preview Here Of Model for 1935

Some 700 dealers, subdealers and associate dealers gathered yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, and learned at first hand what Henry Ford will contributed to the automobile world in 1935. The new model will be shown to the public at the hotel Saturday.

The dealers saw a semistreamlined body with a V-8 engine on which two important changes had been made. The body lines are distinctly modern and depart definitely from anything designed for Ford in the past.

The body is wider, the wheels are smaller, tires larger and the seats roomier. A "center poise" ride is promised by new engineering developments, and safety glass is standard for wind shields, doors and windows. The whole car is some 8 inches longer than previous models. The fenders are much deeper, highly crowned and with sweeping skirts.

The front spring is located 4 inches in front of the axle, distributing passenger weight toward the center. The engine is moved 8 inches ahead to center its weight on the axle. Major engine improvments are a new system of directed flow crankcase ventilation and the use of aircraft type copper-lead floating connecting rod bearings.

State Witnesses In Hauptmann Trial Examined

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh Have Conferred With Prosecutors.

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 27 (AP).—Attorney General David T. Wilentz's job of seeing that his five assistants, as well as former Judge George K. Large, special assistant attorney general, are familiar with the testimony of State witnesses will keep prosecution officials busy until the eve of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial, set for January 2, it was learned today.

Albert S. Osborn and his son, Albert D. Osborn, handwriting experts, who will testify the ransom notes in the Lindbergh kidnaping were written by Hauptmann, were in Trenton today and explained for the benefit of Wilentz's assistants their reasons for assigning the writing of the notes to the German carpenter who is charged with the murder of the Lindbergh infant.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh already have been examined on their testimony, it was learned. It is still problematical, though, whether Mrs. Lindbergh will be asked to testify. The time and place of Betty Gow's examination still were withheld.

While counsel for the Hunterdon County Board of Freeholders was in Trenton today conferring with Wilentz and Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who will preside at the trial, on the action of Sheriff John H. Curtiss in accepting money from newspapermen for their seats at the trial next week, Curtiss issued a statement defending his action.

"All contributions made to this office by newpapermen were voluntary," he said. "Some time ago I consulted with several of them and it was generally agreed that such contributions were in order, to defer the extraordinary expenses incurred in the Hauptmann trial."

The sheriff said he would welcome any investigation of his action and at the proper time will turn over any balance of the money, remaining after expenses have been paid, to the board of freeholders.

Curtis Denies Part In Hauptmann Defense

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—John Hughes Curtis today denied any connection with the defense of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Hauptmann's trial is to be held in the same courtroom in which Curtis was convicted by a New Jersey jury on a charging of knowing the kidnapers of the Lindberg baby and withholding this information from the police.

Foreign Consul Is Called Spy In Soviet 'Plot'

Red Press Denounces Program of Terrorism, Accuses Trotzky.

Moscow, Dec. 27 (AP).—Espionage against the Soviet regime was charged in the Soviet press today as a consequence of the linking of the activities of an underground terroristic organization and an unidentified foreign consul.

Bitter comment met publication of the alleged confession of Leonid Nicolaieff, accused assassin of Sergei Kiroff, in which he told of his negotiations with the alien official.

The government, acting swiftly to bring Nicolaieff and 13 associates to trial, charged the assassination of Kiroff was but the opening move in a sinister plot against other high Soviet officials, including Joseph Stalin.

The plot, it said, was organized with the aid of Leon Trotzky, exiled former Communist leader, and was to have been followed by "the intervention of capitalistic powers."

Trotzky, the government asserted, was implicated in the movement by Nicolaieff's confession.

The confession attributed to the accused assassin said he had assured the consul, whose identification was deleted from the published version, of his willingness to convey to him "information about what was going on in the Soviet Union."

"Further I asked the consul," Nicolaieff was quoted as saying, "to give us material aid, while I told him that the money we received would be returned as soon as our financial affairs changed."

The purported confession related that the consul had advanced 5,000 rubles and offered to establish connections with Trotzky if the underground group would give him a letter to be forwarded.

The newspaper Izvestia said the activities of the terroristic band could have had only the effect of "giving new hope to interventionists."

Pravda asserted "the mouths of the cannon of imperialistic enemies are directed toward us. From capitalistic darkness comes the stench which Kiroff's murderers breathed."

Government officials quoted Nicolaieff as saying, "I thought our shot must be the signal for action against the party and against the Soviet government. I had to show the murder of Kiroff as an independent act in order to hide the participation of the Zinovieffists in it."

Gregory Zinovieff and Leo Kamaneff, both high ranking Soviet officials at one time, were not included among the 14 who were turned over to the military collegium of the supreme court for trial. It was understood they were under arrest and faced deportation for the part they allegedly played in the plot.

France Would Refuse To Extradite Trotzky

Paris, Dec. 27 (AP).—As long as he behaves himself, Leon Trotzky, exiled former Communist leader, is assured of French shelter from the Soviet regime's stern campaign against its enemies.

In the face of reports from Moscow that the once-powerful Soviet official had been implicated in the plot to assassinate Sergei Kiroff, French authorities said they regarded Trotzky as the type of political exile to which France always has given refuge.

No complaint against Trotzky has been received from Moscow, it was said, but officials added that even if he were charged with a political crime, his extradition would not be allowed.

The whereabouts of the former red commissar for foreign affairs and war remained secret. He was said to be living "a long distance from Paris." Secret service men were said to guard him night and day both for his own protection and as a precaution against his engaging in any undesirable activities in this country.

(At the time Trotzky's presence in France was disclosed last spring following a police raid in Barbizon. Accusations were made that he was attempting to organize communistic activities in Paris.)

The French government said it had been informed by the Soviet Embassy that Trotzky was regarded as a private person and "not a Soviet citizen."

It represented the Soviet mission as expressing the opinion that no instructions would be sent from Moscow seeking Trotzky's extradition or even his deportation.

Reports from Warsaw, Poland, were that Joseph Stalin, Trotzky's political enemy and one of those allegedly marked for assassination in the terroristic plot, would ask France for his expulsion.

Inquest Charges Boxer Slew Bride of 30 Hours

Wichita, Kans., Dec. 27 (AP).—Chester Gideon, 22, boxer, was accused by a coroner's jury today of killing his bigamous bride of 30 hours, Opal Crapo Gideon.

The jury said Mrs. Gideon died Tuesday night "from a bullet fired from a gun held in the hand of Chester Gideon." Gideon testified his wife committed suicide.

Far Westerner Enters Contest To Lead Floor

California Delegation Plans to Propose Lea for House Post.

(Associated Press.)

A Far Westerner was projected yesterday into the race for the House Democratic floor leadership, bringing to nine the number of candidates for the second highest post in that branch of Congress.

Representative Stubbs, of California, said members from his State "expect" to propose Representative Lea, another Californian, for the job.

Supporters of Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, claimed the announcement bolstered their candidate. Backers of Representative O'Connor, of New York, held that it would have little actual effect on the outcome.

Bankhead Backed.

At the same time, the Oklahoma delegation dean, Representative Johnson, informed reporters all eight Democrats from his State would support Bankhead. He had contacted all members but Representative Gassaway, he asserted, and expected that Gassaway would vote with the others.

Bankhead men based their cheerful predictions on the argument that he could expect more than 100 of the 322 Democratic ballots on the first roll call in the party caucus January 2. Consequently, they said, other members uncertain of their support would be tempted to throw their strength to him.

O'Connor Hopes.

O'Connor boosters, however, argued that delegations now behind many other candidates would switch to him after the first vote, that O'Connor had promises of votes from California, Lea's State; from Illinois, where Representative Sabath is a candidate; from Indiana, where Greenwood seeks the post and from New England, where McCormack, of Massachusetts, is after support.

In his announcement for Lea, Stubbs said that "of the two positions of Speaker and leader, one should go to the South and the other to the West or North." Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, will be the Speaker, Stubbs argued, so the West also should have its "background and viewpoint reflected" in program-shaping conferences.

Lea has been in Congress 18 years.

Wallace Names 1934 Tea-Mates As U. S. Tasters

Strong Squad Awaits First Joust of Year With Pekoe and Oolong.

In spite of war clouds over Europe and the Orient, the rising tide of communism, new attacks against NRA and the Nation-wide crime problem, the United States Government yesterday took time to fulfill an annual tradition—appointment of its official board of tea tasters.

With Secretary of Agriculture Wallace doing the selecting in behalf of Uncle Sam, who had just stepped out for a cup of coffee, six of the seven members of the 1934 squad were placed on the 1935 All-American Tea Team.

"Pekoe" Stillman, of Chicago, was replaced by a fellow townsman, Walter Hellyer, despite the fact the former did nice work during 1934. The Agriculture Department hastened to explain that the change resulted not from faulty open-field guzzling but because Stillman's term was up.

Team Gets New Blood.

The tea tasters' team has to have fresh blood regularly. As Dr. W. G. Campbell, chief of the department's Food and Drug Administration, said:

"We strive to replace one or two members each year."

Taster Hellyer and his six holdover tea-mates will assemble in New York next month and get down to cases. Meaning that they'll brew samples of tea which will serve as import standards. With studious care they will prepare a black tea sample, a black Japan tea sample, a green tea sample, and so on.

It may take several of these 4 o'clock English episodes to arrive at the respective conclusions, but, when the job is finally done, exporters of China, Japan, India, Formosa, Russia and other lands will have something to shoot at.

Tea Tastes Test.

Samples of each standard will be distributed at each port of entry and woe unto the gentleman who tries to unload even a single leaf of oolong that does not measure up in purity and taste. Port tasters will make the tests; that is to say, tea tasters at ports. (Wine has nothing to do with it).

Oh, yes, the 1935 tea team:

Edward Bransten, San Francisco; A. P. Irwin, Philadelphia; John W. Vaux, Seattle; J. H. Swenarton and Charles F. Hutchinson, New York; Robert A. Lewis, Boston, and Mr. Hellyer.

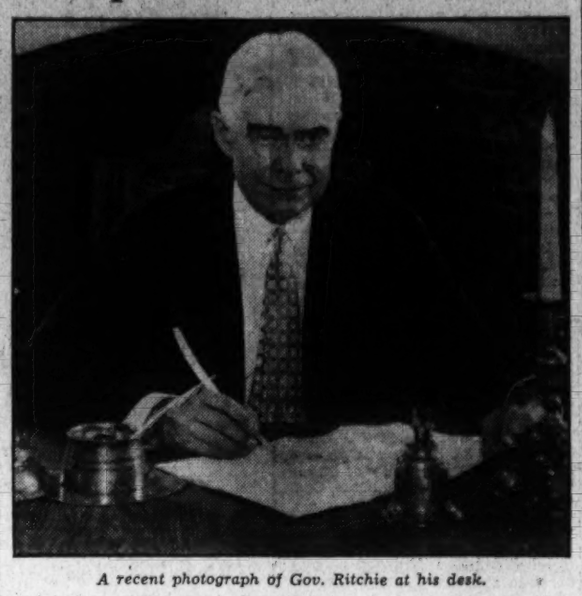
The board represents all phases of the tea trade and each of its members positively can detect a flaw in a leaf at 20 paces. And when they seat themselves around a table and launch upon a professional bender, that's a tea party that is a tea party.

14 Houses Given Away By Winston Churchill

London, Dec. 27 (AP).—Winston Churchill played the part of Santa Claus tardily, but effectively, today.

The former chancellor of the exchequer presented 14 houses he owns in the tiny fishing village of Carlough, County Antrim, to the tenants occupying them. All the occupants are working people, some without employment.

Ritchie to Keep Reins of Party Despite Defeat, Practice Law



A recent photograph of Gov. Ritchie at his desk.

Confers With Aids on Program for Legislature Session Beginning January 2; to Re-enter Firm of Boyhood Associates.

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who will retire from office January 9 after 15 years as Maryland's chief executive, intends to retain his hold on the Democratic Party organization of the State, it was authoritatively revealed yesterday.

Maryland's Governor has decided to return to the practice of law, his first love, when he turns the reins of State government over to Governor-elect Harry W. Nice in a colorful ceremony in the historic Annapolis State House. He will reenter his former law firm, consisting of partners who were boyhood friends.

Mr. Ritchie already has been in consultation with his lieutenants as to the course the party should pursue in the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

Despite his defeat by the small margin of about 6,000 votes, Gov. Ritchie remains the strongest Democrat in Maryland in the view of competent observers. Although he has no patronage to offer, the Governor, it is contended, will be able in the months to come to exercise more influence within his party than any other man.

Is Unexcelled as Strategist.

Mr. Ritchie has a keen interest in practical politics. For 15 years it has been the only interest he has had. As a strategist he is regarded as unexcelled. Consequently his unseen hand will be behind many of the political moves within the next year in Maryland.

The Governor will be confronted by other aspirants for the State leadership of the party. One will be Senator Millard E. Tydings, who will have control of Federal patronage for Maryland. Another will be Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, who has an organization of his own in that city.

Senator Tydings, however, is in the Philippine Islands and someone must take charge of the party situation resulting from the meeting of the Legislature next Thursday. Mr. Jackson will be on hand at Annapolis, but William Curran and Robert B. Ennis, the two dominant Baltimore leaders, are expected to be behind Gov. Ritchie's plans.

The most immediate problem before the party is the selection of a president of the Senate for the next four years and a speaker of the House of Delegates. The president of the Senate suceeeds to the Governorship in the event the chief executive resigns or dies. Walter J. Mitchell, president of the Senate in the last Legislature, recently was elevated to the Southern Maryland circuit bench.

A host of aspirants for the presidency of the Senate have cropped up but Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, seems to have the lead. During the last four years he was the Democratic floor leader in the Senate and has a strong following in several counties besides his own. State Senator Joseph L. Donovan, of Howard County, also is in the race.

It is customary in Maryland to select the Speaker of the House from the Baltimore delegation if the president of the Senate comes from the counties. The selection of the Speaker therefore would appear to rest with Mr. Curran and Mr. Ennis.

Another matter on which Gov. Ritchie's advice will be sought will be the selection of a State Treasurer, who is elected by a joint session of House and Senate. This official will be a Democrat, since that party controls the Legislature. He will give the Democrats control of the Board of Public Works.

Won Prominence as Lawyer.

In the practice of law the Governor's partners will be Stuart S. Janney, Frank B. Ober and Robert W. Williams. Mr. Janney and the Governor have been as inseparable as brothers since their student days at Johns Hopkins University. In 1903 they formed a law partnership which lasted until 1920. They went to Europe together last summer on the first vacation the Governor had in 15 years.

Mr. Ritchie won the prominence which brought him the Governorship of Maryland by his legal ability. He was the first people's counsel of the Maryland Public Service Commission and succeeded not only in defeating a petition by the Baltimore Gas Co. for increased rates, but presented such a case that the commission ordered a rate reduction.

As a result of this victory, the Democrats nominated Mr. Ritchie for attorney general of the State in 1915 and he was elected. During the latter part of the World War, Mr. Ritchie served as counsel to the War Industries Board of which Bernard M. Baruch was chairman. He was elected Governor in 1919 and retired from the practice of law when he assumed the office.

The Governor plans after January 9 to keep bachelor quarters in Baltimore, taking with him Emma, who has been the colored housekeeper in the executive mansion since 1920. She has been a servant in the Ritchie family for many years, going to the mansion with the Governor and his mother. According to Emma, the Governor could not get along without her.

Boy May Ask Court's Permit To Be a Rabbi

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 27 (AP).—Abraham Orbach, 15, of New York, is ready to fight in court for his right to study to be a rabbi.

Back at his studies in the Rabbinical Seminary of America after a few hours spent in jail last night as a runaway, the youth told reporters:

"I would rather be a rabbi than anything else in the world. I ran away from home so I could study for this. Maybe I will fight this out in court if father comes here to take me."

His father, Samuel Orbach, had asked police to arrest him last night. The boy, who came here three weeks ago on borrowed funds, was released to Rabbi S. M. Zambrowski, seminary registrar, who told police he would be responsible.

Today the father, who wanted Abraham to attend a trade school, told reporters in a long-distance conversation:

"The boy must be delivered to my house at once. I don't care about anything else. What I want him to do is my business. I am the father. A rabbi is not a good thing. If I were a healthy man, I would come to Cleveland and get him myself."

Rabbi Zambrowski described Abraham as a "brilliant student," and was silent as to the seminary's future action. It was reported, however, that negotiations were under way to obtain the father's consent for the boy to remain here.

Science Likens Radio Station To Man's Body

Phone Switchboard Theory Dropped in Favor of New Finding.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27 (AP). — Your body works like a radio broadcasting system, with the central sending station in your brain and spinal cord and each muscle "tuned" to received messages only on a certain "wavelength band" different from every other muscle.

Though the brain does not actually send out radio waves, the idea of a broadcasting system is the newest and best way of explaining how the brain controls the body, Prof. Paul Weiss of the University of Chicago told the American Association for the Advancement of Science today. It supplants the old idea that the nervous system operates like a telephone switchboard.

For example, when you start to walk out of a room, a whole set of orders to different muscles is flashed from the brain, but your hand muscles are "tuned" to pick up only the orders to open the door, while your leg muscles pick up only the command to start walking.

The nerves in each muscle are the "receiving sets" and pick up only the orders intended for that muscle. The nerves in the hands select out only messages for the hands, like orders to pick up a glass, to write or to punch someone.

Just how the orders from the brain are actually transmitted is not known, though many scientists believe it may be by some sort of tiny electric current.

Prof. Weiss demonstrated that you can take a leg from a salamander, transplant it to another salamander so he has five legs, connect up the nerves of the transplanted leg to the new body, and the fifth leg will work exactly like the others. This is because its nerves are "tuned" for leg messages and receive them just as well from the new salamander's brain as from the original salamander.

Sinclair Is 'Through,' Sen. Pittman Asserts

The opinion that Upton Sinclair, former Socialist, who was beaten as the Democratic nominee for Governor of California in the last election, is "through politically forever" was expressed yesterday by Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, who has just returned from California.

"Sinclair gained his one great opportunity when he won the Democratic nomination for Governor," Pittman said. "He lost every chance he will ever have politically when he lost the election. He is absolutely through. He will never have a chance to gain even nomination to any office again so far as any major party is concerned."

Science Developing Vaccine To Avert Sleeping Sickness

Test on Hundreds of Children Is Started, Says Doctor.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27 (AP).—The first step in making a vaccine against encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today.

To date medicine has absolutely no known defense against catching this disease, one of the cruelest of human ills.

The experiments were reported by Maurice Brodie, M. D., of the New York City Health Department, during a description of the new infantile paralysis vaccine.

Tested on Mice.

Last year's St. Louis sleeping sickness outbreak furnished the virus, the cause of the disease, from human beings, which the New Yorkers used for their vaccine experiments.

Mice infected with this human virus developed sleeping sickness.

Their brains, containing the virus, were treated with minute amounts of formalin, which killed the virus. This virus was then used as a vaccine on 100 healthy mice.

It immunized them all against the encephalitis. Most important from the medical point of view, the new vaccine had no apparent ill effects on the mice.

The next steps are further animal experiments to make reasonably sure it may not harm human beings. Then the volunteers, who try it on their own bodies.

Encephalitis, like infantile paralysis, attacks the brain and has numerous "strains" of virus, each working a little differently. A vaccine to be useful must protect against them all.

Children Vaccinated.

Indications that the new infantile paralysis vaccine does just this were shown in Dr. Brodie's report. It has produced immunity already against several types of infantile paralysis virus. It must be tried against many more, Dr. Brodie said, before medicine can be sure of its universal protective power.

Already one such test has started, at Bakersfield, Calif., where he said 400 to 500 children have received the New York vaccine.

In New York 35 children have received the vaccine and their blood serum shows in all cases signs of high immunity. Four vaccinated children showed more immunity than three children convalescent from mild attacks of infantile paralysis. In animal tests the vaccine seemed a little better than the disease itself for conferring immunity.

So They Put Our Cinnamon In 'Solitary'

It's the Monkey House Not White House, for Roosevelt's Cat.

Without a doubt the most lonesome and forlorn, baffled and terrified living creature in Washington yesterday was Cinnamon.

For it was the first day for Cinnamon, used to soft rugs and honeyed words, in "the big house." And the monkey house at that. No Ginger to play with, no solicitous mistress to prepare his food, no sofas to crawl under. Just a bleak cell at the zoo with a pile of straw in one corner, a pan of meat and a pan of water and curious spectators poking fun.

"What is that?" one of them asks.

Indeed!

Doesn't he recognize Cinnamon, the exquisite caracul cat which, with Ginger, the servile cat, was presented to President Roosevelt a couple of months ago? Cinnamon, of the long peaked ears and the rich brown eyes and the playful disposition?

But he wasn't playful yesterday. Since last fall Cinnamon and Ginger, who were more dead than alive when received at the White House, have been nursed back to health in the apartment of Dr. William M. Mann, zoo director, and Mrs. Mann. Special foods, a dozen or more varieties of tonics and tender handling succeeded in developing them into healty specimens.

Ginger will always be a cripple—he arrived with an injured spine—but he is in excellent physical condition otherwise after a handicapped start. Only he is lonely in the Manns' apartment, for Cinnamon.

It was necessary to transfer the caracul to the zoo because he was getting too blamed lively for a private residence. Besides, he is an excellent exhibition animal and Dr. Mann reckoned it was about time to turn him over to the public.

And so yesterday the little cat, overcome by his new surroundings, lay despondently in the far corner of his cubicle. Neither Dr. Mann nor William H. Blackburn, head keeper, would allow him to be photographed. Aggravation of his nervous condition, they feared, might produce serious results.

In time, though, he'll probably be forgetting Ginger's playful bites and Mrs. Mann's gentle feeding and become an honest-to-goodness wild animal.

Train Wreck Attempt Fails.

Bourg, France, Dec. 27 (AP).—An attempt to wreck a crowded Bordeaux-Geneva-Milan express failed today when the train thundered through a blocked switch with only slight damage to the locomotive. An iron bar had been jammed into the switch.

Throat-Kidney Germ Isolated In Science Test

Rheumatic Infection Also Is Blamed on 'New' Bacteria.

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—A newly isolated germ apparently responsible for rheumatic infection and "glomerular nephritis," a type of kidney trouble associated with sore throats, was reported to the Society of American Bacteriologists today.

The germ is an exceedingly small member of the streptococcus family. Methods of separating it from other bacteria so that its share of responsibility for disease can be diagnosed were described by Perrin H. Long and Eleanor A. Bliss, of the Johns Hopkins University medical school, Baltimore.

These streptococci occur in short chains and in small masses. They were found in the throats of 80 per cent of individuals suffering from the kidney-throat trouble and in 50 per cent of those with rheumatic infection.

But they were "rarely found in the throats of individuals ill with chronic disease or acute infection."

Streptococci are well known as the causes of serious sore throat and other infections, and medical men have felt certain that not all the different kinds were known. The Johns Hopkins work confirms this suspicion and shows how one virulent breed of streptococci can be studied with a view of improving the remedies for the ills it causes.

A new method of staining bacteria which is bringing into clearer view the hidden members of the streptococci family and also of sleeping sickness and infantile paralysis was described by Eward C. Rosenow, M. D., of the Mayo Clinic.

The method adds use of iodine to the dyes commonly employed for staining. It brings into plain sight unmistakable round bodies called cocci, or pairs of them called diplococci. Sometimes these minute living disease producers are alone, sometimes in chains.

Indictments Charge Park Men With Graft

The Interior Department announced yesterday indictments against three former employes of the National Park Service had been returned in the Federal District Court at Portland, Oreg., charging pay roll manipulation, the Associated Press said.

The department said they were E. C. Solinsky, former superintendent; A. R. Edwin, former chief clerk and special disbursing officer, and I. F. Davidson, former construction superintendent in Crater Lake National Park.

Fords Predict Good Business For New Year

But Father and Son Warn Against Dependence on 1934 'Upturn.'

Detroit, Dec. 27 (AP).—Henry and Edsel Ford today forecast "a good solid year for business" in 1935, but warned against overdependence upon the "momentum" from the "remarkable improvement" in 1934.

They spoke over a telephone hook-up to sales meetings held at Ford Motor Co. branches in the United States and Canada, coincident with the announcement of new models.

Henry Ford's remarks were confined to the season's greetings and a suggestion that "if you are prosperous, you will make many others prosperous."

"Decided Upturn."

Edsel Ford, who is president of the company, commented upon a "decided upturn in business" during the year past and predicted continued improvement, while warning against overconfidence based upon the volume of business already done.

He said that contracts aggregating $12,000,000 already have been awarded in connection with the company's $20,000,000 expansion program.

Talking to newspapermen invited to a private showing of new cars, Henry Ford said that if his goal of a million cars next year is reached "we will be helping a great many people besides those who are engaged in the motorcar business—we will be helping the whole United States and the world."

He said that the modern motorcar "probably is better adapted to its purpose than any other man-made thing because it includes all the principal arts which mankind has developed."

Future of the Plane.

The airplane, he said, may sometime in the future go a step beyond the motorcar, but "its appropriate power plant has not yet been invented and probably will not be until a new kind of fuel is made."

Of motor fuels, he said that 15 years ago the Ford Company found alcohol, as a tractor fuel, several times as powerful as gasoline. Asked why alcohol as a fuel had not been more fully developed, he commented that "there is a lot of money behind gasoline."

Principal changes in the new cars include bodies more than 8 inches longer, mounting of the engine further forward and relocation of the seats. The passenger car price list shows two decreases and seven increases. The prices range from $495 to $655.

Miss Christmas was en route to Greenville last night to show some Columbus, Ga., boys the Mississippi River, when their automobile was in an accident. No one else was hurt.

Lorin K. Scudder Dies; Brother of Justice

Young Artist Painting Secretary Hull in Oils

Harold Bowler, Creator of 'Street Cleaner of Paris,' Believes Statesman's Portrait Is High Point of Career.

A 31-year-old American artist who is known here and abroad for his "Street Cleaner of Paris," is doing Secretary of State Hull in oils. Sittings began on Christmas Day in an improvised studio at the Carlton Hotel. The portrait will be finished in about a week.

Harold Bowler is the painter. Since his graduation in 1927 from Syracuse College of Fine Arts, Bowler has earned an enviable reputation in the East and in France. His series of charcoal portraits of famous dancers—Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn, Michel Fokine, and others—drew generous applause from austere critics on this side of the Atlantic. "The Street Cleaner," a brilliant and penetrating character in oils, brought him acclaim not only here but in the city of its origin, Paris, where he studied on a Senior Augusta Hazard Traveling Scholarship.

and now, Harold Bowler:

"I had the portrait of Secretary Hull finished—in my mind—before I started work. That's the system I follow on all my portraits, forming a mental image and then simply letting the hand execute that preconceived picture.

"But always do I allow the subject to look at the canvas in its progressive stages. This Secretary Hull is being permitted to do. It keeps up his interest. Besides, his comments have demonstrated that he is a sound and learned art critic."

The Secretary will be shown seated in a carved chair, holding his gold-rimmed spectacles in one hand while the other arm rests in his lap. The canvas, 33 by 40 inches in size, is expected eventually to join those of Hull's predecessors in the corridors of the State, War and Navy Building.

In his reserved way, Bowler is keenly enthusiastic over his current assignment. Up to now he has painted dancers, actors and authors but never before a public official of national rank.

He enjoyed doing Richard Halliburton, the globe trotter; William March, novelist; Maria Gambarelli, Princess Yo-hay-tong and Edward Chalif, dancers, and Justice Irving G. Hubbs, of the New York Court of Appeals, but he considers the Hull commission the high point of his career to date.

The secretary made two trips yesterday to the makeshift studio, sitting an hour and a half in the morning and an hour in the afternoon. Provided affairs of state do not become too pressing and fair weather continues, the portrait probaby will be completed early next week.

85 D. C. Motorits Are Found Guilty In Traffic Court

Eighty-five motorists were convicted of speeding, reckless driving and other traffic offenses yesterday as the Traffic Court, with Judge John P. McMahon presiding, recorded one of the busiest sessions in its history.

One driver, Louis C. Forsyth, was fined $100 on charges of reckless driving and failure to exhibit an operator's license. In lieu of payment, he was sent to jail for 50 days.

The court had 163 cases scheduled. Of these, 16 were continued, 62 saw the defendants forfeit collateral and fail to appear, and 85 resulted in convictions.

500 Attending National Parley Of S. A. E. Here

Wives of Delegates Are Guests at Tea Given by Mrs. Roper

For the first time since President McKinley's administration Washington is host to a national convention of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, college fraternity. The three-day session opened yesterday at the Willard Hotel, with approximately 500 delegates attending.

Col. Oswald W. McNeese delivered the address of welcome in behalf of Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, who was ill and could not attend. Walter B. Jones, eminent supreme archon, responded.

An informal reception was held last night at the chapetr house, 1128 Sixteenth street northwest. Wives of delegates were entertained yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Daniel C. Roper in her home, 3001 Woodland drive.

Featuring today's program is the Willard luncheon at which Judge Alfred K. Nippert, of Cincinnati, will present a portrait of Secretary Roper. Following a sight-seeing tour in the afternoon, the convention dinner will be held in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Senator Pat Harrison will be toastmaster and Lawrence L. Gourley, president of the Washington Alumni Association, will preside.

Tomorrow afternoon Merle Thorp, editor of Nation's Business, will be host at his country home. At 4 p. m. the S. A. E. wives will be guests of Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin at tea. A congressional ball will bring the round of social activities to a close.

Hart Is Ready To Rest at 80

Famed Historian Has Written or Edited 104 Volumes, Feels That's Plenty.

Albert Bushnell Hart, famous historian, believes that at 80 years of age he can may aside his pen. He feels that in composing or editing 104 volumes of historical writing he has done his duty to the past, present and future.

Dr. Hart, white-haired and bearded, professor emeritus at Harvard University, is in Washington attending the meeting of the American Historial Association.

Hearty and kindly, Dr. Hart, whose textbooks have been used by thousands of school boys and girls, is positive that history teaching of the present is much better than it was when he was a school boy.

Present teaching methods in which students go to sourc of material and dig thing out for themselves, he said, is an immense improvement over the old method of depending upon single textbooks.

Dr. Hart, one of the world's authorities on American history, is remembered in Washington for his recent services as historian of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

Plateaus Linked, Byrd Party Says

Marie Byrd Land Connecte With Pole, Belief.

Little America, Antarctica, Dec. 27 (Mackay Radio) (AP).—A definite indication that the vast elevated plateau encircling the South Pole is connected with the recently discovered plateau of Marie Byrd Land was contained today in a brief radio message from the geological party in the field.

The party now is homeward bound from a penetration which carried it 117 nautical miles from the South Pole. Quin A. Blackburn, in charge of the group, informed Admiral Richard E. Byrd that a great stream of ice in the Queen Maud range heretofore mapped as a glacier actually is a sub-plateau, and presumably provides a terraced descent for the ice creeping down from the south polar plateau on the lower heights of the Marie Byrd plateau.

In his brief radio contact, Blackburn said the Thorne glacier, never before explored, is 120 miles long. That ranks it next in size to Beard Moore Glacier farther to the west in the same range, and the longest in the world.

U. S. Will Cut Unemployables Off Relief Roll

4,000,000 to Lose Federal Funds; Burden Given to States.

velt a comprehensive survey of the possibility of future public works projects in each of the States. The survey shows that as many projects as already have been started can be started in the future. The allotments up to date amount to approximately $1,200,000,000. Another survey now before the President shows that Federal projects running into several billions of dollars can be started.

The Public Works Administration feels that because of greatly improved municipal credit in many parts of the country allotments for individual projects may not have to be so large, making it possible for the Government to assist in a greater number of projects.

It was revealed that the proposal for a great grade-crossing elimination program, to cost nearly $1,000,000,000 and to employ 750,000 persons, is hitting a snag. Most State laws require railroads to pay a part of grade crossing elimination costs. Most railroads, it was said, are unable or unwilling to meet their part of the cost.

Local Outlays Increase.

While announcing that the Government is throwing back a percentage of the relief burden on local communities, Hopkins revealed that State and local funds spent for emergency unemployment relief in the first ten months of 1934 were nearly 30 per cent greater than those spent during the corresponding ten months of 1933.

The increase, Hopkins said, was the result of agreements made by the FERA with the governors for greater financial cooperation between the States and the Federal Government in meeting the cost of relief.

During the first ten months of 1934 State and local funds used for relief totaled $323,890,560. This was $71,514,677 more than during the corresponding ten months last year.

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor pointed out the greater need for relief, estimating that unemployment increased in November and that the increase was continuing in December.

Unemployment in November, 1934, totaled 400,000 more than in November last year, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said. He estimated that there were 11,459,000 unemployed in November of this year, as compared with 11,039,000 in October. The statement that unemployment is continuing in December is based on reports of the number of members of trades unions out of employment.

Trade union figures, however, showed that employment in building construction is gaining.

"It seems probable that this is due to the Federal housing program," Green said.

The December gain was the first of its kind reported since union reports were started in 1928, Green said. The gain, he said, put 2 per cent of the building trades membership back to work in December.

$1,000,700 Allotted To D. C. Relief

The District of Columbia yesterday was allotted $1,000,700 by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration to pay its January relief bills. This is an increase of $220,791 over the amount allotted for December and is the first increase for the District in several months.

The FERA allotted a total of $136,791,268 for the States and territories, as compared with $132,131,205 allotted for December. Of this amount, $1,856,150 went to Maryland, $1,217,664 to Virginia and $2,161,950 to West Virginia. Each of these figures represented a slight increase over the allotments for December.

Wife in Coma, Husband Dies Near Her Door

Heart Attack Fatal to John De Forest After Car Hits Woman.

Mrs. Camille DeForest, 47, who was struck and critically injured by a truck Wednesday night, remained unconscious yesterday and last night and could not be told that her husband, John S. De Forest, had died outside an operating room at Emergency Hospital while physicians were trying to save her.

Meanwhile, Touissant Mayes, 24, colored, 1515 T street, driver of the truck which struck Mrs. DeForest in front of her home, 3028 Porter street, pleaded not guilty to a reckless driving charge when arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court yesterday and demanded a jury trial. He was released in $500 bond.

Funeral services for Mr. DeForest, who was 52 and assistant chief of the division of stations and accounts of the Weather Bureau, will not be arranged pending arrival in Washington of relatives, it was said last night at the DeForest home.

Mr. DeForest, physicians said, was overcome by shock and his weakened heart failed while he sat outside the emergency operating room at the hospital. He fell from his chair and was dead before other physicians could be summoned to his aid. He was a native of North Haven, Conn., and is survived by Mrs. DeForest, a daughter, Beatrice, 19, and three sisters, Miss Charlotte DeForest, head of Kobe College, Kobe, Japan; Mrs. W. B. Pettus, affiliated with a language school at Peiping, China, and Miss Louise DeForest, of Cornwall, Conn.

Former Judge's Home Burns; Loss Is $5,000

Blaze at Veitch Summit Brings Call to All Arlington Firemen.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 569. Clarendon, Va.

Fire of undetermined origin caused damage to the home of former Judge Harry R. Thomas, of Veitch Summit, Arlington County, late yesterday afternoon to the extent of $5,000.

Mrs. Thomas, who was alone in the home at the time of the fire, called for aid which brought out the entire fire-fighting force of the county, including Falls Church department.

After more than an hour's effort the firemen succeded in confining the fire to the second floor. The roof of the home was destroyed.

With the assistance of neighbors, firemen removed most of the furniture.

The damage was reported covered by insurance.

Kelley Begins Fight.

The bill of exceptions on which will be based Lyman M. Kelley's appeal from his conviction by an Arlington County Circuit Court jury on charges malfeasance of office, will be presented tomorrow to Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, who tried the case. Edmund D. Campbell is counsel for the deposed chairman of the Arlington County board.

The bill, which will be filed with the State Supreme Court of Appeals after being signed by Judge Coleman, sets forth certain alleged errors in the trial of the case, including admission of certain evidence and instructions to the jury. Kilmey was found guilty on counts of soliciting a bribe and accepting a bribe.

Campbell said the submission of the bill for the trial judge's signature was a routine step in the appeal.

Judge Coleman still is considering arguments made before him several weeks ago on a motion for a new trial filed in the Arlington County Circuit Court by Campbell and Leon Bazile, counsel for the defense.

Gas Money Still Held.

Approval by the Virginia State corporation commission of the compromise gas rate cut which the Arlington County board last week accepted from the Rosslyn Gas Co., does not release the $50,000 in impounded gas bills to the gas company, Calvin I. Kephart, chairman of the Arlington County Public Utilities Commission, declared last night.

He pointed out that the money has been impounded under a bond fixed by the Federal court. It can not be released without an order of that court, he said.

"If the court feels that all is not well in connection with the alleged compromise," he said, "which, it should be emphasized, was not approved by the Public Utilities Commission of the county or any of the parties complainant, it will refuse to release the money until a proper compromise is effected or the case is adjusted on its merits, even though the new rates have gone into effect."

Chairman Kephart further stated that the impoundment began when the State Corporation Commission ordered a rate cut on June 1, 1933. The order was taken into Federal court by the gas company, but before it could be settled the company made the compromise proposal, which puts into effect the same rates as those ordered by the commission effective January 1, 1935. Acceptance of the compromise by the county board waives the $50,000 impounded.

Kephart and Arthur Orr, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, have requested that any court action be withheld until the gas consumers of the county be given opportunity to express themselves on the compromise. They characterized the action of the county board in accepting the compromise offer as "unduly hasty."

Anne Gould Ready To Adopt Church Of Actor Husband

Montreal, Quebec, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Confession of Catholic faith and a telegram from Texas were all that stood between Anne Gould Meador, great-granddaughter of the late railroad tycoon, Jay Gould, and complete marital bliss tonight. She eloped Christmas Day with F. Spencer Meador and was married in a civil ceremony at Harrison, N. Y.

And she has the parental blessing of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould, who knew nothing of the marriage until after it was over.

But after tramping through snow in freezing weather today, they discovered that a Catholic marirage is another matter. She must become a Catholic—which she is willing to do—and must have a letter from Meador's parish at San Saba, Tex.

They expect to be married in a Roman Catholic church tomorrow, and will then return to New York State for a honeymoon. The two will make their home in San Saba, Tex., where Meador, an obscure actor, makes his home.

2 Are Sentenced In Fake Bill Drive

Accused Pair Jailed for 6 to 11 Months.

The first to be sentenced here following the inauguration of a drive against counterfeiting, Harvey Wells, bearing the euphonious nickname "Weak Knees," and Samuel Stevinson, known as "Boy Friend," were given terms of from 6 to 11 months yesterday by Justice James M. Proctor in the District Supreme Court. Each pleaded guilty to passing counterfeit bills last June. Both are colored.

Secret Service operatives reported one of them passed a spurious $5 bill in a gasoline station at Bladensburg road and New York avenue northeast, while the other purchased some oranges with a Richmond (Va.) bogus Federal Reserve bill across the street. The gasoline station operator noted the license tag on the car.

Glass Is Bitter In New Attack On Interest Cut

Veteran Senator Says Action Is Without Legal Authority.

serve Board had no part in the adoption of our regulations."

Senator Glass started the controversy when in a letter to Charles S. Hamlin, of the Federal Reserve Board, he condemned the order as a usurpation of authority and blamed the Reserve Board for promulgating the order in an announcement of a reduction in the interest rates of member banks.

In his reply to Gov. Eccles, Senator Glass recalled he had not charged the Reserve Board with any illegal action and termed as "useless the repeated assertion, if directed at me, that the board did not exceed its authority in fixing maximum interest rates which member banks of the system may pay on time and savings deposits."

"I am entirely familiar with the statutory provision authorizing the board to take action from time to time—but not 'requiring' it, as the governor of the board now states.

"I may say, parenthetically, that Congress did not intend the interest payments to be uniform throughout the country, as may be discovered by anybody who will take the trouble to read the act, which says textually 'the board may prescribe different rates for such payment on time and savings deposits having different maturities or subject to different conditions respecting withdrawal or repayment or subject to different conditions by reason of different locations.'

"There is no more reason why the interest rate for deposits should be uniform than there is for a uniform discount rate at all the banks, which, of course, does not prevail, and against which there are many conclusive reasons. So much for what I did not charge, and what, therefore, needs no repeated contradiction.

"What I did charge was that the action of the Insurance of Deposits Corporation was without authority of law and that the Federal Reserve Board should not have made itself the official medium of publicly announcing the illicit action of another corporation in a way that produced the impression that the board sanctioned, if it did not advise, such irregular action. Nobody has assumed to assert that the action complained of by me was legal or to controvert a single fact contained in my letter.

"It does not seem to have penetrated the minds of certain gentlemen in Washington that the reasons given for this illegal assumption of authority by the Insurance of Deposits Corporation as to interest payments by nonmember State banks would just as surely authorize that corporation, arbitrarily and without legal sanction, to control the business of nonmember State banks in many particulars vital to the security of such banks.

"Junius in the dedication of his famous letters said that 'a thing once done may be done again and again.' Accordingly it is my contention that if this evil action by usurping legislative authority by a bureau at Washington be permitted to pass without protest and become a precedent there will be further and more dangerous exercise of authority for which there is no sanction of law.

"I purposely refrain from discussing in the newspapers what I regard as the evil consequences of the action taken by both the Federal Reserve Board and the Insurance of Deposits Corporation. That may be more appropriately treated at another time and place."

Thief That Looted Washington Shaft Still Eludes Police

Despite a guard being posted at the Washington Monument, efforts to catch a thief who took 107 gold-plated, platinum-tipped lightning rod points from the top of the shaft had failed yesterday. The tips, valued at $8 each, represented a total value of $856, although the thief left 63 of the total of 170 points which protect the Monument from lightning.

The Alexander Howie Co., which has the contract for cleaning and repointing the Monument, will have to bear the loss from its own pocket, the National Capital Park Service of the Interior Department indicated yesterday. The expensive metals are used, it was said, because copper tips would not prevent corrosion.

The company yesterday began taking down the first sections of scaffolding about the Monument and the protective wires and wooden platforms above the 500-foot level. As soon as the work is approved by the park service engineers, the steel framework will be removed. This is expected to be completed within the next three weeks.

Pittman to Ask For Silver Gain To Pay Bonus

its replies to the protests of China, has served notice of its intentions to follow out the silver program. He denied that he had ever said the silver program would help China, but at the same time expressed the opinion the Chinese government is "narrow-minded" in its opposition.

Protests from China have been arriving periodically at the State Department ever since the Orient began feeling the effect of American purchases, which increased the value of Chinese currency, largely silver. Senator Pittman asserted that the Chinese government is dominated by large industrialists, who find their exports threatened, and that it is blind to the development of the interior provinces.

Benefits of Program.

The Senator declared, moreover, that the benefits already derived from the silver program have been obvious. American textiles, he said, have increased just as Chinese textiles have suffered. Automobiles are going to the Orient in increasing numbers, and the Pacific Coast lumber business is "booming."

By agreement, the resolution for American adherence to the World Court will come up at the first meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Pittman, who is chairman, said. He predicted it will be reported favorably if the committee is not altered too greatly by new members.

Reed Amendment.

The Senator added, however, that the committee probably will insist on the Reed amendment, which stipulates that the court will not assume jurisdiction in any matter involving the United States without our consent. This provision is not acceptable to other nations.

Plans for early attention to the World Court protocol were opposed, meantime, by Senator J. Ham Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip. The Senator expressed belief foreign affairs should be sidetracked until the President's domestic program has been acted on. The World Court issue, he felt, might delay the program and also antagonize nations with whom trade agreements are being negotiated.

States in South Put 89 Millions Into New Roads

Tennessee Tops the List With $14,500,000; Georgia Second.

Atlanta, Dec. 27 (AP).—Approximately $89,000,000 was spent in 11 Southern States for highway construction and maintenance in 1934.

Largely through Federal grants, thousands of miles of new roads were built and bridges modernized.

Figures, some of which are approximate, obtained from the States today show unusual activity for the 12 months.

Tennessee, spending about $14,500,000, led the other States from Virginia to Louisiana; Georgia, with $13,571,795, was second, and Alabama third, with $11,824,795, followed closely by Kentucky's $10,022,000.

Virginia Spends $3,795,000.

The table shows other actual and approximate expenditures by States:

Arkansas	$4,250,000
Virginia	3,795,000
South Carolina	4,666,501
Florida	6,000,000
North Carolina	8,369,049
Mississippi	8,000,000
Louisiana	5,300,000

The figure for Tennessee includes overhead as well as contracts.

The contracts cover $2,000,000 of Federal aid money together with maintenance amounting to about $3,000,000. Part of the Federal aid money was matched 50-50. The contracts were for 665 miles of work, including 230 miles under Federal aid, 35 miles of municipal under Federal aid and 400 miles of secondary roads.

Georgia's road allocations called for 1,042 miles of new roads and 5,332 miles of bridges. This figure includes all types of construction. Most of the money was from Federal grants.

Alabama Got $11,524,133.

Capt. L. G. Smith, Alabama State highway director, said $11,524,133 of the money spent in the State was Federal aid and $300,000 State funds. All went toward construction. The 1934 program covered 758 miles of paving, grading and surfacing.

Kentucky's expenditures covered 715 miles of all types of surfacing, grading and draining. The average cost per mile of road work, including bridges, was $11,230.98.

Virginia had but $95,000 in State funds to spend on its primary system for building during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1935, but construction is now under way under a $3,700,000 Federal grant.

Virginia has a big maintenance bill of approximately $6,000,000 annually on county roads taken over by the State and maintenance on the primary system costs about $5,000,000 annually.

South Carolina's bill was divided into $3,556,893 for construction and $1,110,008 for maintenance during the fiscal year July 1, 1933, to June 30, 1934. The State built 338.15 miles of bituminous-surfaced roads, 15.27 of concrete pavement, 14.29 miles of earth roads and 36 bridges.

Of Florida's approximate $6,000,000 expenditure for road building, $5,250,000 came from Federal allocations. The State highway department now is maintaining 5,000 miles of paved roads.

Louisiana's highway department's figures were unavailable, but Gov. O. K. Allen placed the expenditure at around $5,300,000.

Wife's Income Bigger, Can't Have Alimony

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—A wife whose income is greater than her husband's has no right to ask for alimony, Judge Joseph B. David ruled today in granting Mrs. Leonore Williams Jackson, of Wilmette, a divorce from Dr. Carl E. Jackson, a dentist.

"You had better be careful or you may have to pay alimony," he warned Mrs. Jackson after learning she earned $2,100 annually as an Evanston postoffice clerk while her husband's income was less than $2,000 a year.

Fusion Session Over Patronage Set Tomorrow

Special Subcommittees of Factions to Meet at Rockville.

State and county patronage allocation will be discussed at a meeting of the special subcommittee of the Progressive Democratic Faction committee on patronage and the Republican State Central committee tomorrow at Rockville, Md.

The two groups representative of the factions that combined to form the Fusion Party will attempt to iron out differences on the allotment of the patronage gained through the Fusion victory which gave the party control of the Montgomery County commissioners and the more than 200 county jobs. The question of whether the Democratic faction will share in State patronage also will be discussed.

The session was arranged after a meeting held Wednesday night by the 65 district delegates to the Progressive Democratic faction of the Fusion Central committee. A special patronage committee of 16 members and the chairman of the Fusion committee, Tarleton Brooke, of Olney, were appointed to act in patronage matters.

It was discussed at the meeting whether the Democratic faction was entitled to State patronage and there was some variance of opinion on this subject.

The seven members of the subcommittee who will confer with the Republicans are Samuel E. Stonebraker, Ray Spuder, John Williams, Edmund Codwise, George F. Bonifant, Joseph A. Cantrel and Mrs. Bates Etchison.

The subcommittee will confer with the Republicans at 3:30 p. m. at the office of Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the Republican State central committee. The special subcommittee then will report at 8 p. m. to a meeting of the general patronage committee of the Democrats at the courthouse in Rockville.

Bell reappointed Chief Deputy Sheriff Charles M. Orme and Deputy Sheriff Z. M. Waters after he had qualified before Watkins.

Officers and directors will be elected at the meeting. The incumbents are A. Harmon Roberts, of Woodlawn, president; Albert R. Harrison, of Groveton, secretary; Frank H. Wilkinson, of Sherwood Hall, treasurer; Joseph W. Cox, of Woodlawn; George C. Gillingham, of Woodlawn, and William F. Halley, of Ox Road, directors.

Farcical.

Study of the numerous District bills which are to be presented to the forthcoming session of Congress is likely to leave the average citizen confused, if not cynical. Some of the measures included on the list have been presented to Congress many times. Some have passed one house and failed of enactment merely because the other house did not find time to consider them. Others have been approved by committees and left to await enactment when Congress should have a period of leisure, which never came.

The picture does not brighten when one notes the character of these bills. One would authorize the Health Department to open graves. Others would require landlords to furnish heat in rented apartments, modify the fees for recording deeds, and afford punishment for unlawful entry of vacant property. These are patently matters for the District Commissioners to decide. Only gross mismanagement on the part of Congress makes it necessary for that body to pass upon such trivialities.

While the program including these and many other petty bills is being prepared for the legislative calendar, there are indications that the more important problem of reorganizing the District government may be sidetracked. Senator Gore has expressed doubt as to whether hearings will be held upon the findings of a special committee which has prepared elaborate data on this subject. By a single act Congress might extend the powers of the Commissioners over numerous local problems that now await the ponderous decision of the National Legislature.

No doubt Congress will always formulate the major policies by which the District is governed. But to continue referring petty details to that body is absurd. Real progress could be made by concentrating upon the reorganization project, which would automatically solve many of the issues now pending.

The Family Spirit.

For those who have marveled at the hold of King George upon the affections of "his people" the address of that monarch on Christmas Day may afford enlightenment. The King said nothing about navies, commerce, trade, taxes, the budget or international relations. His broadcast was a very homely talk about family ties, ending on the note: "God bless you all."

King George assumed the attitude of a humble seeker for the good will of his people. Without a trace of either ostentation or obsequiousness he asked that the problems of the empire be faced "in the spirit of one family." In a very real sense it was a "fireside talk" in which a fisherman in Australia, a dairy farmer in New Zealand, a lumberjack in Canada and a tea planter in India responded to the King's greetings.

King George seems to have a happy faculty for cultivating the affections of the rank and file. If the monarchistic system had produced more sovereigns of his caliber the history of the world might have been very different from what is now recorded.

France Ends An Experiment.

At enormous cost and with no little political embarrassment, France has decided to terminate an unhappy experiment in state control. As Andre Vulliet pointed out yesterday on the page opposite this, Premier Flandin has obtained from the Chamber of Deputies authorization for a $100,000,000 loan to serve as a cushion for falling wheat prices. When a normal relationship between supply and demand has been reestablished, wheat will again become a free commodity, except for restrictions upon expansion of acreage.

France has recently sought to attain self-sufficiency in wheat by fixing the price at $2 per bushel. Production was expanded until last year's bumper crop gave the country a considerable export surplus. Since the price fixed by the government was more than twice the world market price, it is easy to visualize what happened. Peasants were forced to cut prices to dispose of their wheat, but bread still sold at the same figure because no baker dared to admit that he was using flour milled from "gangster wheat." Consequently, the "wheat policy" is being abandoned in an atmosphere of scandal and public agitation.

This experiment in France does not parallel the efforts of the AAA in the United States. The original objective there was to stimulate wheat production. In this country a major purpose has been curtailment of the wheat output. Yet the basic principle involved—political control over economic law—is the same in both cases. France has discovered that she can not maintain a price of $2 per bushel for wheat without imposing a heavy burden upon taxpayers and encouraging widespread violation of the law.

The difference in the philosophy of the American and French experiments is not so great as to detract from the significance to this country of Premier Flandin's pungent comment before the Chamber of Deputies. "The system of controlled economy," he said, "has failed everywhere. In order to overcome the evils of unemployment, low prices and shrinking trade we must return gradually to a more liberal system."

A Federal Sales Tax?

Representative Treadway, of the Ways and Means Committee, is preparing to introduce a bill providing for a manufacturers' sales tax which would, he estimates, raise $450,000,000 per year. Half of the receipts, however, would be returned to the States in the hope that they would "see the advisability of leaving this form of taxation to the Federal Government." Recently the National Association of Manufacturers went on record as favoring a sales tax of this type, to be collected by the Federal Government and shared with the States.

Whenever Congress undertakes to balance the budget the sales tax issue will probably take the limelight, since it would provide a dependable source of revenue derived for the most part from consumers who now make very slight contributions to the costs of Federal Government. The doubt as to whether higher income taxes can actually bring much increased revenue and the opposition to so-called "nuisance" taxes are also powerful negative arguments in favor of a Federal sales tax.

Nevertheless, there are serious objections to Federal sales taxes. Such taxes are already levied by 22 States, and during the past two years have been relied upon increasingly to supplement deficient local revenues. Consequently, passage of a Federal tax would either lead to duplicate taxation of an undesirable sort, or else the States would have to surrender this source of revenue in the hope that the Federal Government would equitably apportion part of the proceeds among them. Such allocation would, however, create many difficulties. It probably would not be welcomed in those localities where State sales taxes are now operating efficiently.

Another compelling objection to a Federal sales tax lies in the immensity of the administrative task involved in collecting returns from about 200,000 manufacturers, located in all parts of the Union. Although a uniform Federal tax would eliminate discriminations which result from the fact that some States levy sales taxes and others do not, the chances of evasion are probably greater under a Federal system than under the scrutiny of local tax officials. Moreover, it is the general level of taxes, not the imposition of any one tax, that affects the ability of a concern to compete with other businesses located in neighboring States.

Since a large number of States have already resorted to sales taxes, since State revenue needs are great and growing, since existing burdens upon property owners are excessive, and since it is imperative that the States finance a larger share of relief expenditure, the weight of the argument seems to be against the introduction of a Federal sales tax.

In theory sales taxes of any kind are difficult to defend, because they are regressive: that is, they impose a relatively heavier burden upon people of small means than upon the well-to-do. Under present conditions, however, fiscal necessity leaves little choice in the matter. The sales tax is easily capable of supplying much-needed revenues, and it appears to be with us to stay.

The unsettled issue is whether it shall be reserved to the States, or be levied by both the States and the Federal Government.

Irrelevant Defense.

In a formal statement evidently intended as an answer to the criticisms of Senator Glass, Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board has defended its action in ordering a reduction in the rate of interest on member-bank savings deposits. At the same time he disavows responsibility for the reduction of nonmember bank deposit rates ordered by the FDIC. Senator Glass asks pertinently why Governor Eccles persists in denying things that nobody has said, and his irritation seems pardonable in view of the irrelevant character of most of the defense.

There is no question as to the legality of the action taken by the Reserve Board. The attack by Senator Glass was directed primarily against Chairman Crowley, of the FDIC, who, in the Senator's opinion, has no authority to order nonmember State banks to reduce deposit rates of interest. The Federal Reserve Board was simply chided for "lending the force of its prestige" to the alleged illegal acts of the FDIC by making itself the medium of public announcement for the latter.

So far Chairman Crowley has offered no defense against charges of usurpation of legislative power, and is quoted by Senator Glass as admitting that the FDIC has been "skating on thin ice." This attitude might seem less inexcusable if there were any existing emergency which justified an overliberal interpretation of the law. However, if deposit insurance is to become a permanent institution, as now seems likely, the discretionary powers of those who administer it must be clearly defined.

It has already become evident that the FDIC might come into conflict with the Federal Reserve system and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency in exercising its right to examine insured banks. And the country has suffered too much from the evils of divided responsibility in the banking field to welcome the advent of new agencies that may work at cross purposes with constituted authorities.

In the present case, the FDIC and the Federal Reserve authorities appear to have been cooperating in establishing a uniform deposit rate of interest for all insured banks. But that is no guarantee of continued harmonious action. Moreover, so far as Senator Glass is concerned, the question at issue is entirely unrelated to the advisability of the action taken. He is simply and properly concerned to prevent an "arbitrary disregard of existing law" by officials whose duty it is to follow the law instead of interpreting it in accordance with their own wishes.

Is The Objective Clear?

In negotiating reciprocal tariff agreements the Administration has so far been following the course of least resistance. The first pact to be concluded was that with Cuba. Within a few days agreements with Brazil, Colombia and Haiti will be announced. Negotiations are under way with five republics of Central America and several European countries of secondary commercial importance. As yet there is no prospect of agreement with any of the leading commercial nations.

Compelling economic and political considerations fully account for the precedence given to the Cuban treaty. The inclusion of Colombia in the first group is also partially explained by the fact that negotiations for a trade treaty with that country were under way before Congress passed the reciprocal tariff act. Officials admit that most of the other negotiations now in progress have been undertaken because the prospects of agreement look favorable.

It is worthy of note that most of the countries so far invited to negotiate reciprocal trade pacts with the United States have a favorable balance of trade with us. That is not surprising. The tendency to bargain where bargaining is easiest naturally leads to those countries which sell more to us than they buy from us. But negotiations of that character may fail to further the underlying purposes of the reciprocal tariff act.

For instance, it has been relatively easy to secure concessions from Brazil because the United States is an excellent market for that country's enormous coffee crop. Coffee, however, is sold here free of duty. No agreement can be expected greatly to extend our demand for it. If the United States has obtained concessions from Brazil in return for continuation of a free coffee market here, the chief result of this treaty is likely to be extension of American exports to Brazil.

To a certain extent that is desirable. But unless the total of imports can be increased, the tendency will be to accentuate our position as a creditor nation. Obviously, if agreements are negotiated only where they are easiest—where we can bring pressure to push our exports—the tendency will be to increase exports faster than imports. That is the reverse of the objective which most economists who sponsored the reciprocal trade agreements had in mind. It is their desire to bring about a more balanced flow of trade and thereby relieve the economic and financial strain of one-way international commerce.

Between theories that seem to be entirely logical, and effective results in actual practice, there is often a wide gap. Officials who are responsible for such a gigantic undertaking as the reciprocal trade program can not too frequently measure their progress by reconsideration of basic objectives.

The Gypsy Trail.

Philip Barry's play, "Holiday," was a great success both on the stage and on the screen. Its theory is that a man should have his youth to do with as he pleases, even foregoing labor if that is to his taste. Then at the ripe age of 50 or thereabouts he should put away childish things and go to work with a resigned complacency born of having done with youth and adventure.

James Martin Miller, of Takoma Park, has reversed the playwright's theme and has left Washington, at the age of 74, to recapture in foreign capitals the joy of living. Seeking youth against a hundred different backgrounds, this retired United States Consul plans to revisit the places in which he served his country abroad, thence proceeding to Tokyo, a city which he is not unique in loving. "Au revoir," he said in parting, "I am off on the trail of perpetual youth."

This search for adventure and the bluebird of happiness is not a new thing. Nor is the fact that a modern Ponce de Leon is setting out to find them at the age of 74. What does make this Odyssey outstanding is the spirit in which Mr. Miller is making it. He is no callow youth, starting out to taste new joys and experience new thrills. He is a man who has served, who has evolved his own philosophy, who has traveled this itinerary before and found it good. There are few men, or women, who in reviewing their life for the past 30 or 40 years have either the inclination or the courage to say, "I should like to live that again."

Mr. Miller is refreshingly unaware that he is proof conclusve of the truth in that old Spanish proverb, which says, "He who would bring home the wealth of the Indies must carry the wealth of the Indies with him."

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

"First Lady."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been vaguely criticized for her persistence in public life, her adventures in travel, her public speeches and her various public activities and diversified interests. Such criticism is, I believe, not only unwarranted, but supremely unfair to this interesting, gracious and splendid woman.

Mrs. Roosevelt represents finely the standards of American motherhood, the Roosevelt family depicting the ideal American family. She not only deserves immense credit and praise for her numerous and varied public activities, but her right to interest herself outside the sphere of her home and family is an indisputable one.

She should receive high praise and admiration for her skill and courage in public life; for her industry and generosity for associating herself in affairs of so much benefit to the American people. Her charities, her interest in behalf of the poor, the afflicted, and the unemployed, are well known. She is truly an accomplished, splendid woman, a most worthy "First Lady" of the land.

Traffic Rules.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all the labored effort to make a science out of this subject of traffic regulation, it eventually finds its place as a police function. The Commissioners would do well to go a step farther and junk our elaborate traffic law and our top-heavy "Department of Vehicles and Traffic," adopt a few fundamental, self-evident principles of traffic regulation and turn the job over entirely to the police department, to be administered by a police lieutenant.

Common sense would seem to indicate three simple fundamental principles of traffic control by which all regulations should be tested:

1. Every street should carry its fair share of traffic.

2. A slow, uninterrupted movement produces maximum volume with maximum safety.

3. A reasonable amount of discretion must be lodged in the individual.

If the first principle is right, the boulevard street is wrong, for it attracts to itself the traffic that should travel on other streets, and to many people it is an invitation to drive faster than they should and without any consideration for cross traffic.

Of course, uninterrupted traffic movement at all times is not possible, but if the second principle is right the stop light should be used very sparingly.

The third principle is, of course, at variance with what seems to be the fundamental object of the professional traffic regulator: to take away from the individual all discretion and make him entirely subject to mechanical control. The fact that traffic conditions have grown steadily worse as this program has progressed is pretty good evidence of its impracticability.

The policemen should be kept on the streets. The sight of a police uniform helps people to remember.

Against The Critics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The great majority of the people of the United States, regardless of party, creed, or previous conditions, are with the President in his efforts to bring the country out of the slough of despair and despondency into which it has been put by the "do nothing" policy of the Republican Party, which had been in continuous control of the Government for the past 12 years, up to 1933, during which time the aforesaid party has 'dammed, ditched and drained the country."

Now, some of the aforesaid members of said party, and a few discredited and disgruntled Democrats, none of whom has come forward with any better plan to help save the country from this awful depression, are throwing mud at and trying to discredit the actions and efforts of the head of this Nation—a man who has been working and is still working night and day to bring order out of chaos—to help feed the hungry, and clothe the naked and destitute. These actions, under the circumstances, are little short of treason. When we read some of the mud-slinging effusions of former leading Democrats we are forced to the conclusion that Judas Iscariot had nothing on this man or men. Down with chiselers, two-timers and double-crossers.

The Hopkins Message.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I lay upon my bed wondering if Christmas Day had come, The Post was brought to me.

One thing amused me more than anything else "Hopkins' Yule Message." I enjoyed this message very much. (As I always enjoy whatever he has to say.) Although I did not have even a nut or a bit of food, and I did not hear even a Christmas carol, when I read that fine "message" it made me feel happy, so much so that if I had had food I would not have been able to enjoy it. Mr. Hopkins' message still rings in my ears.

I am particularly interested in this man as a great leader. I see a great future before him. He is a man of unusual skill and courage. To find one of his type and ability is no easy job.

I shall be looking forward to reading his 1935 Yule message. Let America produce a thousand Harry L. Hopkinses! M. A. O.

Mr. Rea Packs A Wallop

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the last 15 years I have endeavored through my publication, The Far Eastern Review, to combat a conspiracy hatched in Peking during the World War to pit the United States against Japan in the Pacific. Only a Senate investigation could bring out and establish the truth in such a way that the newspapers could report it.

The only answer to any facts or figures calculated to clarify the situation is to call the writer names. So I am not surprised to read, in The Post of December 10, a letter signed by a Chinese gentleman entitled "A Real Responsibility," the objective of which apparently was to get in print that part which reads, "this Mr. Rea is notoriously known as a Japanese propagandist."

Your correspondent emphasizes a truth that American editors are prone to overlook. Americans can accept adviserships to the Chinese Government, receive pay to disseminate Chinese propaganda and yap for war with Japan, and are always referred to in complimentary terms. When another American presents the other side, he is characterized as a "notorious Japanese propagandist." I make the categoric statement that every American so stigmatized has done his best to avert war and with few exceptions every pro-Chinese American publicist has done his best to get his country into war.

A campaign of misrepresentation, invective, vilification and downright falsehood swept this Nation into war with Spain. The same methods sent our young manhood to the slaughter in 1917. We are now being propagandized in the same old way into a war in the Pacific.

A campaign is again in full swing to pit the United States against Japan. In the event of war, American shipping in the Pacific will be destroyed. Our trade with the mainland of Asia will automatically come to a standstill. Japan will be bankrupted and set back for a generation and the trade and development of China, that prize of modern commerce, will go to Europe, possibly to Russia. The debt problem would solve itself and we would return to our old position as a debtor Nation. If we win, we lose. Who would benefit from such a war?

After all, if and when the showdown comes, it will be the manhood of America who will do the fighting. We will also be expected to contribute billions of dollars to strengthen the Chinese war-lords in the hope that they will take an active part as our allies in such a war. We would repeat the mistakes of the World War. Naturally, anything that might enlighten the American dupes as to the facts on the other side of the case must not be published in this country. It is most unfriendly to China. This explains the expostulatory letter from the Chinese gentleman published in The Post of December 10.

Did you ever hear a League of Nations enthusiast, a debt cancellation advocate, a Soviet agitator or an American publicity adviser to the Chinese government characterized as a "notorious propagandist?" No. These un-American activities are always legitimate, praiseworthy and patriotic.

I have only this to say. A Senate committee is now conducting an inquiry into un-American activities. It would be an excellent opportunity to bring out the facts why an American who advocates peace, understanding, good will and cooperation between his country and Japan should be slandered and stigmatized as "a notorious Japanese propagandist" while other pro-Chinese Americans are esteemed as highly patriotic and distinguished citizens.

The Post with its powerful influence in national affairs would perform a public and patriotic service in editorially advocating such an investigation. If one Senate committee conducting investigations into the arms racket can go back to 1916 for evidence on which to base its findings, then another Senate committee can go back to the same period to establish the facts surrounding a conspiracy to plunge the Nation into a war in the Pacific, that may or may not have some connection with the sale of arms and ammunitions.

We may awake any fine morning to find ourselves in a state of war. The killing of a few Japanese farmers in our Pacific Coast States or the throwing of a bomb by some crazed Japanese super-patriot into the American Embassy at Tokyo, and the fat would be in the fire. Let us have the truth before it is too late.

The Post Impressionist

"Season's Greetings."

Post Office, Friday.

THERE is one solemn fact about most Christmas cards—a guilty secret that nearly all men and women share, yet never utter—rarely, indeed, even confess to themselves: The average Christmas-card receiver does not really look at the cards when they arrive.

"Anything interesting?" asks the wife.

"Nope," the husband answers. "Nothing but more cards."

Lovey things, perhaps. Sweet remembrances. Touching sentiments. But the wife runs through them like Roscoe Turner through the air:

"Some people do have the worst taste! . . . Here's one from the Stebbinses . . . Jim, don't you think it's funny the Mullenses haven't sent us any? They always used to . . . And here's Sally Raleigh's.—Gracious, we forgot to send her one!"

"We forgot? I like that!"

"Well, but, Jim, you went over the list with me. What'll I do? I haven't a single one left, and it's so late! I'll have to go right out and buy one for her . . . Unless one of these'll do— But, no, people will write their names on them—when they don't have their names printed there. It's so sort of suspicious of them, I think . . ."

Plenty of talk.

No real study of the cards.

"Well there is no denying that,
As Christmas time approaches,
Along with it comes always
A flood of Yuletide cards
All fancied-up with reindeer-teams,
Or huge old-fashioned coaches,
Or etchings of cathedral views—
And verse by lyric bards."

That's the way the Post-Impressionist felt about it himself—until he caught those very lines on one of the cards that came to him.

Then, however, this frank expression stirred his conscience, and he began to look at his collection . . .

Now he is glad he did. He'd felt that, by means of Christmas-cards, the Machine Age was subjecting sentiment to mass-production. Well, he was wrong.

The sender of any Christmas-card gives something of his or her very self to the recipient—gives, in fact, an intimate glimpse of his or her character. That's a lot.

Here's a plain white card engraved with a name, though with never a flourish typographical or mental, "Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." The sender reveals the direct well-wishing executive. Then here's a card bearing a map that shows you how to drive to a friend's new house: the mind hospitable. And nobody could send this telegram except such a man as he who perfectly played the role of the gentle father in "Ah, Wilderness!" at the National Theater a month or so ago; "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year; God bless you and yours—George M. Cohan" . . .

Print isn't impersonal, either—not if you know how to use it. Take those verses we began to quote a minute ago. They went out—in type Christmasy crimson, yet undecorated—to all the hundreds of friends of two well-known New Yorkers, Clayland and Ellen Morgan. And see how intimate these poets made their message:

"The Morgans much prefer to have
Their card one which expresses
A sentiment that's personal
And comes from out their heart;
And so we take the envelopes
And fill in the addresses.
Now, let us us see—as for the card
Itself—how shall we start?

"So: We might tell you, to begin—
In case you care to know it—
Just what we've done and how we've been.
Well, Nineteen Thirty-Four
Has been a good year for us
(Though our bank-accounts don't show it)
For we've been blessed with health and love
And friends. Could we ask more?

"We've seen a lot of sunsets
From our window o'er the river;
We've had a lot of good friends
Grace our home here on the Drive;
We've done a bit of giving
Which we know has pleased the giver;
And lovely music's helped us both
Be glad that we're alive . . .

"We've had our share of worries—
But we've had our share of pleasures;
We've had a little illness—
But we've had a lot of health,
And we believe that health and love
And friends are priceless treasures—
More priceless far than Mr.
Rockefeller's kind of wealth."

So now we realize that it is a mistake to tear up Christmas cards!

Only, some of the nicest Christmas-cards destroy—so to speak—themselves. One of the very nicest that we know of is fading now—and, oh, how we hate to see it fade! It was a big bunch of yard-long yellow rosebuds. And it was received by a temporary invalid along with a card that read:

"To a man that has the grippe on Christmas Day."

Yugoslavia Emerges As Solidified Nation

Acceptance Of League Decision Following Assassination Of Alexander Strengthens State.

By J. C. Rocca.

NOW that the danger of war has been removed by the compromise between Hungary and Yugoslavia concluded at Geneva in regard to the controversy over the assassination of King Alexander, it is of interest to examine the present economic situation of Yugoslavia, the plaintiff country before the Council of the League of Nations.

Although only about as large as the State of Oregon, Yugoslavia, with its population of 14,000,000, is a land of racial contrasts with wide differences between the three main groups of Serbians, Croatians, and Slovenes, as well as the large minorities of Germans and Magyars. The tragic death of the King really put Yugoslavia to a test as a nation, demonstrating whether sufficient community of interests exists among the different groups of the population to justify their union in a single kingdom. By accepting the decision of the League of Nations, Yugoslavia comes out of the test victorious as a solidified nation, and with indications that the political truce with Hungary will facilitate the solution of the economic problems impeding the recovery of the country.

Agriculture is the basic industry of Yugoslavia, and the agricultural element comprises about 80 per cent of the total population. Wheat, corn, and barley are the most important products, and in the last few months, from December, 1933, to August, 1934, the index of prices of agricultural products, based on 1926 as 100, rose from 52.7 to 64.8.

The most fertile districts for the production of cereals are near the Hungarian border, and like Hungary, Yugoslavia is primarily an exporter of cereals. But the economic rivalry with Hungary lies primarily in the raising of cattle.

THE position of the Yugoslav farmers during the economic crisis was aggravated by the exorbitant interest rates on mortgages, which often exceeded 25 per cent. In 1933 a special "farmers' debts law" was adopted providing that all debts should be converted into long-term notes repayable within 12 years, bearing an interest rate of 4 per cent to private creditors and 6 per cent to the banks.

At the close of 1933 a new banking law was also adopted providing for better guarantees to depositors and facilitating the merging of banks. Increased confidence has contributed much to the reappearance of hoarded money, and, since last January, for the first time since 1931, saving deposits have again begun to rise.

The country has extensive deposits of copper, zinc and lignite, but lack of capital has retarded the full development of these resources. However, mining was more active in 1933 than in previous years, especially with respect to copper and zinc. Total exports to the United States amounted in 1933 to $871,000, or 1.9 per cent of the total exports to all countries, crude copper being the principal product reaching American markets. Imports from the United States in 1933 totaled $2,032,000, or 5.1 per cent of the total imports, the largest item being raw cotton, reflecting the increased needs of Yugoslavia's textile industry.

A favorable development in Yugoslavia's foreign trade during 1933 was the increase in the export surplus to some $7,000,000, from approximately $3,000,000 in the previous year. Austria, Germany and Italy leading in both imports and exports. In the early months of 1934, the economic council of the Little Entente, meeting at Prague, explored methods of increasing trade between Yugoslavia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, and a plan was drawn up to forge economic links reinforcing the political links between the three states. But aside from prospects of Czechoslovak industries supplying Yugoslavia with certain manufactured products, the possibility of increasing trade between the three countries is very meager, owing to the fact that any preferential tariff would provoke retaliatory measures by other countries.

AS regards Yugoslavia's commercial relations with Hungary, Dr. L. Pasvelski, of the Brookings Institution, who made a thorough investigation of economic nationalism in the Danubian States, points out that: "Yugoslavia has little to gain from a close cooperation with Hungary; the two countries are much too similar in their economic characteristics to have any advantage to offer each other. Fear of foreign economic domination is a strong factor in Yugoslavia's attitude toward the question of a Danubian economic union."

According to a report of the United States Department of Commerce, "Yugoslavia, through which pass all the land and river routes from Western Europe to the Near East, is the natural gateway for commerce between the two sections. The abundance of labor and water power, combined with great agricultural and mineral resources, makes it a potential industrial center of the future from which merchandise can be supplied for the markets of the Near East. . ."

Hungary seeks a commercial outlet in the Adriatic Sea through Croatia to her former port of Fiume, and on this point, at least, both countries, Yugoslavia and Hungary, have a common interest in railroad construction and harbor development.

American investments in Yugoslavia at the end of 1933, were estimated at $78,000,000, and the number of tourists visiting the country is steadily increasing. Owing to the suspension of reparation payments by Germany, payment of interest on the foreign debt was discontinued by Yugoslavia in October, 1932.

THE proposed budget for 1934-1935, compared with the previous budget, shows a decline in receipts of 75,000,000 dinars, while expenditures have been cut down by 267,000,000 dinars. The balancing of the budget has not been achieved as a result of improvement in economic conditions, but by a strict policy of deflation.

Louis Adamic, the American writer, a native of Yugoslavia, expressed the opinion recently in The Nation, that Republican sentiment will tend to augment throughout the country and that possibly within a year or two Yugoslavia will be a union of four semiautonomous republics: Slovenia, Croatia, Serbia and Macedonia, with Belgrade as federal capital. In this case, all the economic and financial problems which Yugoslavia faced during the 15 years of experience as a unified state will come up again and complicate a situation already difficult.

As the London economist remarks: "The Balkan countries, while still learning to rely on each other and seek strength in unity, have found themselves in the surprising condition of being courted by the big powers instead of going constantly begging themselves . . ." Yugoslavia has been courted recently by France as well as by Germany and at the same time she has pursued a Balkan policy of her own, inaugurating an economic rapproachment with Bulgaria and Greece. The regency may be even better able than a king to take advantage of such courting and to promote the economic progress of the country.

What Yugoslavia chiefly needs is a decentralized administration,and the history of Serbia itself furnishes examples of regencies increasing the prestige of the dynasty such as the regency of Prince Milan, which in 1869 introduced a more liberal constitution.

Weather Toll

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

The United States suffered the worst drought in a century during 1934 in a series of pranks by the weather man which marked the year as one of the most freakish in a generation.

The drought in the Middle West caused 2,000 deaths and seldom paralleled damage to livestock and crops which in cash ran into billions of dollars. The natural disaster will cause 1934 to go down in history as "The Year of the Great Drought."

The freaks of nature brought frosts to Southern climates during the fall, particularly in Florida.

In California, land of sunshine, heavy torrential rains caused terrific damage in recent weeks, after similar storms at the start of the year, in January.

With Florida shivering, the Midwest was exceptionally late in getting its fall freezes.

Records Are Shattered.

The Great Lakes region had a blizzard of real winter proportions early in December, with a foot of snow in many sections.

In New York, all time records in cold and hot temperatures were shattered. February was the coldest month ever recorded by the Weather Bureau on Manhattan—and heat records fell in every summer month —June, July and August.

In the West, the drought was not without advantages. Prices of crops and live stock rose throughout the summer, so that produce brought higher prices than last year. The Agricultural Adjustment Administration paid benefits to many whose crops wilted and burned to nothing, and they were not destitute.

Unofficial estimates of crop and live stock damages were placed between $2,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000, but agriculturalists were quick to point out that the farm income increased nearly $1,000,000,000 over last year, due in part to the effects of the drought.

The 1934 spring season, March to May, inclusive, was the driest on record for North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois.

Only Two Towns Normal.

High temperatures were the rule during the summer. The maximum average temperature for July was 102 degrees at Topeka, Kans., and Fort Smith, Ark., and 100 at Columbia, Mo., and Oklahoma City.

The seasonal temperature reading was above normal from every Weather Bureau station except Nantucket, Mass., and Wytheville, Va.

Weather Bureau officials pointed out that a swing of not more than two degrees from normal was not unusual but said deviations of four or five degrees for each day in the year certainly were exceptional.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

They Don't Understand.

IT'S mighty strange that an Administration having so many women in it as the present one should have as its conception of the more abundant life the giving of an electric washing machine to every woman. It is unfolding now that that is what the more abundant life means.

BARGERON.

Some of us had thought there was trickery in the promise from the outset. An innate wariness had kept us from thrilling to the lilting voice of Rexford Tugwell. We felt none of the gayety that was in the air. The phrase, "more abundant life," sung and sung again, sung with the spirit of Christmas carols, with the fervor of jazz, with the depth of religious hymns, sung in many keys and to many tunes, never gave us that feeling of exaltation which it did to the singers, but it did to millions of people.

And now it appears that what is meant is an electric washing machine. That's a flop, a jolt to a believing people for fair.

It took us a long time to catch on. For nearly two years now the "more abundant life" has been an intangible, spiritual something which neither the scoffers nor the believers nor the promisers attempted to define. There is not a woman in the land, however, who didn't have reason to believe it was something like flowers or candy—not a washing machine.

They are such good men, the men in this Administration are, and men, we thought, of understanding, men who understood the yearnings and pangs of the mass heart. Their lack of a practical side was something we loved. So gay and irresponsible, they seemed.

Then to learn that their conception of happiness is an electric washing machine for the women—well, it's a shock. There is not, as a matter of fact, as much happiness in one of those things as there is in Mr. Coolidge's bathtubs.

But a washing machine it is to be. There is no need of blinding ourselves to the facts. Through a gigantic grid system, getting its electricity from power projects in four sections of the country, the Administration is to bring its more abundant life to the people by wire. A washing machine in every home, that is the slogan.

One gets the impression that the Administration itself didn't have anything exactly in mind when it began promising the more abundant life. It thought first of the phrase and then set to work to get something to fit it.

Like a man who waits until Christmas Eve to buy his wife a present, it has grabbed something it thought would be useful in the house. Ah, the Administration doesn't know women. And yet there are so many a part of it.

What very likely happened is that the Administration studied the advertisements in its shopping for the more abundant life and finally succumbed to one of those which shows a woman deeply wrinkled bended over an old-fashioned tub and then one with no wrinkles at all standing beside a washing machine. That's what probably happened, it surrendered to the seductiveness of an ad man.

The machine will take the wrinkles out of the face, too, but the women had a right to assume that the Administration had something in mind to take them out of the heart. If the phrase "more abundant life" itself did not imply that, the lyrical way in which Rexford Tugwell sang it did.

• • • •

It's a let-down, my friends. Recall the cooing of their wooing, the poetry of their professed love.

"I am going to make you happy, ineffably happy," they promised, and there was what appeared to be gallantry in their eyes. And then for a wedding present they give us a washing machine. Ye gawds!

No End Of Books

'Modern Publicity: 1934-35' Presents Gorgeous Formats in the Playground of Advertising.

By Theodore Hall.

WITH characteristic sumptuousness, the Studio, N. Y., has issued the 1934-35 number of its annual, Moderan Publicity (paper, $3.50; cloth, $4.50), edited by F. A. Mercer and W. Gaunt. English in origin, it stresses advertising design in that country. But the 200 plates—12 in color—embrace the handsomest examples from a dozen nations. Here is the "vade mecum" for all practitioners who deal in format, type and illustration for publicity purposes—an end which the writer of the preface, calling himself "The Road-Mender," terms "the most virile and influential force operative today in those countries we are pleased to consider the most civilized."

I am sure there is no realm which shows so strenous a searching after "modernity" as advertising. Pick up a magazine but two years old—the stories will fit our day almost to a hair's breadth; the illustrations will seem just the slightest bit quaint, and the advertising will strike us as positively antediluvian. Nowhere does tempus fidget so.

Which is just what makes an annual like Modern Publicity so valuable to the profession, especially in this country. For, in spite of the fact that you might think our immense volume of advertising causes us to lead the world in advertising design, a very few glances at this book will show how stiff and traditional are most of our formats, how far we lag behind Europe in free, ingenious and spirited compositions. These latest reports from the advertising front will be an eye-opener to agency men.

Type design we do well, but muff hand lettering. Advertising photographs we do wonderfully well, and in the matter of posters we simply aren't in the running. We are either coolly "institutional" in our formats or abysmally vulgar. Somewhere between is the mean—caught neatly in this book—in what I must call the playground of advertising.

• • • •

For the physical presentation of an "ad," the infinite loving, exasperating care which layout men and their confreres take over copy, layout and illustration, remains a form of play. That is, it is largely done for its own sake, for the professional fun of fussing with these elements. To be sure, anyone interested can find huge reams of data which hopefully set out to prove that an artistic design, in the best sense of the word, produces the end-result of advertising—sales. There are books and books on advertising design, which lug in everything from the perfect rectangle of the ancient Greek mathematicians to the masterly decorations of sixteenth century Geoffrey Tory for the "Book of Hours."

And the proof of my dissenting opinion from the functionalism of these efforts is the plain fact that copy-writers consider copy the heart of an "ad," typographers swear by type, artists by illustration, and layout-men by layout.

"Selling Hyper-Thyroid Soap?" they would exclaim. "We are making a work of art!" Each is, in his line and lights.

Advertising production, we must whisper this, is pretty largely a war between the professional practitioners and the man who pays the bills, the vendor of the product.

In the years of prosperity the practitioner wins, and advertising blooms with exuberant and, one must grant, very pleasing arrays of ornamental design and atmospheric illustration. Take one example—the astoundingly beautiful borders once drawn by W. D. Teague, whose "Profile" appears in the New Yorker of December 15, for everything from automobiles to office equipment. But they and the school which copied them are no more.

For what happens in the years of headache? The vendor wants sales and no frills, and the result turned out by harassed agencies runs the gamut from a comic strip with "balloon" dialogue to a zealous effort to tie up Houdini's tricks with cigarettes. Behind these curious phenomena we can hear the grumblings of practitioners who have to save for home relaxation the dream-designing of "ads" a la Aldus Manutius or the examples from "Modern Publicity: 1934-35."

And why not that play, that professional joy with type and illustration? At least it gives us a handsomer landscape of newspapers and magazines. As to its sales effectiveness, there is only one means of judgment. Does it lead the reader direct to the product, or does it not?

In the "Lion's Mouth" department of the January Harpers, Gilbert Seldes speaks up in fictional form for the laymen. Mr. James Mortimer, the little tale runs, gave up gasoline because he couldn't get himself interested in dinosaurs, modern watches because an "ad" insulted his grandfather's keywinder, tires because he got no thrill in reading the history of rubber in the Malay Peninsula, and so on in disheartening array. Mr. Mortimer died of physical and spiritual malnutrition, because he was no longer interested in the objects before him. It might be a parable.

• • • •

The other night I went into a drug store for something—in a cup, may I say—to warm a constant reader's stomach. A sign behind the counter took my eye at once—"cHocOlaTe," it said, and I was quite stunned with the completeness, neatness, and symmetry of the word "hot" coming out in the middle of the word "chocolate." What a joy that must have been to the man who first found it, I thought, and so on about everything else connected with what the profession would call a "natural."

Pretty well lost in admiration for the sign I ordered coffee.

Woodrow Wilson

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THIS is the birthday of Thomas Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, who was born in Staunton, Va., December 28, 1856. His boyhood was spent in Georgia and South Carolina, and in 1875 he entered Princeton, where he became conspicuous in debating and was an undergraduate director of athletics. In his senior year he published an article on politics which appeared in "The International Review," a remarkable achievement for an undergraduate. He studied law at the University of Virginia, began practising in Atlanta, but quickly left that city for graduate studies in history at Johns Hopkins University, where he took his Ph.D. in 1886 and also sang on the Glee Club.

He became a member of the faculty at Bryn Mawr, where he taught history and economics; then he taught economics at Wesleyan. While he was at Wesleyan, he was head coach of the football team.

In 1890 Wilson was called to Princeton, and I myself remember an evening in 1898 when, as a member of the Yale Faculty, I accompanied our debating team to Princeton. Yale won the debate and at the dinner following it I asked the men at the head table to sign my dinner card, and I got without knowing it, the signatures of two Presidents of the United States—Grover Cleveland presided and Woodrow Wilson was one of the speakers. When I was called on to make my speech, it was quarter to four in the morning. I did not talk long.

In 1902 Wilson became President of Princeton, and in 1910 was elected Governor of New Jersey, and in 1912, President of the United States.

Wilson was undoubtedly one of the ablest men in the long list of our Presidents. He had a powerful mind and an extraordinary gift for clear expression. None of his predecessors excelled him in the power of clear exposition.

His faults were faults of temperament, which not only made him a large number of bitter personal enemies, but prevented him from carrying out the plans that were closest to his heart and in all probability shortened his life.

Woodrow Wilson remains a permanent figure not only in American but in world history.

Coleman to Run For Hall's Seat

Announces for House of Delegates in Leesburg District.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—P. J. Coleman, of Sterling, farmer and supervisor of Broad Run District for six years, today announced his candidacy for the House of Delegates, subject to the Democratic primary, to be held in August. Mr. Coleman is the first candidate formally to enter the campaign for the lower branch of the General Assembly in which Loudoun County has been represented for a number of years by Wilbur C. Hall. There are rumors of other candidates entering the field.

It has been persistently rumored that Mr. Hall will be appointed by Gov. Peery as chairman of the State conservation commission.

Lonaconing Bank Is Under Receiver

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 27 (AP).—John J. Ghingher, State bank commissioner, today was named receiver of the old Lonaconing Savings Bank as the final step in the liquidation of the institution.

Ghingher's bond was set by Circuit Court, where the receivership proceedings were filed, at $60,000. Oliver H. Bruce, jr., was named counsel for the receiver.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank was put on a restricted basis after the bank holiday in March, 1932. Subsequently a new bank, known as the Allegany Savings Bank, was organized and the old institution was put under a conservator.

Depositors of the Lonaconing Savings Bank have received distributions totaling 40 per cent.

Allegany County Men Take Exams for CCC

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 27 (AP).—Physical examinations were given to 125 applicants, all single men, for the Civilian Conservation Corps today at the State armory. The entrants are all from Allegany County.

Recruits selected will report January 2 to leave for camp in Baltimore for processing, uniforming and equipment. The new groups are replacements to fill vacancies in the various forestry camps in the Third Corps Area.

Prophets With Honor

Back in 1910, when fortune telling was all the rage, prophets peered into crystal balls and predicted a bright future. By 1935, planes would fly 100 miles an hour, women would have the right to vote, the world's economic ills would be more or less cured, and everything would be lovely.

Some of those prophecies have come true, even if the soothsayers did miss out on the World War. Sam Glassman, poring through the dusty files of 1910, recalls those predictions in an interesting article. Watch for it in the

New Deal Must Solve High Building Costs

New Public Works Outlays May Continue To Freeze Out-Of-Line Prices And Wages.

By Elliott Thurston.

NOT the least of New Deal dilemmas which is beginning to attract the notice it deserves is the effect of NRA codes, of the public works program, even of direct relief, in freezing costs and prices. The effect has been most visible in building.

That natively unhonored prophete of the New Deal, John Maynard Keynes, the British economist, concluded last spring that "the high level of building costs in this country (the United States) appears to be scandalous, both of building materials and of direct labor."

"They must be more than 50 per cent above, and perhaps double, what they are in England," he remarked. "So long as the volume of work remains as low as it is now, these high costs do not mean high incomes to producers. Thus, no one benefits. It is of the first importance for the Administration to take whatever steps are in its power to reduce unit costs in these industries against an undertaking to increase the volume of business sufficiently to maintain and probably to increase actual earnings."

Business, which has urged the dole because it imposes the least drain upon the budget, may as well be prepared for recommendations in President Roosevelt's budget for additional huge outlays for public work and other "made work." The question then will be whether the wage rates paid by the Government and the prices paid for building and other materials will continue to discourage private enterprise. For labor is not likely to accept lower wages from private industry than can be obtained on Government work nor is industry inclined to sell at a high price to the Government and at a lower price to private enterprise, even if codes permitted.

THAT Mr. Roosevelt is quite aware of the problem has been evident from a number of his comments, at press conferences, on the desirability of basing wages on annual rather than hourly returns. Also several New Deal agencies have from time to time tackled the possibilities of inducing both labor and industry to join in reducing building costs. Nothing has come of any of these efforts as yet and the question remains whether the new public works outlays will perpetuate an inflexibility of wages and prices which have contributed to keeping private activity stagnant.

Some observers feel that until the basic labor problem is settled, that is, until industry agrees to accept unions generally, labor leaders can not be induced to face the question of whether it is not to their own interest to look to annual incomes rather than to fixed hourly rates. While the battle for union recognition goes on, the self-evident advantage of even a small annual income over prohibitively high hourly wages becomes a secondary question.

However this may be—and regardless of whether the New Deal's indecision about the interpretation of Section 7(a) has complicated settlement of the labor issue, as many believe it has—the fact remains that private building will continue to lag if the Government continues to freeze high prices and costs. The effect is about the same as having the Government step into the building field itself and crowd private business out.

• • • •

THE dilemma arose, in part, from the original New Deal obsession with the idea of restoring a pre-existing or preconceived price level. One of the most important developments within the New Deal has been the apparent desire to abandon this idea and to achieve instead a stability in the monetary field and a workable equilibrium of domestic prices and costs. Mr. Roosevelt, in fact, has parted company with Senator Thomas and the other inflationists who are still talking about restoring 1926 price levels.

However, prices of labor and materials in the building field have remained close to 1929 levels and well above 1926. If they are to be frozen there by codes, by the PWA or even by dole rates, they will obviously remain out of line.

There is every reason to believe that a determined leadership by the New Deal would be able to persuade all those concerned in the building trade and industries that it is to their own interest to readjust the costs of building. If this problem is neglected, if the forthcoming public works program or other Government outlays in the name of relief or pump-priming are to perpetuate out-of-line costs, then the private activity which Mr. Roosevelt professes to be trying to revive will continue to be set back.

So far, what slender information has emanated from the budget discussions suggests that the conferees have been occupied merely with how much money to spend on this or that form of relief or made work. Now that the President seems to be veering away from higher price levels, and toward the attainment of better equilibrium in costs and prices, it has become highly important to see that disequilibrium is not continued in the building field. For that is still the most propitious field in which to bring about that restoration of private activity which will in turn provide jobs, and ease the load upon the budget.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Old Year Exits.

The old year is staggering around the ring awaiting the final gong, and looks barely able to go the distance.

• • • •

It was a good year as years go. And many people will be glad to see this one go.

It stepped into the ring and was introduced as a great battler, the best prospect since 1929, but it was too cautious at all times, and never got going.

Still, it was not without its accomplishments, and can always point to the Dionne quintuplets.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-five will go down as the year of the unanswered luff, the battle of the protests, Huey Long's debut as a football coach, and the indorsement of the Insull family by mass juries.

It was the year of the war on Mae West, the revival of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," and the kidnaping of the G. O. P.

Max Baer removed Primo Carnera, thus reviving the heavy industries, the Prince of Wales became 40 and put on tortoise-shell glasses, Gen. Hugh Johnson was taken out for a new pitcher with the bases full, and Soviet Russia revived indiscriminate slaughter on a scale heretofore limited to the bloody czars.

Queen Mary named a ship after a queen by the name of Mary, Senator Borah called for a new Republican party instead of looking for the old one, and Dr. Wirt relayed a story that President Roosevelt was Kerensky hiding behind a couple of Blue Eagles.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-five saw the birth of the Liberty League, the stream-line train, the oversized postage stamp, and the funniest hats ever designed for American women.

It will be known as the year Smedley Butler said he was offered the leadership of a march on Washington, the year the stock markets were operated by a "Don't" list, and the year that proved there were really two pitchers named Dean.

It set a new mark for originality by being a year in which a baseball umpire was fined for using bad language to a player.

All in all, looking back at it, it had its points. And its highest ones were probably the exterminating of public enemies in groups of two, and the births of babies in groups of five.

Accounting for Any Oversights.

Santa had a good deal of trouble getting around this year, we understand, because of the codes covering porch climbing, package deliveries and chimney cleaning.

Mr. Bernard M. Baruch urges the War Department to store tin for the next war. Are we going to war, like the French, in taxicabs?

"Youth for work; old age for leisure" is the slogan of the Townsend party. Old age's toughest job will be to sell that idea to youth.

Envoy to Speak in Georgia.

Athen, Ga., Dec. 27 (AP).—Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, has accepted an invitation to speak at the annual Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Georgia here on January 23, it was announced today by President S. V. Sanford.

$1,100,000 Bonds Sold by Maryland

Highway Securities Bring 102.179 at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—The State Roads Commission today sold $1,100,000 worth of its 4 per cent bonds, authorized by the 1933 Legislature. The bonds were sold at 102.179 to Alexander Brown & Sons, of Baltimore.

The bonds were part of the $4,000,000 debentures which the Legislature authorized, and the sale leaves but $270,000 worth in the commission's hands.

The remainder, William A. Codd, chief auditor of the commission, said, were sold to the Public Works Administration and have been resold to various buyers.

Four-Master Finishes 'Worst, Longest' Voyage

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—Capt. George H. Hopkins, master of the two-weeks' overdue schooner Doris Hamlin, today stepped ashore after the "worst and longest" voyage in his 40 years of seafaring.

It was the first time he had touched terra firma since the Doris Hamlin cleared Fort Liberte, Haiti, November 21 for a voyage through a succession of screaming gales and heavy seas. But Capt. Hopkins was convinced that the four-master—one of the last along the coast—and its crew of nine men were never in danger.

Virginia Labor Group To Gird for Primary

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—The Virginia Federation of Labor will get an early start here Sunday in preparation for the Democratic primary of next August, when candidates of the party for both the House and Senate of the State Legislature will be nominated.

Adoption of the legislative program submitted by W. D. Anderson, chairman of the federation's legislative committee, will be considered by the executive committee.

Fokine Ballet Girls to Dance At the Troika

Russians to Be Featured in Holiday Floor Show; Habana Plans Fete.

By Kay Ware.

Troika will bring six Russian girls from the Fokine ballet to their New Year's floor show. Matt Windsor is making arrangements now, and when they come you can be assured that their performance will be out of the ordinary.

The present Troika show features Nadia, concert singer, and Eddie Stanislof, whirlwind dancer. He whirls so fast that fuzz flies off his clothes in his turns. Lydia Dylewski does a solo dance and a waltz with Eddie. Mike and his violin, Matt and his accordion finish the show.

Russian favors—dolls, vanity cases and cigarette cases, all made in the Soviet Union—will be given away New Year's eve. Russian breakfast, including blini, butter, caviar and sour cream, will be served after the tumult dies.

Incidentally the doorman is—or was—a real Cossack. He knows very little English, all complimentary; helps ladies out of taxis and says, "Good evening, pretty lady." He gets "thank you" and "please" mixed, due to an idiosyncracy of the Russian language. He will say, "Taxi, thank you?" murmurs "Please" when you give him a tip, and is probably one of the biggest men in town.

Another sidelight: Chef Alex Schlein, upon learning that salt and pepper was served on the tables, was almost mortally insulted and considerably surprised. He believes he knows how to season Russian food better than Americans do.

The New Year's party at Club Habana will bring a special menu, Latin-America decorations and original souvenirs. Stars of the floor show are Tarrant and Dacita, with the Cuban danzon, the basis of the carioca and rhumba. Their walt moderne and tango are sophisticated and smooth. They have just come from the Waldorf-Astoria.

Jolly and Ralph Hawkins collaborate on a new comedy song. With Moe Baer and his music, two dance floors are ideal for those who are happiest when their feet are in motion.

Madrillon's show: Marguerite and Arthur with boleros, waltzes, tangoes and an Apache dance. Marilyn Willys does acrobatics; Frances Delaney is booked to join the Brusiloffians. Try the Spanish champagne.

Eddie Peabody will be at the Shoreham tonight and tomorrow. If you haven't seen him, you should. It's part of your night club education.

Other headliners: Blanche Collins, who impersonates Mae West, Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Ethel Barrymore, Maurice Chevalier and others. Elvira and Stephen, ballroom dancers, already are known to Shoreham audiences.

The tango hour offers Da Costa's Orchestra and Tiny, singer. Sometimes Tiny sings a ditty or two in the ballroom, but he says he's more comfortable in the intimacy of the lounge. He has memorized six choruses of "You're the Top," and is composing a few more of his own.

Broadmoor Silver Grill prepares for a New Year's party. Proprietor Manon has several fancy ideas up his sleeve, and his ideas are always good.

The Willard has plans for New Year's Eve. The bamboo room will be given the night off, and John Slaughter, with his 15-piece band, and the two featured singers, Fenton Froom and Ernestine Gardner, will move up to the large ballroom to entertain. Supper, a floor show, favors, noisemakers and a 3 a. m. breakfast may be enjoyed in exchange for $5.15. The 15 cents is tax.

Hi-Hat's new dance floor, to be used New Year's Eve, holds a lot of responsibility. If the dancing idea is a success, the Ambassador may inaugurate a new policy whereby dancing will be a regular feature.

A floor show is offered with surprise acts.

Heigh-Ho is almost booked up for New Year's and is trying to figure out where to put last-minute guests. Favors, surprises and a general good time are promised.

The Mayflower Lounge will be the only room open at the hotel on New Year's Eve. Continentalism will be exhibited in the elaborate buffet supper. A dance team will entertain between dances. Sidney's music will go on as long as you wish.

Randle Gardens will have stage, screen and radio stars for New Year's entertainment. Also the warmest jazz band in town, Ridgeley's Hollywood Serenaders. Dancing from 9 to dawn. No cover charge.

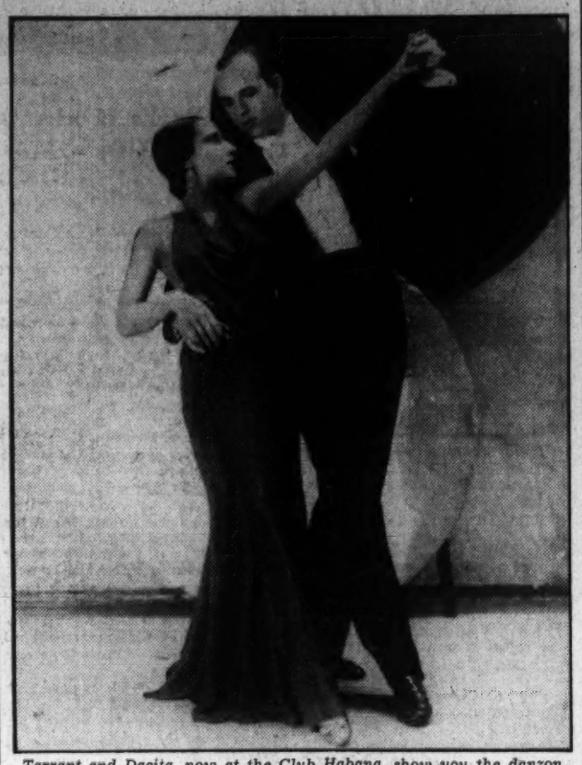
The Parrot offers a cocktail hour with sound effects of crackling wood fires, and clink of ice in glasses. Tall recessed windows and beamed ceilings give it a home-like atmosphere. Here you may sip and chat, later have a luncheon, tea or dinner. Southern menus a specialty. "Don" Donahue, of the Carlton Hotel and the St. Charles of New Orleans, is bartender.

Incidentally this mansion used to be one of the most popular meeting places back in the days before prohibition.

The Hangar Club, newly decorated, offers a special program New Year's Eve. Bert Motley and orchestra go on the job at 5 in the afternoon and continue as long as guests need music. A dinner floor show for no extra charge.

Pilgrim Club's grand opening is tomorrow. Maurine and Lorva, dance team, and Helen Lloyd, personality singer, are featured. Pilgrim Club's the new Stockade Place.

Two Who Dance in the Cuban Style



Tarrant and Dacita, now at the Club Habana, show you the danzon, the dance that is the basis of the carioca and rhumba.

Don't Send Your Boy to College, Is Sung by Many Institutions

Number of Privately Endowed Schools Making Strenuous Efforts to Weed Out Those Judged Unfit for Higher Education.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Complicated and widespread efforts to keep students out of college, instead of bringing in as many as possible, are being made by many of the privately endowed colleges, Dr. Robert L. Kelly, executive secretary of the Association of American Colleges, disclosed tonight.

Dr. Kelly asserted that colleges are making a careful selection of students and are giving "12 or 15 kinds of tests" to weed out those not worth four years of higher education.

"In the past," he said, "it was the belief that every student should have the privilege of starting at kindergarten and going through to a Ph. D. without its costing him a cent.

"But the colleges now feel that not by any means should all young people in this country go to college. A great majority ought not to go—as a matter of fact, a great majority don't."

Many colleges, Dr. Kelly said, are now requiring certificates from individuals — often their own alumni—as to the capacity of a student. Oberlin, which he described as "easily one of the best colleges in America," does this.

Dr. Kelly pointed out that other colleges, such as Princeton, Vassar, and Wells College at Aurora, N. Y., will admit only students in the upper tenth or seventh or quarter of their high school classes.

"The motive back of all this," Dr. Kelly asserted, "is that colleges want to do better work and turn out a better product. They are working at it just as hard as industry."

State or municipal institutions, however, are not following the tendency to limit students, since laws require them to accept high school graduates in their territory.

Farmer Is Wearing Suit Bought in 1912 To Sit in Jury Box

Luray, Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—G. T. Long, a 75-year-old farmer of this county, is still wearing a suit of clothes that he bought in 1912, when he was summoned as a juror in the celebrated Allen case in Hillsville, Carroll County, Va., in that year. The suit was bought from H. W. Carey here in December, 1912. The Allen case was one of the most celebrated in the history of the State.

The Allen clan, while their trial was starting, shot and killed three court officers, including Judge Massie. Some of the Allens were hanged; others sent to the penitentiary for life. Mr. Long's 1912 suit of clothes is still in good shape.

James Moler Buried In Cambridge Cemetery

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). Funeral services for James Moler, who was connected with the business life of Cambridge for nearly 50 years, were conducted today by the Rev. O. B. Newton, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church South. Interment was in Cambridge Cemetery.

Surviving, besides his wife, are a daughter, Mrs. F. T. Cotten, of Washington, D. C.; a son, Calvert Moler, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Thomas E. Barnett, of near Cambridge.

Darrow's Judgment On World Is Gloomy

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—Clarence Darrow passed gloomy judgment on this world today, concluding with this Darrowism:

"The conditions of today will happen again and again * * * The great mass was born poor and destitute and will go through the world poor and destitute."

He had been asked to tell the National Commercial Teachers Federation "What's the Matter With the World?" but he said it would be simpler to say "What Isn't the Matter?"

No Bank Since 1930, Kingwood Gets One

Kingwood, W. Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.). This city is to have a banking institution January 2 after being without one since June, 1930. Plans have been perfected for moving the First National Bank of Albright here at that time under the name of the Albright National Bank of Kingwood.

Stockholders of the Albright bank unanimously voted to transfer it to the county seat in view of futile efforts to reopen two defunct banks here. The change was deemed practical because many Kingwood people were forced to do their banking business in Albright.

Alsatia Club Names Chairman of Parade

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). The Alsatia Club of this city, which for 18 years has sponsored the annual Mummers' parade, one of the most elaborate in the East, is starting early to prepare for the 1935 parade, which will be held as usual on Halloween night.

Maurice Domenici, jr., has been elected general chairman of next year's parade, succeeding Thomas Cross. A new chairman is appointed annually to direct arrangements for the parade.

Warrenton, Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.). B. F. Herrell, Marshall, has been named acting postmaster of that place by the Postoffice Department.

Snow Forecast In City Today; Gale Hits East

175-Mile Wind and Below Zero Weather Snarl Atlantic Shipping.

The Frost King rode into the Capital yesterday on the crest of a biting wind that pushed the thermometer down to 21 degrees at 7:15 a. m.

His stay is expected to be short-lived, however, the Weather Bureau predicting that it will be warmer today, followed by rain or snow tonight.

The 21-degree mark was the lowest for the day. Soon after the sun brought relief and there was a gradual ascent in the mercury to the 54 peak of 3 p. m.

Other Sections Hit.

The Capital was lightly touched by the fingers of winter, compared with other sections of the country. A winter gale lashed the New England coast and swept over the White Mountains at 175 miles an hour.

The New England gale wrought havoc on shipping and communications. On Mount Washington, N. H., Weather Bureau men clocked the velocity of the wind at 175 miles an hour, while the temperature dropped to 30 degrees below zero.

Two deaths were reported in New England. A deck-hand was swept into Boston harbor, and a woman died on the steps of her son's home in Wakefield.

Freighter Loses Rudder.

The Belgian freighter, Emile Francqui, with 35 aboard, limped through a blinding snowstorm into Halifax harbor in tow of two rescuing ships, one the tug Foundation Franklin, which was in trouble itself as it went to the aid of the rudderless freighter.

The British freighter Quebec City, caught in a 40 mile-an-hour wind, was wrenched from her anchorage and driven aground on the mudflats of Brooklyn. It was freed after an 8-hour struggle.

Rising temperatures brought relief to the winter-bound Midwestern States.

Celanese Obtains $1,790,050 Holding

Celluloid Firm Transfers Cumberland Property.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). A deed has been filed in the Allegany County Circuit Court whereby the Celluloid Corporation transfers to the Celanese Corporation of America a tract of land with acetate building, machinery and other property, on the McMullen highway.

Revenue stamps on the deed indicate a consideration of $1,790,050. This covers the original building and not any new part of the plant, it is said. This is part of the property conveyed in July, 1918, by the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce to the American Cellulose and Chemical Co., Ltd.

Later, amending of the charter called for the name now used by the concern, the Celanese Corporation of America. The tract was conveyed to the Celluloid Corporation in February, 1928, by deed signed by William S. Chudes, president. The Celluloid Corporation is subsidiary to the Celanese Corporation of America.

Fair Set at Sharpsburg.

Sharpsburg, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). A community fair will open here Saturday and will continue until January 5 for the benefit of the community hall. The Community Players will present a play New Year's eve and a queen will be selected and crowned.

Dern Approves $15,000 To Deepen Channels

Secretary of War George H. Dern yesterday approved the allotment of $15,000 to restore the authorized channels of the Big Thoroughfare and Tyler rivers, on the Maryland Eastern Shore, to a depth of 5 feet.

Recently many boats engaged in the seafood industry have been seriously inconvenienced by shoaling of the channels. Commercial traffic has averaged for the last five years 5,681 tons per year, with an average value of $693,278. Bids for dredging to remove the shoals have been received. The exact date for beginning the project has not been announced.

No U. S. Jobs, Farmers Angry

Force Threatened Unless Work Is Given at Fort Necessity.

Grantsville, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). More than 50 farmers have entered objections that laborers for the $80,000 improvement at Fort Necessity are being selected outside their ranks. They have warned the heads of relief departments that they will oppose with force, if necessary, any attempts to continue the work.

Recently the farmers, under the leadership of Watler Hager, township supervisor, blocked the National pike near the fort and refused to permit trucks carrying workmen to pass the fort grounds, where the improvement is in progress.

It was only through the persuasion of Charles Robinson, at the head of the landscaping for the State and Federal Government, that the farmers removed the barricade and consented to a conference with relief heads.

The farmers claim that the work, which will cover a long period, should be given to the farmers who reside in Henry Clay, Wharton and Stewart townships. Due to the fact that these men own property and are not on the relief rolls, relief heads contend they can not be chosen for the work.

Four Transferred For Murder Trial

Jones Taken to Roanoke From Henrico Jail.

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Philip Jones, 25-year-old Negro accused of the murder of two young girls at Clifton Forge, and three other Negroes held in connection with the case, were transferred here early today from the Henrico County Jail at Richmond, to await trial in Botetcourt County Circuit Court.

Others held with Jones are his wife, Nannie, and John Pryor and Arthur Smith.

Trials of the accused, who were granted a change of venue by Judge Benjamin Haden, have been set for January 2, at Fincastle.

A convoy of four motor cabs, including two occupied by four State police, arrived here at 8:30 a. m. ending the trip that started more than five hours earlier.

Lyrical Tunes Now in Favor, States Sidney

Gilbert, Sullivan Types in Demand With Fans, Declares Maestro.

Sidney, master of many musical units in town, has taken a slice from the cross-section of public taste. His knife was a collection of requests sent by his listeners; a stack of hastily scrawled song titles ranging from the latests dance hit to operatic arias.

Says Sidney, thumbing through the requests:

"These are often funny; often revealing the moods of the listeners. Society people, diplomats, young ones in love, and old ones remembering—they all send in their ideas. Look, here's a good one. 'Music beautiful but too classical. Please play a popular tune.' And another, 'Too light, let's have opera.' This one doesn't want any funeral marches; one lady past 50 says, 'Something with vim, please.'"

One request is for "Body and Soul," "Kiss Waltz" and "I Am Yours;" another, "Sweetest Little Fellow or Mighty Like a Rose." "Big Bad Wolf" and "Annie Doesn't Live Here Any More" are grouped together on one card, while an old-fashioned hand traces "Minuet from Boccherini."

Comments Upon Writers.

Sidney comments upon the probable writers.

"Young ones always want the sentimental self-pitying songs. They like to moon," he rolled his eyes, "and use their imaginations." You can tell when folks have a sense of humor, when they're unhappy, when they are trying to impress their dates by getting high-brow. Someone sent in a request for any song about three years back. I guess they had a love affair then that made an impressoin.

"But I, personally, am not fond of these pessimistic songs. They're so heartbreaking. Life is so black, and there's no hope for the future in them. Fortunately they seem to be going out and the present trend is more along the old Gilbert and Sullivan lines. Clever, rhymed lyrics by good writers are coming in now. We've never had better words. I'm glad this is so, because really beautiful tunes have been ruined by bad words.

"I think show songs are my favorites. They're sophisticated. Then I like Viennese music—and songs from the other side. I like to play for people who know these European favorites—the German tangoes; the Russian numbers."

He Aims to Please.

Internationally speaking, Sidney aims to please. If he has an engagement for a Greek diplomatic affair, he looks up the popular Greek tunes. Even though the words are Greek, he can still read and reproduce the music.

The Spanish and South American influence prodominates now, Sidney observes.

"Spanish music has a lot to offer," he says. "It's rhythmically good, and tuneful. Rhythm is of utmost importance, more so than most people realize. For dancing, the music should make people want to dance; it has to push them, and it's up to the musicians to supply the push. Listening is another matter. Then it's melody that counts."

Sidney's musical career has been a long and interesting one. He started studying the violin early in life and got his first job at 14. It was in a movie theater; the orchestra consisted of Sidney's violin and a pianist.

"My mother and father had a fight over that job," he recalled. "My father didn't want me to leave school; my mother thought I should take the job. Mother won. She usually did.

Prefers Gypsy Songs.

"So I played there awhile. Then I got a job as a conductor of a theater orchestra. I was rotten. But I got further and further into music business; finally organized my orchestras, and—well, here I am."

Although locally noted for his dance and cocktail music, the soft spot in Sidney's heart is for gypsy songs.

"Few people realize that I can do it," he explains. "But there's nothing I love better than to start in on gypsy tunes when the hours are small and people are willing to sit around and join in the choruses."

Some day, in connection with likes and dislikes, Sidney would like to write an article on what musicians are asked to play as contrasted with what they like to play. But he doesn't say much about that—because that's another story.

Shaw Won't Peek Into 1935 Unless He's Paid for It

London, Dec. 27 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw won't do any soothsaying concerning 1935—at least, not unless he's paid for it.

"I'm sorry," the writer said when asked what he thought the New Year held in store for the world, "but I'm not God Almighty."

"Haven't you even a little idea about what the year might bring?" he was asked.

"Young man," came the Shavian reply, "I never have little ideas. All my ideas are big ones.

"It would take me a month to write them down for you. How much will you pay me for them?"

Shaw was not joking.

Capital Kiwanians Hold Yearly Party

Dr. William Mather Lewis Is Principal Speaker.

Washington Kiwanians yesterday held their annual family party at the Mayflower Hotel. As guests of members were their mothers, wives and children for the last meeting of the year.

All the ladies were presented with roses and Dr. and Mrs. Oscar D. Hunter received a box of flowers from Lewis T. Bruninger for having the largest family present. With them were four daughters and two sons.

Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette University and formerly a member of the Washington club, was the principal speaker. He called attention to the value of the family and its importance to the Nation. Arthur Riley and Arthur Godfrey told of some experiences as radio announcers and Godfrey introduced Susan Hall and Walter Doe, who gave several dances, accompanied by Mrs. Doe.

Oklahoma Jobless Demand More Work

McAlester, Okla., Dec. 27 (AP).—Demanding more work and a new county FERA administrator, hundreds of unemployed appeared at the courthouse here today, where a similar group spent the night a week ago in a successful effort to obtain more relief.

W. C. Tippett, railroad worker and mayor, was indorsed for county administrator and a committee was named to urge Gov.-elect E. W. Marland to have Tippett appointed to the place now held by W. R. Shelton. The group was orderly.

Phone Refunds Are Attacked

Creditors Garnishee Sums Due to Subscribers of C. & P.

A rush of creditors to garnishee telephone refunds has resulted in disappointment to many telephone subscribers, who were looking forward to reimbursement, it was revealed yesterday in District Supreme Court.

The refunds, ordered by the Public Utilities Commission 26 months ago, and recently consented to by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. after the company had lost in the District Supreme Court a fight to prevent the lowering of rates, amount to about 10 per cent reductions to the average subscriber, and in some instances are substantial amounts.

The Municipal Court, where all suits aggregating less than $1,000 are filed, has reported scores of attachments sent to the telephone company to impound refunds, while in the District Supreme Court approximately 50 have been issued. In a return to the garnishment the company merely states it is holding the refund by order of court and informs the judgment holder of the amount of the refund.

Fatal Shooting Laid To Row of Brothers

Huntington Beach, Calif., Dec. 27 (AP).—An argument between two brothers as to who would be "head of the house" in the absence of their parents, was blamed by police today for the fatal shooting of Edgar Apple, 20.

Police Chief George Gelzer quoted the victim's 17-year-old brother, Ivan, as saying "he grabbed a shotgun and fired" at Edgar at the height of the quarrel. Ivan was held pending a coroner's investigation.

Baby Talk a Ruse? Moves Parents More

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—That pretty cooing and gurgling that baby does may be just a ruse. Many children don't learn to speak on schedule, Dr. Smiley Blanton explained today, because they find parents are more susceptible to baby talk.

He made this charge during a convention of the American Society for the Study of Disorders of Speech. The convention also heard that 5,000,000 persons in the country have speech defects.

Huey Orders Walmsley Quiz Revived Today

Long Soon to Turn Over Dictatorship to Allen for Senate Duties.

Baton Rouge, La., Dec. 27 (AP).—Before he turns over his dictatorship to Gov. O. K. Allen, next in command, to leave for the congressional session in Washington, Huey Long today decided to turn investigator again and hurl more charges against the administration of his enemy, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans.

Long negotiated a State loan of $1,163,000, told the Governor to appoint a district judge to succeed the late Judge George K. Favrot, who died here yesterday, and then announced that his legislative city investigation would be resumed tomorrow.

"Additional Evidence."

The "Kingfish" said the joint committee of House and Senate members who recently took evidence on Long's charges of corruption in politics and pay-offs to officials from the underworld would "reconvene for sessions Friday and Saturday to consider additional evidence."

The investigation was begun during the campaign preceding the September primary election, which Long's organization carried in the New Orleans area, but no report has yet been made to the Legislature by the committee. Long declared that the committee had auditors checking the city's records during the recent special sessions of the Legislature that passed his dictatorial laws.

Will Seek Ouster.

He said he intends to use this evidence to oust Walmsley and his rival political heads from office in his attempt to add New Orleans to his political organization.

The board of liquidation in Long's presence approved a loan of $1,000,000 for erection of a school of dentistry and pharmacy and other improvements and extensions at Louisiana State University, $100,000 for printing voters' registration books to be used under Long's free poll tax registration, $50,000 for the work of the Louisiana Tax Commission and other smaller items.

The loans are to be approved by a mail poll of the legislators for completion of the negotiations by the Governor.

Committee Assails L. S. U. Conditions

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—Executive committeemen of the Association of American Law Schools today issued a report in which they alleged political domination is undermining various educational facilities of Louisiana State University.

Without mentioning the name of Senator Huey Long, the report recommended additional investigation of the situation at the university.

It deferred any disciplinary action, however, out of consideration to the law faculty, which the report characterized as having "acted with propriety, so far as it has had power to so do."

The committee possesses power to recommend expulsion from the association and consequent loss of reciprocal credit exchange with other schools.

Liquor Board To Keep Set-up In Montgomery

Reduction of Salaries Is Among Chief Changes Suggested.

Montgomery County, Md., probably will retain its present liquor control board set-up, it was indicated yesterday at a meeting of the Montgomery County Commissioners at Rockville. Several changes probably will be made, but the present liquor control board and dispensary plan is expected to be kept.

The chief change expected is reduction of the salary of board members from the present $1,800 to $2,400 scale to $500 a year, and reduction of counsel salary to $600 a year. These changes can be effected by the commissioners without legislative action

The commissioners also plan, their discussion indicated, to ask that the appeal from decisions of the liquor control board be heard by the county commissioners and not the State liquor board, as at present. It was brought out that in two instances the State board has granted licenses which had been disapproved by the county board following hearings at which residents of the affected neighborhoods vigorously opposed the licenses.

Amendment Seen.

It also is expected that the present law will be amended to permit sale of liquor with meals by reputable restaurants and by hotels of more than 40 rooms. There is at present only one hotel in this classification in the county.

Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale suggested that the president of the liquor board should receive a small amount more than other members because of his additional responsibilities. Lansdale had suggested that the board be reduced to three members when Edward Peter, counsel to the board, outlined the plan which had received the support of the Fusion members, and the entire board appeared in accord with the new plan.

Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan then brought up the question of semiannual payment of taxes, which he said had been promised by the Fusion Party as a campaign pledge. Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the board, pointed out that mailing two sets of bills would cost the county an additional $10,000 a year. It was suggested that the tax bills could be mailed in coupon form so that the taxpayer could pay semiannual installments if he wished.

Auctions Asked.

Commissioner Robert D. Hagner proposed that an auction sale for all delinquent tax properties of more than two years, standing be ordere dand the board appeared favorably inclined. Commissioner Lansdale suggested that the county have but one building inspector instead of two as at present.

Another change suggested was that the lunacy law be amended so that a trial by jury would be necessary instead of certificates of two physicians as at present.

The suggested legislation will be discussed with State Senator Stedman Prescott and other members of the county delegation to the State Legislature.

The board granted permission to Mrs. Philander Johnson for the Rockville Pike Citizens Association to erect historical markers on the Rockville pike.

Frank H. Karn, president of the board, and Commissioners Lansdale and Charles E. King will confer with Thomas Linthicum, State roads commission, supervisor for the Montgomery area, in an effort to ascertain whether the board will be able to borrow State roads equipment for emergency road work. The board yesterday discussed possibility of obtaining EWA workers for such emergency work with Stephen Cromwell, EWA director for the Montgomery County area.

'Confirmed Criminal' Wants Parole Because He Can Cook

Counsel Agrees He Hasn't Reformed, but Knows His Kitchens.

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—Thomas Murray, of New York, Philadelphia and points South and West, may be a good cook, but why that fact should get him out of jail is more than Parole Commissioner Gaylord Lee Clark can understand.

Counsel for Murray, who is serving a two-year term for larceny, appeared before the commissioner at the parole hearing today, and entered a plea that Murray would be given a job as a cook in Philadelphia if paroled.

The attorney explained he agreed with Commissioner Clark in the belief Murray was a "confirmed criminal," but said the man was "such a good cook" that an employer in Philadelphia was willing to take Murray off the State's hands.

Commissioner Clark glanced over Murray's record of convictions beginning in 1910 in Texas.

"Do you think Murray has reformed?" he asked.

"No," counsel replied.

"Do you think his prospective employer has everything in his place nailed down?" Clark queried dryly.

The attorney didn't know.

"Parole declined," the commissioner said.

Murray and Ralph V. Harne, of Funkstown, Md., who is serving an eight months' sentence on the State penal farm for a motor vehicle law violation, were among the 23 prisoners whose applications were refused at the hearing.

Twelve applications were recommended to the Governor for parole, six from white prisoners, and six from Negroes.

Takoma Club to Meet With Little Theater

Members of the Women's Club of Takoma Park, Md., will meet jointly with the Little Theater of Takoma Park Tuesday evening at the Takoma Park Elementary School. Arrangements for an entertainment program are being handled by Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, president of the women's club, and John G. Sutton, president of the Little Theater.

Tentative plans call for presentation of a one-act play, "The Finger of God," in which parts will be taken by Mr. Sutton, Mrs. D. C. Gordon and Will H. Carleton, Miss Maxine Mitchell, of Silver Springs, will give several character readings.

through the top, scalding many of the men. So badly were some scalded that identification was difficult.

Ambulances and private autos rushed to the scene and carried the dead and dying to Montgomery.

A youth, Eugene Flack, made four trips with injured to the hospital. He said he did not know whose car he was driving or who the injured were.

"One man," he said, "started to tumble just as we got to the hospital. I took him by the arm to help him.

"'Take the other arm, Buddy,' he said, 'I did, and then I saw that the first arm was broken.

"We couldn't find any bed for him, so he just laid down on the operating table."

Plea for Beds.

The Coal Valley Hospital at Montgomery pleaded for more beds and Charleston hospitals sent them.

State police directed a funeral lane on the rough road back to Montgomery.

Hunt Starts for Vandal, Blamed in Fatal Crash

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 27 (AP).—A vandal who locked open a railroad switch, hurtling a fast passenger train into a string of empty box cars, was sought tonight by police after two railroaders had been killed in the crash and a score of passengers injured.

Chief of Police Fred Kundts, of Columbus, and F. H. Krick, of Cleveland, division superintendent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, made the charges of vandalism as a three-way investigation of the crash started. The shattered switch, they told a mute story of what happened.

"We are positive that someone tampered with the switch," said Kundts as he issued orders to permit no one near the switch until the investigation is complete.

Evidence of tampering was seen in the fact that a semaphore arm on the infrequently used switch had been broken off.

Engineer H. S. Beach, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, and Arthur H. Eckels, 69, of Cleveland, road foreman of engines, were crushed in a mass of steel in the overturned locomotive. Three of the injured, Beach's fireman, John Skolar, 41, of Cleveland, and two other Ohioans, passengers on the train, were reported in a serious condition tonight.

Trackage along the right-of-way was torn up as the locomotive, the combination passenger-baggage car, and two of the coaches plowed into the empty box cars.

The smashup occurred in the Linden section of northeast Columbus, a residential district within six miles of the downtown union station.

It was the second serious railroad crash in Ohio in five days. Three railroad men were killed Sunday at Delaware in a collision of two New York Central passenger trains.

Switchman's Mistake In Fatal Crash Revealed

Toronto, Dec. 27 (AP).—A switchman's frantic and mistaken effort to avert a disaster was blamed tonight for the Christmas night train wreck at Dundas which cost 15 lives.

W. A. Kingsland, general manager of the Central Region of the Canadian National Railways, in an official statement, said E. S. Lynch, brakeman on the sidetracked excursion train, threw the switch in a moment of confusion and sent the speeding Detroit-Toronto Express hurtling into his own train.

Lynch's belief that the London-Toronto excursion train was standing on the main line in the path of the express instead of on the siding prompted his act, the statement said.

The excursion special made up of three wooden coaches, had been sidetracked after its locomotive developed trouble. Lynch, the official report said, was sent back to Dundas to telegraph for a relief engine.

"Brakeman Lynch," the statement said, "says that he had been busy with his passengers and did not know that his train had entered the siding, but thought that it was still on the eastward main line.

"As he was proceeding toward Dundas Station, he noticed the headlight of Engine No. 16 (the Detroit-Toronto Express) and, fearing that it would strike the rear of his train if it proceeded on the main line, he says that he became excited and rushed to the switch, which he unlocked and turned for the siding in the face of the approaching No. 16, thus causing the latter train to enter the siding and collide with the passenger extra."

Lynch, whose duties involved those of a conductor as well as a brakeman, has been in the employ of the railroad for 16 years.

Cut in Gas Rates Likely to Continue

Reduction Order Extension to March 31 Ahead.

Continuation of the 8½ per cent reduction in gas rates for another three-month period was forecast by officials of the District Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

The commission has continued the rate reduction order for several months, pending final determination of the gas company valuation case. This case has been under consideration for many months.

The last three-month rate reduction order of the commission would have expired at midnight December 31. The contemplated commission order would extend the expiration date until March 31.

Clark Freed In Montgomery After 4 Trials

Defendant Is Accused of $50,000 Shortage in Accounts.

The Berry E. Clark case in Montgomery County was disposed of yesterday when State's Attorney Stedman Prescott entered nolle prosses in the 97 idictments alleging embezzlement against Clark, former clerk to the Montogemry County, Md., commissioners.

Clark was tried tried four times on the first of the indictments and each time the jury failed to agree. The case was tried three times in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville and once at Ellicott City. Clark was indicted after an audit of county records revealed an apparent shortage of $50,000 in his accounts. The nolle prosses entered in the Circuit Court at Rockville finally closes the case.

Clark was indicted more times by the same jury than any other defendant; the case was tried four times for the first time in the history of the county; I was the first in the history of the court that a trial removal had been asked by the State, and it was the first in which a jury had disagreed four times.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). Using rubber-band duckpins, Harry Cox, of this city, hung up a new local record and realized the ambition of every bowler to roll a perfect game.

But Cox, who has been in active competition for the last 20 years, did not stop at a perfect game. He started his record in the seventh box of the previous game, clicking off four strikes before he went on to chalk up the perfect 300 score.

Dancing Masters Hail 'Americana' As Stumble-Proof

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—A fool-and-elephant-proof dance step that the portly business man can trip to any tune without tripping also over his partner's feet was demonstrated tonight by the Dancing Masters of America.

The step is called the Americana, and the dancing masters were all worked up about it. Now that America is stepping out again, they said, just such a simple step is needed to keep the men from crawling under the table when the band plays a tango.

The Americana, they contended, can be danced gracefully to the tango, fox trot or waltz, and differs from the old-fashioned waltz step in that instead of a shift in weight, the left foot always is ready for a new beat—the right foot, so to speak, serving as an exploring medium.

Janet White Is Bride of C. T. Barnes

Stepdaughter of Former House Member Made Debut Here.

Wedding Solemnized at Episcopal Church in Providence.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A wedding of interest to Capital society took place yesterday afternoon in Providence, R. I., when Miss Janet White, daughter of Mrs. Richard Aldrich, became the bride of Mr. Charles Tracy Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Dixon Barnes, of Manhasset, Long Island, and New York. Miss White made her home here for several years when her stepfather, former Representative Aldrich, was serving in Congress, and she and her sister, Miss Dora White, were presented to society in the Capital.

The marriage was performed at 4 o'clock at a candlelight ceremony in Grace Episcopal Church by the Rev. William Appleton Lawrence, rector of the church, and the Rev. Endicott Peabody, of Groton School, Groton, Conn., of which the bridegroom is a graduate.

Christmas greens and Easter lilies were combined in the church decorations, and the pews were marked with tall wrought iron candle holders set with ivory cathedral tapers and tied with huge clusters of Easter lilies.

Sister Is Maid of Honor.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. Aldrich, wore a princess gown of white satin damask fashioned with a long train, and her mother's wedding veil of lace. She carried a bouquet of Belmont gardenias.

Miss Dora White was maid of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids included Mrs. George H. Bostwick, of Roslyn, Long Island, the former Miss Laura Curtis, who spent Christmas in Washington with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curtis; Mrs. Jay Reeves, of New York, and Miss Katrina McCormick and Miss Abigail Sard, of Washington. The attendants wore gowns of white crepe fashioned on Grecian lines with wreaths of silver in their hair. They carried Empire wreaths of English boxwood interspersed with bunches of silver grapes.

Mr. Barnes was best man for his son, and the ushers were Mr. William Wurts White, brother of the bride; Mr. Courtlandt Dixon Barnes, jr., brother of the bridegroom; Mr. H. Lyman Stebbins, Mr. Marshall J. Dodge, jr., Mr. Alanson J. Donald, Mr. Philip Boyer, jr., Mr. Maclean Williamson, Mr. David W. Yandell, Mr. Charles Tenney, and Mr. Charles Myers, all of New York.

Reception Held at Home.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich. English holly, poinsettias and Scotch heather were used to brighten the rooms. Mrs. Aldrich wore a gown of blue and silver with a hat to match.

Later the young couple left for a wedding trip after which they will make their home in Cambridge, Mass.

The bride attended Holton-Arms School and the Fermata School in Aiken, S. C. Mr. Barnes is a graduate of Groton and of Yale University, class of 1933. He is a member of the Psi Epsilon and Scroll and Keys.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, parents of the bridegroom, were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ives Goddard during their stay in Providence, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm G. Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

The other afternoon I saw Mathilde Bruce Rodger and Homer Tatum whose delightful waltz at the Shoreham Hotel last week sent many of us scurrying off to corners of our libraries to hunt up a volume of the Merry Widow to read and reread the waltz scenes. The Carioca, Rhumba and Danzon—these new-fangled foot trickers—are now about to go way, way back and stay put, and the waltz, which has been with us all along, though somewhat overshadowed—will have all of the spotlight. Mathilde was wearing some lovely pinkish shade—and her dark hair parted in the middle and brushed smoothly back from her forehead was caught high on each side with a tiny brilliant clip.

Mary Elizabeth Damon is apparently going tropical, south sea islander, Burbank-ish or something. I saw her in the Mayflower and she had on a black medium brimmed hat, white and silver tunic and dark skirt. On her left shoulder she wore a young fern tree which draped itself nearly to her waist. There must have been a reason for it. Either it was a portable Christmas tree, family tree or else she was playing the good old game of "greens on you."

"Mostly" Love still has my curiousity aroused to the nth place. At her party the other day she received—holding a small white kitten all cuddled in her arms. Upon closer examination it was revealed that the feline wasn't a real meowing one after all, but around its neck and under its whiskers there were some gorgeous flowers. What an animal! If it could do that well in its present state of inanimation, just think what a wow (or rather meow) it would be if it belonged to the sorority of cream lappers.

Idens Entertain At a Tea Dance

Party Honors Barbara Baker and Barbara Pierpont, of Boston.

Dr. and Mrs. John Hooe Iden entertained at a tea dance yesterday afternoon from 4:30 until 7 o'clock in the ballroom of the Kennedy-Warren for their niece, Miss Barbara Baker, and her former schoolmate, Miss Barbara Pierpont, of Boston.

The ballroom was decorated with ferns and evergreens, forming a background for delicate pink roses and holly. At one end there was a large Christmas tree, which was decorated with blue lights and crystal snow.

Mrs. Iden received with Miss Pierpont and Miss Baker. She had on a gown of turquoise blue, made with a high neck in the front and quite low in the back. The full sleeves were banded with silver beads. Miss Pierpont wore a tunic frock of blue and gold lame. Miss Baker was wearing a dark red taffeta gown made on sweeping lines. The bodice was finished with a high neck in the front, which fastened in the back with a large bow.

The guests, who included members of the Washington debutante and sub-debutante sets, numbered about 250.

Lash Curlers Available at Modest Price

New Perfume Captures the Real Fragrance of Gardenias.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SHOPPERS who are in the market for anything to make the eyes more "it-ful" are still finding eyelash curlers one of their best beauty investments. Several years ago, when the odd little items first appeared in the stores, only a daring few made the initial purchases. As time went on, however, even the rigid conservatives saw that curlers used properly merely give a soft, alluring curve to otherwise straight and stumpy fringes. They did not, as these conservatives feared, give a hideously artificial kink. Neither did they retard the growth of lashes or irritate the lids. On the contrary, it has been proved and is being proved daily that frequent use of eyelash curlers tends to promote the growth of lashes. They inevitably make lashes seem longer too by turning them upward.

The only danger in such curlers lies in their over use. Lashes curled too tightly appear unnatural and ugly. If they are curled slightly they will inevitably give the eyes a softer, sweeter expression.

Eyelash curlers sell for a modest amount in the toilet goods department of an F street store.

New French Perfume.

"Frou-frou du gardenia" is the very French and flowery name of a new perfume that is fast gaining in popularity among the disciples of pure flower scents.

There are those, of course, who like a perfume that suggests fields, meadows, woods, and all out of doors; and there are those who prefer a blended fragrance with an exotic Oriental quality combined with the richness of church incense. And then there are many who want the pure essence of violets, roses, lilies, or jasmine or any one flower. This new perfume is particularly for those who like the sweet, pure scent of gardenias as it is in the actual flower. The perfumer, who may be given credit for what is really a masterpiece, succeeded in capturing the real fragrance of gardenias.

Display of Brief Cases.

Students who wish to protect their books and papers from the ravages of winter winds, rains and snows will find that a brief case is a big convenience and represents a large saving.

In a downtown store there is one short counter devoted to the display of innumerable cases which sell for an unbelievably low sum. When you observe the quality of the merchandise you know immediately that the retail price is certainly less than it ordinarily would be. As it happens the "briefs" represent a special buy and can therefore be sold to customers for considerably less than otherwise.

They are top grain leather in tan, brown, black with either smooth or rough finish.

Salts for the Bath.

A man-size tin of bath salts is particularly popular with masculine shoppers. One customer who was reordering waxed eloquent when approached on the subject. "Bah!" he said. "One little bottle of pine bath oil! One little jar of crystals! How far do they take you? How long do they last? And great day, how they cost!" "But these," he beamed picking up one of the large tins," will last for ages and you can put a whole handful in your tub and not feel wasteful. Maybe a woman wouldn't buy this because it's not wrapped in cellophane nor tied in ribbons. But a man can see the value in a minute."

Those were his words. The large tins are available in a downtown store.

Reasonably Priced Lingerie.

Lovely lingerie is reasonably priced in a certain downtown store. Here there are several styles of hand made silk panties with trimmings in blue or the self color and these are less than $2.

The panties are a very worthwhile investment as they are most durable. Their seams are so beautifully finished you'll have no difficulty with their pulling out, and the material is so exceptionally good that it's virtually split proof.

Engraved Bridge Cards.

Manufacturers continue supplying new bridge conveniences. One of the newest is a set of cards with one pack engraved with "host," and the other "guest." Or if you choose you can buy them marked, "friend" and "foe," or "you" and "us," or "nous" and "vous."

The cards are green or brown linen finished with gilt edge. This manner of marking automatically does away with confusion over the deal and helps the game to progress smoothly and more rapidly.

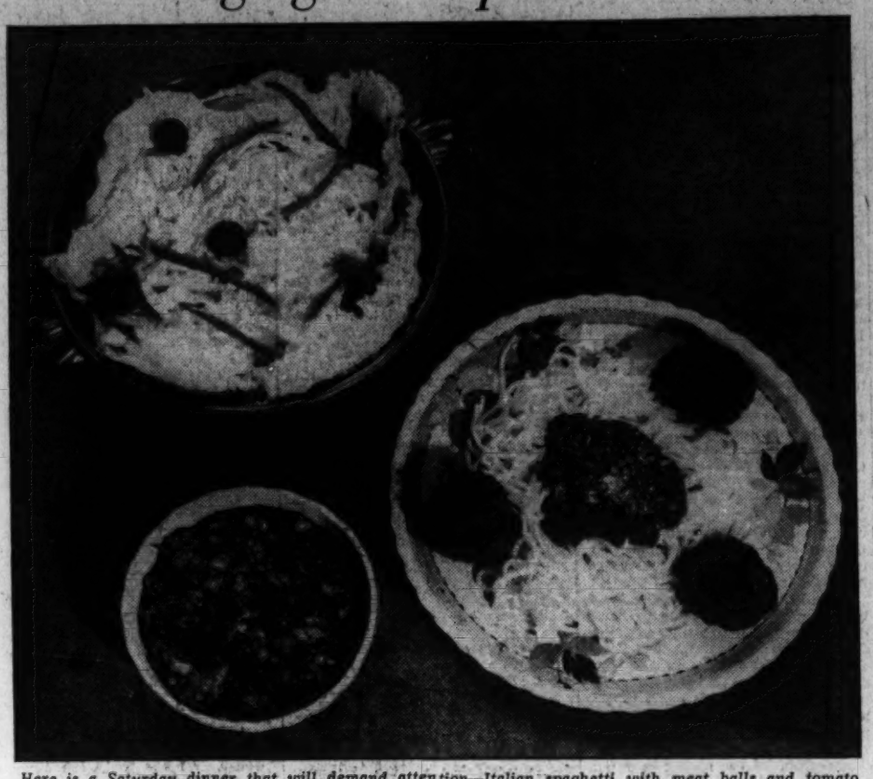
A Kit of Cosmetics.

A certain beauty house has seldom if ever gone in for the kit idea. For that reason the special kits they are selling now is one of unusual interest. They contain a balsam freshener, a cleansing cream, youthifying lotion which is also a foundation lotion excellent for face and hands, and a small box of excellent face powder.

The complete assemblage of cosmetics—and fine cosmetics, too—costs only $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Simple but Palatable Menus Suggested For Bridging the Gap Between Feasts



Here is a Saturday dinner that will demand attention—Italian spaghetti with meat balls and tomato and mushroom sauce, accompanied by a mixed vegetable salad made in true Continental fashion, and served in a large wooden or crockery bowl.

A Spaghetti Dinner Will Fill the Bill for Saturday.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE HOUSEWIFE should devise some way of bringing back every-day dishes into her week's menus, or turkey and its fair companions, the duck and goose, will wear out their welcome before New Year's Day. Plan your menus for this week-end along inexpensive lines and include the family's favorite dishes that are not elaborate.

What will interest your family after several days of feasting? There are hundreds of savory dishes. Why not try an honest-to-goodness spaghetti dinner for Saturday?

Be sure to cook the spaghetti as the family likes it best. It may be served unbroken in the Italian manner or cut into small pieces, and the sauce may be added during the cooking or served separately. Meat balls, a mixed salad, prepared at the table, and Italian wine, with perhaps fresh fruit for dessert will complete the main dish and make a meal that calls for compliments rather than an apology.

Here is a tomato and mushroom sauce that will be a perfect accompaniment to your spaghetti dish:

Tomato and Mushroom Sauce.

2 slices bacon or a small quantity of uncooked ham
1 slice onion
6 slices carrot
Bay leaf
2 sprigs thyme
Sprig parsley
½ can No. 1 mushrooms
2 cloves
½ teaspoon pepper corns
Few gratings nutmeg
½ can No. 2 tomatoes
5 tablespoons flour
1½ cups brown stock
Salt and pepper.

Chop the bacon or ham, and cook with onion and carrot for five minutes. Add bay leaf, thyme, parsley, cloves, peppercorns, nutmeg and tomatoes. Cook five minutes. Mix the flour with five tablespoons of cold water and rub out the lumps; then add enough water so the batter can be poured in a thin stream. Add to the sauce, stirring constantly. As the sauce thickens, dilute it with stock. Cover; set in the oven, moderate heat (300 degrees F.) and cook one hour. Strain, add salt and pepper to taste and the mushrooms, drained and cut in squares. Then cook two minutes over direct heat.

The spaghetti should be cooked in a large amount of salted, boiling water until tender. It may then be served plain or mixed with the sauce in a casserole with the browned and partially cooked meat balls and placed in the oven for about 20 minutes.

The salad should be served in a large crockery or wooden bowl accompanied by a wooden spoon and fork. Rub the bowl with a clove of garlic and fill with chopped greens; red or white cabbage, red pimiento, onion, green pepper, chopped fine, and garnish with ripe olives. The salad dressing of vinegar wine and olive oil should be mixed at the table and added before serving.

Here are menus for Sunday that may help you to get away from the beaten track that has been followed too religiously:

Sunday Breakfast.

Creamed Eggs on Buttered Rusks
Broiled Sausage Cakes
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Dinner.

Clam Bisque
Fried Fillet of Sole
Lemon Ice
Southern Spoon Bread
Spinach Puree
Chicory With French Dressing
Raspberry Gelatin With Whipped Cream
Tea Milk (for children)

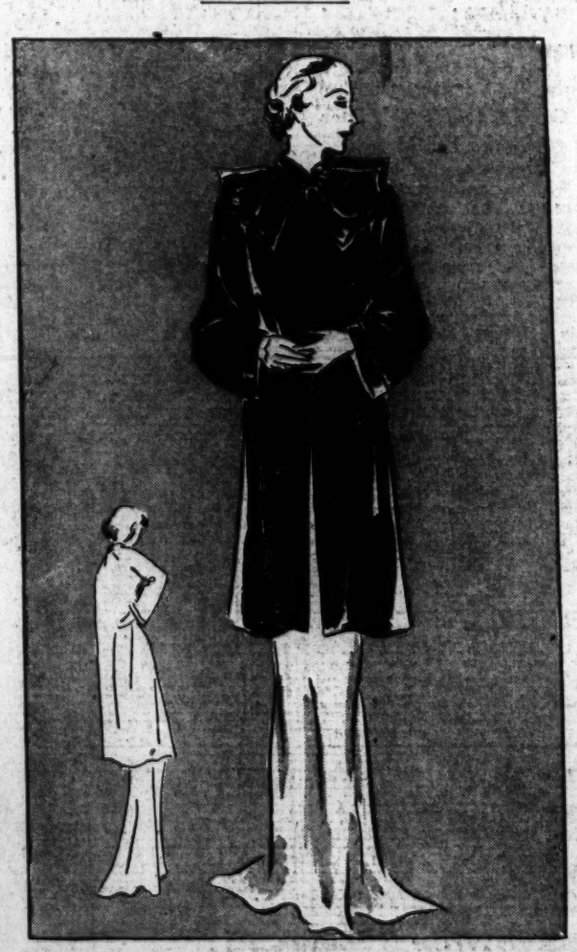
Clam Bisque Recommended as Opening Course for Sunday.

Clam Bisque.

24 clams in the shell
2 cups rich milk or white stock or part of each
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups water
1 tablespoon chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt and pepper.

Make a white sauce of the milk, flour and butter. Scrub the clams thoroughly, then open them, wash them in their own liquor; and chop them very fine. Strain the liquor through cheesecloth, and add it to the water. Add the chopped celery and parsley and cook ten minutes. Add the chopped clams and cook five minutes longer. Press through a sieve and add to the white sauce. Season with salt and pepper, beat with an egg beater, and serve.

Small Yardage Needed to Make A Wrap With Swagger Lines



Pattern No. 847.

HERE is an evening wrap that is equally well suited to formal and informal occasions. Its casual swagger lines are just as appropriate over dinner or cocktail frocks as over the gala holiday gown. The loose silhouette presents a very simple problem in fitting and the large clear instruction chart makes this pattern easy to follow for even the less experienced needlewoman.

The softly twisted scarf collar frames the face in flattery, and dispenses with the need for expensive fur trimming. This, together with the comparatively small yardage necessary, makes this wrap a smart economy. Velvet, velveteen, metal lame, or satin are excellent fabric choices. The pattern comes in sizes 12 to 38, and in size 16 takes 4⅝ yards of 39-inch material.

SHY CINDERELLA

By WILSON COLLISON

JIMMIE switched on a lamp and called Colin on the telephone. Colin had just come in from the office. Shirley had not returned from a bridge party at the club.

Jimmie said, "I just received a cablegram from Paris, Colin. Gloria was killed in a motor accident near Fontainebleau."

Colin said, "Good God!"

Jimmie said quietly, "Mrs. Carrington sent the cablegram. She was one of Gloria's friends. She used to come out here last summer for week-ends. She's been in Paris since September."

Colin asked, "Will you want to call off the party tomorrow, Jimmie?"

Jimmie said, "No, after all, our lives were separate."

Colin said, "All right, old man. Shirley and I will drop in after dinner."

Jimmie walked away from the desk. He went to one of the windows and stood gazing out.

Through the garden, hanging like a timid stranger in the darkness of the night over the Sound, he saw the pale crescent of a new moon. It seemed to be rising directly out of the water, as though it were groping its way into a new and strange world.

Harley Was Boisterous.

Thanksgiving evening Harley Denton came in at half-past six with Linda Garth. Harley was quite red in the face and his eyes had a queer glitter in them. Jimmie knew that Harley had been drinking. While he was not drunk, he was a little boisterous. He introduced his companion as "Linda Garth, New York's most charming widow."

Mrs. Garth was slim and very pretty with a certain hard brilliance about her that Jimmie did not exactly like. She was inclined to be at blonde, but Jimmie felt that she had never been properly finished, either as a blonde or a brunette.

Colin and Shirley did not come in until a quarter to seven, and Kay arrived at seven. Anne had served cocktails before Colin and Shirley came, and Mrs. Garth drank and incessantly smoked cigarettes in a long, red holder.

Jimmie was made silently furious by the way in which Harley stared at Anne when she came into the room with the cocktails. Harley's glittering eyes were fastened upon Anne in a manner that made Jimmie think of the eyes of a snake; it seemed to him that Harley was leering. He smiled somewhat vapidly and said, "What a maid!" and after Anne had gone, he impetuously demanded to know where Jimmie had picked up that little bundle of beauty.

Jimmie Was Unhappy.

Jimmie froze up and said with a cold smile, "She's been here some time." Harley laughed suggestively and Mrs. Garth winked at him. It was then that Jimmie knew he was in for an unpleasant evening.

Harley continued with his rather coarse banter and Jimmie found it increasingly difficult to be polite. Both Harley and Mrs. Garth consumed many cocktails and Jimmie began to feel vaguely alarmed. It would prove quite embarrassing to have the two of them drunk. Their capacity for taking liquor seemed enormous.

Later, Colin gave Jimmie a look as much as to say, "What did I tell you about this fellow?"

Colin induced Harley and Mrs. Garth to go for a walk with him through the garden, and after they had gone, Shirley looked at Jimmie's embarrassed face with a wry smile and said, "There are just so many of them in the world, Jimmie. Don't let him rattle you—we understand."

Jimmie felt better after that, and when Colin came in from the garden with Harley and Mrs. Garth, Jimmie saw that the cold night air had sobered Harley up a bit. He was much more quiet and Jimmie felt a certain sense of relief, although, oddly enough he did not think his troubles with Harley were entirely over for the evening.

His Rage Mounted.

Throughout dinner Harley remained half a gentleman and Jimmy had the disquieting feeling that Mrs. Garth was so drunk she scarcely knew where she was. She had a sort of glassy stare in her eyes and when she talked, she smiled as though someone were pulling a string.

At certain moments during the dinner, Jimmie's rage mounted and he suppressed it with great difficulty. Those moments were the ones when Anne was serving. Harley kept watching her with that peculiar half-leer; perhaps no one else noticed it, but Jimmie did. He glanced once at Anne and she was looking at him. He smiled a little and it seemed to him that there was a swift, answering smile in her eyes.

The grim thought persisted in Jimmie's mind that Harley was appraising Anne in an indelicate manner. After all, he thought by way of explaining his own attitude, Anne was his maid and this was his house. It was a house designed for ladies and gentleman.

Shirley must have known something of what was going on in Jimmie's mind, for she kept giving him sympathetic glances and she looked often at Anne when Anne was in the room.

Anne Was Nervous.

After dinner, Shirley took charge of the party.

Her calm and smiling generalship relieved Jimmie immensely and he gave her a look which brought a twinkle into her gray eyes. Colin had long since grown bored with Harley and when he glanced at him he seemed to glare. Shirley knew that glare in her husband's eyes and she felt that it was high time someone took charge of what threatened to become a thoroughly disagreeable and discordant evening.

Anne was glad when dinner was over. She had felt nervous all through it. She couldn't explain why. She only knew that one of the male guests looked at her in a manner which she didn't like. She had not liked Harley Denton from the moment she had admitted him with his partner. Although she had not told Lillian, Mr. Denton had squeezed her arm in the hall as he brushed past her. It had not frightened her; it had left her a little astonished and angry.

In the kitchen Lillian said, "Who burned up all the cocktails?"

Anne answered, "Mr. Denton."

"He's a tank. Is he drunk yet?"

Anne shook her head. "He doesn't seem to be, but he's red in the face and Mr. Grenville and Mr. Belden looked at him as though they wanted to kill him."

"One of those guys," said Lillian with a smile.

Anne said, "He watched me every time I went into the room. He made me feel as though he were looking right through me."

"I've seen them," said Lillian. "Well, listen, if one of those eggs ever gets fresh with you, don't scream—just let him have it on the chin as hard as you can and yell, 'Sherman was right!'"

MYSTERY with Music

If you want to find out about anybody, write his biography—just as Gilbert Meade undertook to do. Gilbert was a bit curious as to whether his complacent (and Puritanical) father had been mulcted of $100,000.

Gilbert didn't figure (at first) on malign individuals with sinister reasons for concealing the true past of the old operatic star, Lily De Long (if it really were Lily!). But during his first night at the old mansion he found windows that he had left closed, open; curtains that he had left open, drawn; and the desk in his room ransacked.

After that there wasn't much biography—there wasn't time. Gilbert was on the hop! And Jane Stanton (she's where the music comes in) let her youthful suspicions get her pretty much under Gilbert's feet in his amateur (but effective) detecting. But Jane got over that—and, anyway, he loved it! If you like a sparkling mystery story with a strong undercurrent of romance, don't miss Refreshingly ungruesome, it grips you from the moment Jane unconventionally holds the match for Gilbert's pipe to its most satisfactory conclusion.

For some of the characters, you won't develop much affection (What's a mystery yarn without villains!) but you'll love kindly, irascible, old Lily (at least that's what they call her). And as for Jane and Gilbert—Well, our suggestion is that you don't miss the beginning of the story

Washington Woman Masters Bon-Seki Art, Created by Ancient Japanese to Picture Scenery in Sand and Rocks on Lacquer Tray

Same Methods Have Been Used For Many Years

Mrs. Robert K. Reischauer Describes It as Most Satisfying Form.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

MOST ARTISTS can heave a sigh of relief when they finish a painting. But when Mrs. Robert Karl Reischauer completes a picture her troubles have just begun.

She must keep her landscapes out of a draft or the wind will make the sun lop-sided and blow the trees into the ocean's waves. And she must smile politely when persons unfamiliar with Bon-seki art—as most persons are—examine the pictures with an inquiring finger and innocently ask:

"Oh, is that really sand?"

Yes, it's really sand, sand and gravel and rocks arranged on a black lacquer tray to represent a beloved scene in Japan or the sentiment of a favorite poem. This is Bon-seki, pronounced bone-saykee with the accent on bone.

Like at least two other important arts in Japan—the tea ceremony and flower arrangements—Bon-seki is transient. But that's its greatest charm, according to Mrs. Reischauer. If somebody else doesn't mess up one of her pictures, she herself tears it up a day or two after it is finished so she can start all over.

Most Satisfying Art.

She declares it's the most satisfying art she's ever tried; and she's tried a good many. The thing that annoys her is having Americans ask about the deep, philosophical significance of the work.

Most persons who watch her make a Bon-seki picture want to know what sort of communion she carries on with her spirit as she quietly arranges the sand and rocks. Mrs. Reischauer wants it understood she doesn't sink into any philosophical reverie or do any communing with anybody's spirit. She just relaxes and has a good time as she makes mountains, moons, and oceans. Bon-seki is to her exactly what it is to the Japanese: art for art's sake.

But it's an extremely difficult art. Mrs. Reischauer is one of the only two Americans who have ever mastered it. The Japanese who are accomplished in Bon-seki are necessarily of the wealthy, leisured class as both time and money are required to learn it. Seven years are usually spent in study and practice. Mrs. Reischauer managed to cram those seven years into less than two.

A Moonlight Scene.

It was while she and her husband were visiting in Japan that she became interested in Bon-seki. When they returned to this country last fall she had learned to make about 400 pictures.

"Here's one of them. Come look," and Mrs. Reischauer led the way in her apartment at Maryland Courts, Ninth and E streets northeast, to a serene, uncrowded room in which a few exquisite Japanese pieces were arranged. Beneath a painted scroll on one wall was a small black lacquer tray about six inches from the floor. Curved lacquer legs supported it. On the tray was a moonlight scene, breathtaking in its loveliness. It was Bon-seki.

"We must kneel in Japanese fashion to get the best view of it," said Mrs. Reischauer. She knelt The reporter obediently knelt with her. In the foreground on the tray stood a big, blackish rock with small glistening white rocks on the sandy shore nearby. High in the sky rode a round, white moon, weaving silvery magic over waves and sand below.

Shows How It Is Done.

"And now I will make another Bon-seki for you so you can see how it is done," Mrs. Reischauer said. Before she seated herself in front of a low table she put near her big boxes with fascinating little drawers filled with sand and gravel and a bunch of tools which looked like a dentist's instruments.

One of the tools is used only to shape the sand into pine trees. Another is used only to put the foam on waves. Another is for drawing a duck's body. There are also tiny moulds for moons, suns, birds and leaves. But Bon-seki pupils are not permitted to use the moulds until they have learned to make things without them.

As she made "The Island of Lost Souls," Mrs. Reischauer told what she has been able to learn of the history of Bon-seki.

"The history is lost in legend," she explained. "One Japanese written source says it began in the early six hundreds when a stone of rare beauty was presented by China to the Japanese court. The gift was placed on a tray and greatly admired, first because in its suggestion of a mountain it represented nature to the Japanese. But they also admired it because it was a stone—strong, firm, unchangeable."

Mrs. Reischauer hesitated just a moment as she poured fine white sand into the moon mold. Then she continued:

"Emperor Temmu Tenno is the legendary beginner of Bonseki art. Bon-seki, you know, means tray-rock. While Temmu Tenno was on his campaigns he entertained himself by putting sand and stone together on trays. The trays were like those used by women for their hair while they slept. Temmu Tenno founded a school of Bon-seki which still bears his name in Japan."

In Bon-seki, according to the American disciple, the selection of the main stone is of the utmost importance. It must have an interesting shape and should be from a mountain stream. It must not be handmade.

In addition to the big dark rock, small white rocks, sand, gravel, and tools, the Bon-seki artist uses feathers to shape the sand and gravel. One feather gives the exact sweep of Fujisan. Another is used to make wavelets. And still another is used to mould the shoreline.

"The pictures and the methods for making them are just the same as they were years and years ago," Mrs. Reischauer said. "That is because a teacher permits no innovations on the part of a pupil and teaches only what he himself learned from his master. In this way the classical arts are preserved. And so as I make this picture of the 'Island of Lost Souls' I make it exactly as my teacher taught me. It would seem unfair to the Japanese to make it any other way."

How to Keep Well

Eliminate Smallpox.

FEW if any school children of today have the slightest conception of the ravages of smallpox. This is an era of an intelligent attitude toward health problems, when education and the activities of boards of health and school authorities have made vaccination against smallpox a routine procedure.

Because we see so few cases of the disease does not mean that it is not now in existence. Although victory over smallpox has been possible for more than a century it has not been achieved. Let an unvaccinated generation arise and permit the disease to gain a foothold among them and the nation would view the result with horror.

The disease usually begins with a chill, headache, and pain in various parts of the body, particularly of the lower back. In children there is generally vomiting. The skin eruption appears about the third day and begins as very tiny red spots that a few hours later become raised. Within 24 hours they can be felt as firm shotlike bodies. These rapidly increase in size and by the end of the second day take on the appearance of water blisters. During the next two or three days they enlarge somewhat and are surrounded by a considerable area of inflammation. About the fifth or sixth day pus appears in each of the raised areas. The eruption is distributed fairly generally over the body, although particularly favored sites are the skin of the head, face, hands, and forearms. The temperature, which at first is quite high, falls with the appearance of the skin manifestations, although there is a secondary rise when pus begins to form. The fever then gradually abates and in uncomplicated cases the patient proceeds to convalescence.

Considerable difference is observed in the severity of epidemics and a mild case in one individual may lead to a severe infection in another. Treatment must always be in the hands of a competent physician, and, because of the possible virulence of the infection, every possible precaution must be taken against its spread.

Ski Devotees Find Trails in New England

Men and Women Crowd Trains Every Week-End to Mark New Paths.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

NEW ENGLAND is developing a winter habit—ski trains. The ski trains are for the purpose of reaching a new sort of landmark—ski trails. With every week-end, men and women crowding into the trains, setting out on the trails, are making a winter network of paths through woods and mountains.

Two groups whose members are constantly breaking new trails are the Winnepesaukee Ski Club of Laconia, and the skiing members of the Appalachian Mountain Club. In New England one must clear away trees before skiing is possible. So juniper is chopped down, and in addition there is heavy brush to be cut and stones to be blasted away.

The Winrose trail, northeast of North Pack Monadnock, is very popular with snow train or ski train parties. On Mount Washington, the fire trail specializes in long straight drops, while Mount Moosilauke offers a trail of 36 famous curves.

Now that trails are becoming established, the next step is building camps and shelters, where hot meals can be cooked and a stopover made on a long trek. The usual hospitable plan is to furnish a cabin at least with a stove, which after all can't very easily be carried off on skis as a souvenir.

Breaking ski trails is a sport in which women may smooth the path for men. Above are shown two members of a ski train that is blazing new trails in Northern woods.

What Today Means

"Capricorn."

IF DECEMBER 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

This December 28 should prove a lucky day for you in more than one respect. Money will circulate freely and all lines of business should be brisk. Requests will, as a rule, be complied with, providing they are of a reasonable nature. Love affairs, under favorable conditions, will progress with more rapidity than they have in some days in the past.

If a woman and December 28 is your birthday, avoid developing the habit of being suspicious. If you will take for granted that kindness, rather than a selfish motive, is responsible for many of the nice attentions you are the recipient of, the happier you will be.

There is an indication that money may come to you as the result of your personal efforts, but in a larger sum than expected. You should be able to make a success in office detail work, that of a secretarial nature, short-story writing, or as a saleswoman.

If a man and December 28 is your natal day, the quicker you believe in the inborn honesty of the average man and woman, the more rapid will be your progress onward. A too skeptical attitude is apt to interfere with your popularity, so guard against it. Some form of literary productions, lecturing, music, law, politics, or salesmanship should enable you to make money.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: People are always urging the single woman to marry and have children. A friend often reproaches me for not marrying and "passing on the torch of life." I think this is a mistaken viewpoint on his part, living as we are in such a chaotic world, with so much unrest and financial depression. To me it seems almost criminal to bring children into the world to face such wretched conditions.

* * * *

Personally, I would not care to be responsible for bringing life into the world until social conditions improved, and I think children would hardly thank the parents who, in giving them life, made it necessary for them to cope with existing problems.

* * * *

My friend and I have had many arguments on this subject. What do you think? I am in the thirties and he is 50, a widower with four children. Who is right—myself, a single woman, or the father of four? DOROTHY.

One Point of View.

DEAR DOROTHY: In a society which as yet has failed to organize itself adequately in regard to providing for the care, maintenance and education of children, and which places the responsibilities of parenthood almost entirely on the shoulders of the parents themselves, it seems to me each human being has the right to decide for himself whether or not he shall invite such responsibility.

* * * *

Realizing the human being's inability to understand the meaning and purpose of the universe, I would be foolhardy indeed to constitute myself a blind proponent of the worth of the gift of life. Those who consider the question seriously, dispassionately and with enlightenment, and reach a negative conclusion, are surely entitled to act on that conviction.

* * * *

But there are others, of course, whose negation is simply a rationalization of their subconscious desire to escape adult responsibility.

Chaos, unrest and economic depression are not social phenomena peculiar to the twentieth century. Such conditions have prevailed, in one form or another, since the beginning of recorded history, and had all of our forefathers retreated in dismay from the formidable prospect of rearing families in the midst of difficulties, the human race might be extinct today.

* * * *

Matthew Arnold, born in 1822, wrote: ". . . the world . . . hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light, nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain; and we are here as on a darkling plain swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight, where ignorant armies clash by night."

Yet we can not deny that some progress—spiritual, social and scientific—has been accomplished on a wider scale than ever before, by men and women born into his own and succeeding generations.

* * * *

So you see, I am rather inclined to side with the opinion of the 50-year-old father of four, rather than with the childless woman of 30, in thinking that, all in all, life is a gift not to be despised nor withheld until conditions seem perfect for its unfoldment. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Spring Style Hats Arriving; Shallow Crowns in Vogue

In the middle of winter, a woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of spring bonnets. And small wonder since the flattering mushroom shape is in vogue. It's illustrated above. The stiff little veil adds that certain something.

THE WEATHER forecasters may be counting on a few blizzards and a couple of snow storms this season, but spring is already here as far as women's hats are concerned.

About a month ago resort styles, inluding light, frivolous headgear, began arriving in the shops. But now the honest-to-goodness spring styles are trickling into town. They aren't much different from the resort styles in shape, but they're a good deal less summery in fabric and color.

Hats shown for Southern wear consist largely of crocheted, open-work straws and pastel felts. Hats for early spring wear in Washington and thereabouts are made of dark, closely woven straws, of dark felts, or either of those materials in some bright shade.

Crowns Come Down.

But no matter what the fabric, crowns are down. Instead of rearing themselves steeply into the air as they've been doing for the last few weeks, they nestle close to the top of the head; not quite as flat as last spring, perhaps, but certainly shallow when compared with Russian toques.

A brim will be over every smart woman's forehead before the New Year has got much of a start. This is evident from even a few coy glances in the direction of 1935 millinery. Some of the brims are pulled down over one eye which is a grand way to achieve that comehither look out of the other one.

Brims Dip Slightly.

A few brims are rolled up against the crown in back but this fashion seems on the wane. It's much better to have them dip slightly. The up-on-one-side movement is better than ever. It's bound to be when so many brims swoop down over the right eye; otherwise the wearer would have to cut holes in her hat to be able to see. So, unless she has a profile like a camel's, the hat-conscious woman will probably get her first spring thrill out of a chapeau that conceals most of her head on one side and reveals most of it on the other.

Then there is the mushroom type of bonnet, slated to be a winner in the coming season. It consists of a fairly wide brim that seems part of the shallow crown and droops softly all the way 'round. This is a particularly glamorous style for dinner costumes. And a tiny stiff veil gives it that certain something.

A New Type of Specialist.

In this age of specialists it is not uncommon to find some Bridge players who play trump contracts better than notrump hands and vice versa. It is not uncommon—in fact, just the opposite—to find that a Bridge player below the expert class bids better than he plays or plays better than he bids. But I recently observed in action a new and extraordinary kind of specialist. At least, I was assured by his friends that, however badly he mangles other hands, "he is a genius at playing one notrump."

North and South vulnerable.

The bidding:

West opened the ten of clubs, North ducked, and East won with the King. East returned the club deuce, and dummy won at once. Now dummy led a small spade and East put the King right up. Faced with the problem of trying to get West in the lead to continue the club suit, East made a bad guess, leading a small heart. South played the four, and North won with the nine. A spade lead to South's Queen now disclosed the bad break in the suit. There was nothing left for declarer to do but to tackle the diamonds. He led a small diamond, and West stepped in with the Ace, in order to run his club suit. On the fourth club North discarded a heart and South a diamond. On the fifth club came the declarer's great moment. He discarded the diamond King from Dummy to unblock his own Queen and discarded the remaining small diamond from his own hand. As West now could lead nothing but a heart or a diamond, he was bound to give immediate entry to the South hand and of course the stripping out of clubs and diamonds effected a marked squeeze against East in hearts and spades. Declarer thus made his contract.

Poor Children's Health Better Than Wealthy's

Children from homes in moderate circumstances are more healthy than those from wealthy households, a recent medical census in Enfield, England, indicates. Fifty per cent of the pupils in expensive schools were below standard, while only 25 per cent of the poorer children fell below par.

U. S. May Seek Control Over Holding Firms

sured New York officials a loan and grant for the city to build a power plant would be given speedy consideration once plans are drafted. President Roosevelt and Secretary Ickes said they were willing to supply the money for such a purpose if New York could generate power cheaper than it can get it from private concerns.

Ickes said yesterday that in the case of requests for additions to existing municipal plants only assurances of ability to repay would be taken into consideration. He said the ability of the city plant to produce power cheaper than private companies would not be a factor.

Meanwhile, Administration officials were studying the report of the Mississippi Valley Committee, which recommended a pooling of power under control of the Government.

From official but non-quotable sources came the opinion that plans for carrying out the suggestion would be held in abeyance for the time being. Likewise, plans for setting up additional authorities similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority, were being shelved until the President has rounded other phases of his legislative program into shape.

The possibility of placing the Federal Government in charge of rate fixing by declaring transmission lines that cross State lines to be common carriers, which had been hinted at in the report of the Mississippi Valley Committee, was said to have numerous legal obstacles in its way.

'Purge' Faced By Personnel Of Land Banks

McGill Hits 'Undesirables' in Government's Farm Credit Agencies.

Legislation to "purge" the Federal Land Banks and other farm credit agencies of what he termed "undesirable personnel" will be introduced by Senator George McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, he announced yesterday.

The bill would provide, among other things, that no administrative official in any of the farm credit agencies shall continue to hold office or be appointed to any executive position in the system if he has been judged guilty in any criminal proceeding or adjudged liable in damages in any civil proceeding for having perpetuated a fraud.

An example of official now serving in such capacity, he said, is the case of a member of the board of directors of the Federal Land Bank and Allied Farm Credit agencies in a Western district. It was pointed out by the Senator's office that a State's Supreme Court reports show this official civilly liable for damages "because of fraud and misrepresentation."

In a statement regarding the bill he intends to introduce, Senator McGill said:

"The farmers of this country have right to expect only the highest type of men for directors and administrative officials of the various farm cerdit agencies and it appears that legislative action is necessary.

"In Kansas I talked to hundreds of farmers and the complaint seemed general that the New Deal had not materially affected the Farm Credit Administration and that many of the officials of that agency are extremely reactionary. Since the responsibility for the functioning of the farm credit agencies rests directy upon the directors and executive officers of the various districts and the Washington office, it is imperative that those filling such positions be above approach."

Senator McGill is a member of the Agriculture committee.

'Other Wise Man' Winds Up Tonight

Last Presentation Slated at Luther Place Church.

Henry Van Dyke's impressive story of "The Other Wise Man," will be given its final 1934 performance this evening at the Luther Place Memorial Church, with John Sikken playing the role of Artaban. Rev. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will present the greeting and conduct the ceremony of the Offertory. Mrs. Cornelia Long Kinsella will be the organist.

While the cast remains largely intact from the previous performances, Sanford Donaldson will replace Harry Schonrank as Melchior, the Second Wise man, and Howard Whitfield will take over the role of Tigranes, the Magian, earlier played by Herman P. Riess. Others of the 100-member cast, which has already two exquisite performances to its credit, include Katherine Riggs, Mary Apple, Thomas M. Cahill, Christine Irish, Carl Carlson, Judy Lyeth, J. Edmund Veitch and Eugene Kressin.

The church doors will be opened at 7:15 o'clock, and as hundreds have been turned away on the previous nights, those desiring to see "The Other Wise Man" are requested to come early, as no standing room is available. The services start at 8:30 p. m.

Supreme Court Review Sought On ROTC Rule

Validity of Film Patents Attacked in Second Brief Filed.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday by counsel for two students suspended by the University of California for refusal to take military training, to review its recent unanimous decision sustaining the action taken by the university.

The petition for rehearing was filed by John Beardsley, of Los Angeles, who contended the decision of the court seemed to be based upon a misapprehension of the constitutional rights claimed by his clients.

Beardsley said service in the ROTC at the University of California constituted compulsory military service in a Federal military establishment contrary to peace time immunity from such service.

Validity of talking picture patents on which William Fox is seeking to collect $100,000,000 were attacked in a brief also filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by the Altoona Publix Theaters, Inc., of Huntington, Pa., and others.

The German patents are controlled in this country by the American Tri-Ergon Corporation, organized by Fox, former theatrical operator.

The patents cover processes for producing and showing combined sound and picture films.

Lower Federal courts in New York and Pennsylvania sustained the German patents and Fox is suing for alleged infringement. The supreme court first declined, but later agreed to pass on the validity of the patents.

The brief asserted American ingenuity had produced many electrical devices used in making the combined films and for showing them which were not provided by the German inventors.

'Bibi' Balks Reunion Of Carol, Ex-Queen

Bucharest Denies King Sent Yule Gifts to Princess Helen.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, Dec. 27.—Buxom "Bibi" Lupescu, King Carol's copper-haired charmer, stands squarely in the way of reconciliation between the Rumanian King and his divorced Queen, Helen of Greece, reports from Bucharest said today.

Palace officials at Bucharest put the quietus on rumors that little Crown Prince Mihai, on his way to Florence to visit his mother, is carrying Carol's peace offering in the shape of Christmas presents.

"When two parents, especially royal figures, are estranged," one official said knowingly, "they don't usually exchange presents," adding that Magda Lupescu's hold on the erstwhile scapegrace of the Balkans' royalty seems too strong to make any reconciliation likely.

Eclipses Queen Marie.

The palace officials merely repeated publicly reports that have come privately to foreign legations in Vienna.

More powerful even than the famous "Carmen Sylvia" (Queen Elizabeth of Rumania) and the beautiful and talented Dowager Queen Marie, Mme. Lupescu's ability to make and unmake cabinets almost at will has gained her the title "the uncrowned queen of Rumania." She has almost totally eclipsed Queen Marie in Rumania's limelight.

The court "camarilla" Lupescu allegedly heads has drawn the bitter criticism of Carol's political foes, but repeated efforts to oust her have found Carol determined to allow no interference in his private life, although critics charge the present state of affairs has brought the nation into scorn and ridicule abroad.

Even in Rumania, accustomed to Lupescu after ten years of her intimate friendship with the King, the power she wields offers an unceasingly interesting topic of conversation. She is said to have wrecked the once powerful Liberal Party almost single handed.

She Appears Unguarded.

With her increasing power, reports to legations here say, Lupescu has become less fearful of assassination. Once every step she took was watched by guards. Even now her palace has its alert guardians. But during the recent Christmas shopping she several times appeared—lavishly dressed, her copper-gold hair and rich jewels shining—on Bucharest's fashionable Calae Victoreii Boulevard, alone and unguarded.

Though Princess Helen, Carol's divorced wife, reportedly has offered to leave her exile and return to him if he renounces Lupescu, the bond between the two, legations here understand, has not weakened.

Rumanians, fascinated by Lupescu's swift rise to prominence, like to recall her humble beginnings.

In the Moldavian village where she was born and spent her youth, friends say, she acquired the nickname "Magda," which has virtually displaced her real name. By an ironic coincidence, that name is Helen, the same as that of the princess she ousted from Carol's affections.

Still Wed to Lupescu.

Nor, strictly speaking, is Lupescu her true last name. When she was 18, she married an officer of the Rumanian army named Tempeanu—he holds the rank of major now—and so far as is known, she has never divorced him.

After some years of happy married life with her soldier-husband, the titian-haired beauty caught King Carol's eye at a gala military ball in the town of Ramnicul-Sarat. He fell in love with her, the story goes, at first sight.

Earlier political pressure had forced Carol to give up his affair with Mme. Zizi Lambrino, who now lives in Paris. Queen Marie, after Princess Helen had complained that Carol had discontinued relations with her, called her wayward son to her.

The report is that the handsome Marie, angered at Carol's indiscretion on the threshold of his becoming King of Rumania, slapped him.

Carol reputedly said he would leave Rumania and foreswear the crown before giving up Magda Lupescu. He carried out his threat, if it was made, fleeing Rumania with the red-haired lady.

When the aged, ill King Ferdinand, Carol's father, sent Ion Bratianu, then prime minister, to Paris to warn the crown prince that he could not leave the country legally, the enraged Carol formally renounced his rights to the throne, creating an enormous sensation.

Returns From Exile.

A crown council was summoned in Bucharest, which decided all Carol's royal prerogatives should be taken from him. He was forbidden to return to Rumania for ten years. It was also decided he should thenceforward be known by the plebeian name "Carol Caraiman."

In an effort to forestall Carol's return to Rumania, his son, little Prince Mihai, was assigned Carol's rights to the throne. Soon afterward King Ferdinand died—Rumanians attributing his death partly to grief and shame over Carol's indiscretions—and dowager Queen Marie became virtual ruler of the country.

In 1930 Carol made his now famed return from exile, dramatically mounted the throne, replacing his own son, and successfully rallied the backing of the army.

Gov. Peery To Ask Help Of Justices

Will Appeal to Conference for Aid in Stopping Illicit Liquor.

State Departments to Lay Problems Before New Judicial Branch.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27 (AP).—Gov. Peery today let it be known that he will use a conference of the new Virginia trial justices late in January to appeal for cooperation in eliminating more quickly the illicit liquor traffic from Virginia.

The Governor said he expects to win the cooperation of the justices with a review of what he considers one of the State's major problems.

The justices will hear not only from the Governor, but from officials of nine departments which have law enforcement problems dealing with welfare, health and the institutionalization of insane and dependent persons, child care, school attendance, tax collection, traffic control and liquor control.

The conference will be held here January 25. It was arranged by Public Welfare Commissioner Arthur W. James, who today said its primary purpose was the discussion of problems and policies of the trial justice courts.

Especial emphasis will be placed on the legal and financial problems of this new branch of the judiciary.

The justices will consider also the cases handled in cooperation with State departments, institutions and agencies.

The morning session of the all-day conference will be devoted to the legal and administrative aspects of the new courts, with discussions by Attorney General A. P. Staples, director of the division of legislative research, and drafting William R. Shands, Comptroller E. R. Combs, Auditor of Public Accounts L. McCarthy Downs and the trial justices.

At a luncheon Judge Robert G. Cochran, of the Norfolk Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, will speak on the juvenile and domestic relations courts, which are presided over by trial justices.

The aftrenoon will be devoted to discussion of the work of law enforcement and educational programs of the State departments which work with the trial justice courts. Among these are the departments of education, public health, labor and industry, public welfare, motor vehicles, ABC, taxation, game and inland fisheries and fisheries. Each will be represented by its chief.

Hagerstown Museum Spreads Art Education Over Wide Area

The Washington County Museum of Fine Arts, presented to Hagerstown, Md., and Washington County by Mrs. Anna Brugh Singer, the only stipulation being that its portals should be forever open without charge to any desiring to enter them.

Lectures and Loans of Works Help Instruct Children, Adults.

By J. G. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27.—If the Cumberland Valley some day produces a Raphael or a Michelangelo, the influence of an institution here may be responsible.

It is the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts, which in the three years since it was presented as a gift to Hagerstown and Washington County by a former native, Mrs. Anna Brugh Singer, has spread its influence not only into the city and county to which it and an almost priceless collection of art were given, but throughout the entire valley.

The Washington County Museum is one of the first small institutions of its kind to undertake art pioneering. That it has succeeded is evidenced by some remarkable works of art which have been produced, particularly by the younger generation, and which were exhibited at two annual Cumberland Valley Art exhibitions at the museum. The third annual exhibition will open February 1 and will continue for one month.

Only works of art completed in the previous year which have not before been exhibited are eligible. The territory in which artists are eligible includes that section from Harrisburg, Pa., to Winchester, Va., and from Cumberland to Frederick, Md. The museum reserves the right to acquire any piece exhibited and also will try to sell exhibits for the artists. Each artist is permitted to submit two works.

Open Three Years.

In the three years that the museum has been open, 79,870 persons have visited it. At 23 special loan exhibitions in 1934, attendance was 18,592.

Soon after the museum was opened Richard Carl Medford was named director. Medford holds bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from Johns Hopkins, the University of Paris, and Harvard, and spent two years teaching the history of art in French schools. He goes abroad each summer for further study and also has been doing advanced graduate work at New York University. He also attended the Maryland Institute, Baltimore.

Medford also direct numerous educational activities weekly. He believes in starting with the young and has introduced a Saturday morning children's hour, which has been functioning two years. A simplified discussion of subjects connected with the history of art is given by Miss Mary A. Harter, his assistant. After a half-hour story period, the children are invited to sketch in the galleries, not to teach them to draw, but to understand pictures. The first exhibition by the 65 children who attend was given in December.

The director also gives gallery talks for the public and for special groups. It is not unusual to find entire school classes attending, coming miles from rural sections.

The museum has a collection of large mounted photographs of art works which it loans to schools for visual educational purposes. In one year 13,000 pupils took advantage of this collection. It also has provided an art reference library of 1,000 volumes, which is open to the public, together with 3,000 lantern slides of art work.

Many Masters Represented.

The museum's permanent collection, gathered over many years from the far corners of the earth by Mrs. Singer and her husband, William A. Singer, of Olden, Norway, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., who is one of the greatest living landscape artists, was presented along with the museum building to the people of Hagerstown and Washington County. This collection includes nineteenth and twentieth century paintings by American and European artists, including works by Frieseke, Jonas Lie, Sigurd Skon, Monticelli, Childe Hassam, Twachtman, Courbet, Fromkes, Hawthorne and Lieberman. Its permanent collection of sculptures include works by Paul Bartlett, Rodin, Gutzon Borglum and Constantin Meunier.

One of the museum's prize pieces, perhaps the most valuable of its sculptures, is the original terra cotta bust study made for one of the burghers of Calais by Rodin. Another is a portrait of the late King Albert of Belgium by the court painter of Belgium, Opsomer, painted in 1932, shortly before the king's untimely death.

Another fine collection is a group of Tibetan banners, religious paintings in red, blue and green, one of the few of its kind in existence.

The museum building itself is of Georgian architecture and is so built that additional units may be erected as the museum grows.

The city and county governments contribute to the support of the museum, while the institution is operated and controled by a board of trustees made up of a gruop of local business men and women, of which Mrs. William T. Hamilton is chairman. This board includes the mayor of Hagerstown and president of the board of county commissioners, who are ex officio members.

U. S. Revokes License of 44 In Liquor Trade

Lord Fairfax Company, of Baltimore, One of Estopped Group.

(Associated Press.)

Revocation of 44 permits held by liquor distillers, importers and rectifiers was ordered yesterday by the Alcohol Control Administration. Included among the group was the importing and rectifying permit of the Lord Fairfax Corporation, Baltimore, revoked on numerous charges including failure to comply with the internal revenue laws.

A distilled spirits permit issued to Harry Graham and Associates, Rockford, Ill., was revoked because of inactivity and the additional grounds of "erroneous and false information given in the application for the permit."

An administration statement said that 39 of the permits revoked had been held by importers and attributed most of the revocation in this group because of failure to file reports as required by the Government and also for inactivity.

Permits of two distillers were withdrawn solely on the ground of inactivity. These were the Angelus Wine & Distillery Corporation, of Los Angeles, Calif., and the Ohio Distillery Co., of Chesapeake, Ohio.

The administration said that it had been found necessary "to deny the application of a large number of prospective distillers on the ground that additional distilling capacity was not necessary to meet the consumptive demand for distilled spirits."

"Similarly," it added, "the administration has also instituted a program for strict enforcement of the provisions of the Distillers' Code relative to inactivity and is requiring those distiller permittees who are not using their permits and engaging in actual distilling operations to surrender their permits or have them revoked."

Plan to Unify Oyster Trade Is Undertaken

NRA Moves Agreement With Maryland and Virginia.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 27 (AP).—State NRA Compliance Directors John J. Corson, of Virginia, and Arthur E. Hungerford, of Maryland, conferred in Baltimore today to insure uniform compliance in the oyster industry throughout the Chesapeake Bay area. After the meeting a joint statement was issued declaring that full compliance with all provisions of the code of fair competition for the fresh oyster industry would be required. The statement continued:

"In a highly competitive industry like this one it is necessary that both States act in unison, otherwise unfairness might result to large groups in the industry.

"It developed that already the larger part of the industry is complying with the code. Violations now are chiefly among smaller packers who will be called upon to make restitution for violations of the labor provisions of the code and to sign compliance. Should these violators fail to make an adjustment satisfactory to the State directors, the enforcement agencies of the Government will be asked to take charge.

"As the code calls for pay to the oyster shuckers on the basis of a standard United States gallon, both State directors will see that 8-pint gallon measures are used for the standard of pay. Full compliance will give workers in the industry a living wage and packers a fair profit."

Hungerford declared that nearly 15,000 employes in Maryland alone are benefiting by the code.

Douw Heads New Board At Annapolis

Efficiency and Economy Unit of County Is Organized.

E. Wilbur Hall Is Named Secretary of Commission.

Annapolis Md., Dec. 27 (AP).—The recently appointed efficiency and economy commission of Anne Arundel County organized today, selecting a chairman and secretary.

The commission notified the board of county commissioners that John DeP. Douw, president of the County Trust Co., had been elected chairman, and E. Wilbur Stoll secretary. Other members are James H. Ellis, executive vice president, Annapolis Banking & Trust Co.; E. Churchill Murray, president, Better Government League, and Carey L. Meredith.

The commission and the board of commissioners met in executive session at Douw's offices for nearly two hours, during which an informal discussion of county affairs was held.

Asked to Hold Up Contract.

Thomas J. Cullimore, president of the commissioners, said that no action had been taken or decided upon as a result of the meeting.

John Norton Johnson of Annapolis, appeared before the commissioners and requested them to hold up a contract for $10,000 awarded to a Baltimore auditing firm to install a bookeeping system similar to that used in Baltimore City in the office of the county treasurer. The system was recommended by the last grand jury.

Johnson asked the board to hold up the contract until the legality of the award by the Old Board of Commissioners could be investigated and to make sure the county was securing the best system for the lowest price.

Decision Deferred.

The board took the matter under advisement. Benjamin Michaelson, counsel to the commissioners, cited the possibility of breach of contract, if the award was revoked. Johnson pointed out that the county law had been interpreted by Senator Ridgley P. Melvin to require all supplies for county offices to be advertised for bids.

Dr. J. J. Murphy, of Annapolis, was reappointed physician at the Anne Arundel County jail for two years.

The following special police officers were appointed for terms of one year, first district, Edward C. King, Jesse Cummings, Steven M. Smith; second district, Samuel Jones, Thomas Miller, Theodore Christensen; third district, William Trimble; fourth district, Wilbur Wade; fifth district, Frank Welch, Daniel Donnelly, John Hamlin, Joseph Wilkerson, Marion Ford, Robert Flannery; seventh district, John Bussey; eighth district, Bruce Lyons.

The appointment of special officer Whitney Johnson, of the third district, was held over after Clifford M. Bassford and William T. Armiger had lodged complaints against the officer.

All bridge keepers in the county were reappointed.

Hagerstown Boy, 13, Injured in Truck Crash

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.). Richard Holder, 13, son of John Holder, is in a critical condition at the Washington County Hospital with internal injuries received when the wheels of a towed truck, which struck him, passed over his chest.

James Wagaman, son of Dr. S. M. Wagaman, was injured when his car hit a parked car, and Rose Cook, occupant of the parked car, suffered a fractured arm. Mary Nicely was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Frederick and was taken to the Frederick Hospital, afterwards being removed to her home here.

Fusion Aims For Coalition In Maryland

Four Democratic Votes Sought in Senate to Bolster Strength.

Dr. Wade Reported as Leader of Drive for Control.

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—A Fusion movement was reported today to be under way to gain four Democratic votes in the State Senate when the General Assembly meets in Annapolis next week to add to the 11 Republican votes for control of the legislative branch.

Dr. J. Hubert Wade, former chairman of the Democratic State central committee and chief of the Conley-for-Governor forces in the last primary, was reported as the leading figure in the movement by a coalition of Republicans and Democrats who have not been identified closely with the present administration.

Wade Holds Conferences.

Dr. Wade was said to have held a series of conferences during the past few days, culminating last night in a meeting in a Baltimore hotel. Dr. Wade was described as a potential candidate for State treasurer, a post now held by John M. Dennis.

The State treasurer is elected on a joint ballot of the two houses of the State Legislature, which is overwhelmingly Democratic. The leading candidates in the party for the office are Dennis, seeking to retain the office, and Hooper S. Miles, chairman of the Democratic advisory committee in the recent campaign.

Colburn Fusion Choice.

Harold E. Colburn, independent Democrat and senator-elect from Cecil County, was termed as the choice of the fusionists for president of the Senate. Ridgely P. Melvin, of Anne Arundel County; Lansdale G. Saccer, of Prince Georges County, and Senator Joseph L. Donovan, of Howard County, have been mentioned as possible Democratic candidates for the office.

The Fusion ranks, according to reports, are rather indefinite, as the coalition group have gained only two of the four needed Democratic votes, while some of the Republicans have been reported as willing to back the candidacy of Senator Melvin for the Senate presidency.

The names of the two Democratic votes have not been revealed, although Senators-elect John G. Callan, independent Democrat of the Second District of Baltimore City; John D. C. Duncan, of Baltimore County, and Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County, were prominently mentioned as being sought for the Fusion group.

IN ADDITION to the vicinities of Fredericksburg, Va., Warrenton, Va., and Frederick, Md., all of which boast mines in operation, gold now has been discovered in Page County, Va., near Stanley. Harry Shuler, on whose property the gold was found, made his find while digging a well adjacent to his swimming pool. Analysis shows that the ore also contains some fools' gold and copper.

The jail in Amelia, Va., couldn't keep Roy Greenwood from spending Christmas Day with his friends. He sawed his way out about 12:45, Christmas morning with several hack-saw blades, which were later found in his cell. According to Madison deKraft, deputy sheriff, Greenwood was arrested last Saturday on five charges.

In Frederick, Md., police are looking for someone small enough to crawl through a window pane opening, who is charged with setting fire to the North Market street school and causing damages estimated at $2,500.

Lewis Mullenix, 19, Hagerstown, Md., established what is thought to be a record for fliers in that section when he soloed a plane after receiving only 4 hours and 25 minutes of instruction.

Mullenix, instructed by Richard Henson, of the local airport, made a perfect take-off and landing.

Yule Postal Business Up at Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Measured by postoffice business here, this was the best Christmas in Fredericksburg in the last five years.

Cancellations increased about 20 per cent over last year, while the sale of stamps was $190 greater than the sale of stamps in 1933. A total of 95,000 separate covers went through the cancelling machines.

Codists Quit In Baltimore Coal Dispute

Resignations Sent Here by Six Members of NRA Group.

Lack of Cooperation in Washington Blamed for Action.

Baltimore, Dec. 27 (AP).—Resignations of the six members of the Coal Code Authority for Baltimore today were forwarded to the National Code Authority in Washington.

The group of men, who were elected by the 400 coal dealers of the State, complained they had been unable to obtain from Washington such cooperation as is necessary for enforcement of the NRA code in Maryland. Their resignations are made effective December 31.

The action will leave the State without means of enforcing conditions under which the retail distribution of domestic coal is made under the NRA.

Men Who Resigned.

The men who resigned are J. F. Palmer, chairman of the authority and secretary of the Baltimore Coal Exchange; H. C. McComas, Hugh C. Hill, Benson Blake, jr., former president of the Baltimore Coal Exchange; Theodore C. Wailes and L. Dewey Hood.

Reasons for their action were said to have included:

Complaint by the Maryland Coal Code Authority that they failed to get action by Washintgon authorities on alleged violation of the code forwarded by them to Washington.

Confusion as to the legal status of the code, and confusion as to what was interstate and what was intrastate.

Trouble on Cost.

Difficulty in getting Washington to establish what the industry refers to as "floor cost," or the retail price at which coal should be sold.

Inability to establish effective relations with the office of Deputy Administrator Frank A. Hecht in Washington.

Persons familiar with the coal situation in the State said today the resignations would leave coal dealers free to conduct business without reference to the code.

A Distinguished Audience Will View "The President Vanishes" at Loew's Fox

High Officials Invited to See Daring Picture

Film Will Not Be Canceled; About Musical Scores; Theater News.

By Nelson B. Bell.

A distinguished audience will view one of the most discussed film releases of the season at Loew's Fox Theater tonight.

Although it is being bruited about that efforts have been made to have "The President Vanishes" withdrawn from public exhibition in the National Capital, no official objection has been raised to the picture's presentation on a local screen and it will, therefore, not only be screened for the edification and entertainment of the general public but tonight for an audience of distinguished invitied guests of the theater management, as well.

The members of the President's Cabinet, Congressional leaders of both the Senate and House of Representatives, high officials of the Government departments and all branches of the armed forces of the United States have been extended invitations to be the honored guests of Loew's Fox at tonight's last performance.

Theme Is Sensational.

More daring, more sensational and more thrilling than "Gabriel Over the White House" — which seemed to assume the premise that a blow on the head might be a benefit to certain chief executives —"The President Vanishes" treats of a theme founded on a national crisis of such vital importance that the President sees fit to shut himself off from the world and cause the rumor to be broadcast that he has been kidnaped.

By this device he swings public sentiment preponderantly in his favor, averts the disaster that faces the country and emerges heroic from a position of dire potentialities.

The picture handles certain aspects of present-day living without gloves and is said to possess the rare merit of being frank without being either disrespectful to American institutions that are most cherished or deliberately vicious toward any person or group—other than those who carry on subterranean and seditious enterprises aimed at the welfare of the United States and its people.

"The President Vanishes" may be so highly imaginative that the author really did not dare sign his name to it, but it will not be found a dramatic soporific.

Today is the day when all of Washington's bona fide Adelines will have an opportunity to enjoy the quaint comedy and lilting melodies of "Sweet Adeline" at the Earle Theater. With presentations of this resurrection of the customs, costumes and conceits of the "Gay Nineties," beginning at 10 o'clock this morning, a long day is afforded for those named "Adeline" to present themselves at the theater and walk in free of charge. That is all that is necessary—merely establish the fact that your name actually is Adeline and the Earle will be your host. One suspects that anyone of the masculine gender will find it a little tough trying to mooch a free peek at the filium!

We Receive a Letter.

The postman, who has had trouble enough lately, goodness and Santa Claus know, deposits the following interesting letter from a lad who knows his theater, under date line as of December 26, 1934:

Dear Nelson: The presence in town of one Jerome David Kern musical play, "Music in the Air," and the coming in a day or two of another, "Sweet Adeline," stirs my attention, particularly when a few of the critical gentry when previewing the "Adeline" piece stated that Mr. Kern wrote two new numbers for the screen production of the play.

The two numbers in question, "Lonely Feet" and "We Were So Young," happen to be from Mr. Kern's English musical play, "Three Sisters." It was produced this past spring, during Easter week, at the Drury Lane Theater in London. It had a brief run of about six weeks, closing after Kern returned to this country quite ill. Oscar Hammerstein 2d was his collaborator on "Three Sisters."

This song-shifting practice reminds me that once before Kern turned the music of a play that had failed over to a play that succeeded.

About 14 or 15 years ago, he did the score for a musical version of "Brewster's Millions." The show opened here at Poli's as "Zip! Goes a Million!" The Dolly Sisters were in it. So were Marie Carroll and, I think, Harry Richman. Guy Bolton and B. G. DeSylva had a hand in the piece. The show failed and no one remembered a single tune from it.

Several years later when Marilyn Miller appeared in "Sally," the "Million" score—a dozen numbers—appeared in the Miller production and most of them were big hits, i. e., "The Whippoorwill Song," "Look for the Silver Lining" and others.

What didn't go yesterday, goes today. (Signed) FRANK BAER.

Thanks, Frank. That is very interesting. How's about writing me another one, say, about two days after New Year's, if you get the idea?

"The Radio Mystery," a ridiculous farce in three acts, by Dana Rush and John Milton Hagan, will be presented by the Curley Club in Carroll Hall on January 17. The play will be directed by Paul Messink, formerly identified with the Ram's Head Players, in which he was associated with Josephine Hutchinson and Walter Beck. Mr. Messink also was organizer and director of the Robin Hood Players. Helen Herbeck, John Donnelly, Robert Haskins, Edna Moreland and Ione Hayes have been cast in the principal roles.

Lost-and-Found Note.

At last we have got on the scent of Etheldreda & Oscar, the old roadside acrobats who used to make all their jumps in a Ford. Oscar is being featured in a one-ring circus and Etheldreda is breaking in a troupe of trained insects, something like a flea circus.

And some of us have the nerve to complain about hard times!

Pretty soft, this living in a house, instead of an animal tent on an open lot!

Film Folk Know Where to Look for News

When the Warner Brothers were producing "Sweet Adeline," the musical comedy of those "Gay Nineties," opening today at the Earle Theater with Irene Dunne starred, they wanted a representative national newspaper first page to signalize an important event in May, 1898. What more natural than that they should choose The Washington Post? Nothing. So that is what they did. The foreground dudes, left and right, are Hugh Herbert and Ned Sparks, conspicuously cast in Miss Dunne's support.

Straight From the Studios

Hospital for Mental Cases Is New Film's Background; Producers Are in Quest of a New Philo Vance; Previews and Persiflage from Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Dec. 27.—"Private Worlds," that unusual new film effort with a hospital for mental cases as a background, will have quite a remarkable cast when all the personages are assembled. Claudette Colbert has been signed for the feminine lead and will play the part of a psychiatrist, opposite Charles Boyer. Miss Colbert has just finished "The Gilded Lady," and was planning a vacation, but apparently now will embark on this new picture within a few weeks.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY.

Wilcoxon Retained By Paramount.

Henry Wilcoxon is all set for the time being, his Paramount contract having been continued. He has appeared in only one feature, "Cleopatra," and soon will do Richard the Lion-Hearted in "The Crusades," for Cecil B. DeMille. The latter may be a lucky venture for him as some years ago it caused Wallace Beery to achieve new acclaim on the screen.

Detective Wanted To Play Vance.

The actor to do Philo Vance on the screen is proving somewhat of a puzzle for "The Casino Murder Case" producers. This seems to be a regular problem, principally because of precedent.

William Powell started the character in the early days of the talkies in "The Canary Murder Case." He did Philo several times, then Basil Rathbone took up the task once, not too successfully, and later Warren William undertook the portrayal.

Powell would seem the logical choice now, but he has drifted far away from such characterizations in his recent activities. So Otto Kruger has been discussed and lately Paul Lukas has been tested for the part of the effete detective.

"Biography of Bachelor Girl" Previewed on Coast.

Ann Harding has the good fortune to appear in a very delightful comedy, "Biography of a Bachelor Girl." Again the star is directed by Edward H. Griffith, which seems to have its advantages, and the cast, including Robert Montgomery, Edward Everett Horton, Edward Arnold and Una Merkel, is exceedingly competent.

The story may be at fault in some forcing of the comedy but, aside from that, it is very efficiently told and is a pleasing light narrative as adapted by Anita Loos.

Both Montgomery and Horton contribute much to the humor and Miss Harding's accomplishments, in a more ebullient role than usual, are quite spontaneous. It is a high class film and will be popular. Scenic backgrounds are exceptionally good.

Film Pageant In Review.

Elissa Landi will play opposite George Raft in "The Glass Key." Work will start as soon as Raft finishes "Stolen Harmony."

Mary Pickford's novel, "The Demi-Widow," was at one time written with Grace Moore in mind and concerns an opera star. However, if it is produced on the screen with Miss Pickford as the star, the role will be changed to that of an actress.

Bette Davis is about to become a marital commuter between Hollywood and San Francisco. Harmon O. Nelson, her husband, has a long engagement for his jazz band in a night club in the northern California city.

Principal Weds Elizabeth Mace, On Own Faculty

Guests From Shore Present as Maryland Girl and Albert Farver Marry.

Cambridge, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Guests from Baltimore, Washington and all parts of the shore attended the wedding at noon yesterday of Prof. Albert S. Farver, principal of the East New Market High School, and Miss Elizabeth Applegarth Mace, a member of the faculty of the same school. The ceremony took place at Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, with the rector, the Rev. Dr. William D. Gould, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Dr. William McClelland, of St. Stephen's Parish, East New Market.

The bride entered the church gowned in white chanel satin, with her voluminous veil caught with a coronet. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. Her uncle, Thomas F. Applegarth, former vice president and treasurer of the Biltmore Hotels Corporation, gave her in marriage.

Miss Hannah Mace, of Northeast, was her sister's maid of honor. She wore a green crepe dress and carried talisman roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Sarah Linthicum and Mrs. William B. Matthews, of Baltimore, had dresses of green velvet and bouquets of bronze snapdragons. The nuptial music was played by Miss Lucille Hurley.

Dr. Wallace P. Smith, Calvin Harrington, Julian James and Ellison Clayton were the ushers, and Lee Harvey Nichols, of Wilmington, best man.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Fanny Mundy Mace, and the late W. Irving Mace. She has been a member of the faculty of the East New Market High School.

Mr. Farver is the only son of Prof. Albert L. Farver, instructor in industrial arts in the Cambridge High School, and Mrs. Farver. He was graduated from Western Maryland College in 1922.

Fox Hunt Revived At Leonardtown

Capt. Willie Nash Arouses Interest in Chase Again.

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Fox hunting, once so popular in St. Marys County, until last year the home of one of the finest imported thoroughbred packs in the country, is being revived.

Under the tutelage of Capt. Willie Nash, the younger generation is becoming enthusiastic over the chase. It is estimated that there are at least 10,000 gray foxes in this county, and the farmers welcome the hunters.

The late Capt. Edmund Plowden, who died last year, rode to hounds at the age of 76, and owned the finest pack here. He was master of hounds of the Bushwood Club.

Several exciting hunts have been held this week by the Laurel Kennel Club. Two foxes were captured within an hour.

Lewis Predicts Job Insurance

Old Age Pension Law Also Due for Vote, Says Representative.

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, told the Democratic Organization Club of Washington County at the club's annual banquet tonight at the Masonic Hotel that he has every reason to believe that a bill virtually the same as the unemployment insurance legislation he introduced at the last Congress will be included in the Administration's program at the new Congress, and that some treatment of the old-age pension legislation which he has advocated will also be included.

"With regards to raising the revenue," Representative Lewis said, "I disagree with Governor-elect Nice, who proposes a sales tax in Maryland or elsewhere as merely to confess bankruptcy of statesmanship worse than of bankruptcy of treasuries.

"Under the sales tax the laborer who eats as much as myself will be paying as much taxes, though my salary be many times his wages. An income tax rather than a sales tax should be employed to raise the revenue under which men only pay taxes when they have the income and in proportion to their income. The sales tax, on the contrary, levies on people's needs and not on their means or ability to pay.

Real estate is already under too great a burden of taxes, in my opinion."

Representative Lewis said that everything pointed to Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, who has a real gift of leadership, being named majority leader of the new House.

Alex G. McKnight, of the compliance division of the NRA, also was one of the speakers.

Baer Fights Levinsky Tonight

Chicago Befuddled Over Possibilities; K. O. Would Shift Title.

Never Before Has a Ring Champion Placed Self in Such a Spot.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27 (AP).—Chicago fans were slightly befuddled today as they awaited the four-round bout between Max Baer, world's heavyweight champion, and King Levinsky at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night.

Some figured Baer, who can lose his championship in the event the former fish peddler from Chicago's Ghetto knocks him out, was merely itching for a fight; some believed he was a victim of a neat bit of strategy by the Levinsky camp and others insisted the match was an old-fashioned build-up for a regulation heavyweight championship match here next June.

The champion and challenger will fight with six-ounce gloves, two ounces less than the regulation variety used.

Experts to Make Poll.

If the fight goes the maximum four rounds, no decision will be rendered, although one will be taken in a poll of sports writers and experts at ringside. However, if either is knocked out, a full count will be made. Should Baer suffer a knockout at the fists of the wild swinging, but artless Kingfish, his championship would be lost, as the match is advertised as a real one, not an exhibition.

Never before has a boxing champion taken such a chance.

Levinsky fought Baer twice before the Californian became champion and lost both times over 10 and 20 round routes. His measurements are smaller than the champion's, weighing 201 pounds to Baer's 218. Levinsky is 24; Baer 25.

Repartee Exchanged.

That six-ounce gloves be used was Baer's suggestion. It also was agreed that their hands will be wrapped with three feet of gauze and the same amount of adhesive tape—about half the usual wrapping.

Levinsky appeared a little uncertain at first about accepting the suggestion of using lighter gloves. However, he rallied quickly and said:

"Baer did me a favor by asking for six-ounce gloves. If he thinks he's getting the best of the deal he's daffy. I can punch harder than he can, so I'll get the best of it."

"So you can punch harder than I can?" Baer asked. "Well, we'll decide that Friday night. You're a good kid, King, and I hope you make a lot of dough, but I will show you some punching tomorrow night."

It will be Baer's first appearance against a capable opponent since he won the title from Primo Carnera last June, and this fact has stirred up considerable interest. The promoters, Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, said today that they expect an attendance of around 15,000, which would mean a gross "gate" of about $30,000. Both Baer and the Kingfish will operate on percentages.

Levinsky, realizing that he must win off by himself in order to do himself any good, has trained faithfully for three weeks. He appears to be in even better condition than he was for his battle with Art Lasky six weeks ago.

The champion, who has kept himself in fair shape in exhibitions, has worked hard since Sunday.

U. S. Olympics Group To Air Tryouts Plans

New York, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—The American Olympic Committee meets here Saturday and among the matters to be considered are the reports of the Olympic speed skating, figure skating, ice hockey, bobsleigh and ski committees on plans for tryouts to select America's representatives in the 1936 Olympic winter sports at Garmisch-Partenkirschen, Germany.

Consideration also will be given the invitation received from the German Olympic Committee to send a baseball team for a match game with Japan in a demonstration event. It is expected that some action will be taken on basket ball, which is on the Olympic program for the first time as a regular event. It was played at the 1924 games in Paris as a sort of semi-official demonstration.

Austin Foregoes Tourney.

Paris, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Bunny Austin, No. 2 in British rankings and favorite in the annual Christmas indoor tennis championships here, was forced to withdraw from the tournament today because of stomach trouble.

Alabama Reaches Rose Bowl Scene as Coast Fans Cheer

The Alabama football team detrains at Pasadena, Calif., amid a noisy welcome after the cross-country trip for the Rose Bowl game against Stanford on New Year Day. The young men in the picture are faced with the task of maintaining Alabama's coast record, which is as yet unmarked by defeat in four games on the Pacific Slope.

16 Coaches Out Of 27 Favor Alabama

Six Pick Stanford Eleven in Bowl Contest; Five Straddle Issue.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—A substantial majority of college football coaches favors Alabama to beat Stanford in the forthcoming Rose Bowl intersectional battle at Pasadena. Polled today by the Associated Press, 16 out of 27 coaches selected Alabama to win, while 6 picked Stanford and 5 straddled the issue.

Here's the symposium of their views:

Dana X. Bible, Nebraska—It's a toss-up. Stanford will be in better mental condition for this game than it was last New Year's.

W. H. Cowell, New Hampshire—Alabama, unaffected by climatic conditions, should win by a touchdown.

Gilmoure Dobie, Cornell—It's too close to decide.

Earl Blaik, Dartmouth—It looks close, but I look for Stanford to come strong in the second half.

Crisler Picks Stanford.

Fritz Crisler, Princeton—Stanford should win because this is a "redemption" game for the Indians.

Earl Martineau, Princeton—Stanford to win, on power.

Harry Ellinger, Dartmouth—Alabama to win.

D. O. (Tuss) McLaughry, Brown—Alabama has an edge.

Andy Gustafson, Dartmouth—Stanford is my choice.

Elmer Layden, Notre Dame—Alabama should win, though Stanford will be better than last season.

Dr. Marvin (Mal) Stevens, New York U.—Stanford to win.

Burt Ingwersen, Louisiana State—Alabama, with a great line and better reserves, gets my vote.

Hugo Bezdek, Penn State—Alabama's the choice.

Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova—I like Alabama, a better rounded team.

Anderson Likes 'Bama.

Hunk Anderson, North Carolina State—Alabama has a great club and should win.

Harvey Harman, Pennsylvania—It's a toss-up, unless Alabama proves to have a marked edge in condition.

Lieut. Thomas Hamilton, Navy—

East and West Stars Given Luncheon

Are Guests of Honor at Shrine Fete; Stage Drills Later.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27 (AP).—Football stars who will bang each other around in the annual East-West charity game joined forces in friendly fashion today.

The players were guests of honor at a luncheon given by the Shriners, which sponsors the New Year's game as a benefit for the Crippled Children's Hospital.

For two hours the players scrimmaged with the cook's offerings, many rivals meeting for the first time. All were introduced to a large gathering, Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley doing the honors for their Eastern delegation. Percy Locey and Orin Hollingbery presented their Western boys.

Puts On One-Man Show.

Les Borden, of Everett, Mass., who will represent Fordham as an end on the East eleven, put on a one-man show by singing two Irish lullabies.

The Eastern team then went through a brisk workout at the University of California field in Berkeley. The squad received a hard blow in the loss of Duane Purvis, Purdue half back, who was operated upon for a knee injury suffered two days ago. Bill Shepherd, of Western Maryland, and Ed Brominski, of Columbia, are being groomed to fill Purvis' shoes.

The Western team ran through a full complement of formations and tossed a slick ball around with accuracy. More than 35,000 fans are expected to witness the game.

Max Baer Signed For Bout in Miami

Miami, Fla., Dec. 27 (U.P.).—An all-star boxing card, including the heavyweight champion, Max Baer, has been tentatively scheduled here for January 24, Mike Jacobs, New York promoter, and J. H. Peeples, Miami matchmaker, announced last night.

They said Baer has been signed for a four-round bout with an opponent to be selected later. The champion will train here for several days before the match.

Barney Ross, of Chicago, is slated to defend his junior welterweight title in a 10-round battle with Frankie Klick, California. Ross and Klick fought to a draw last year.

Efforts are being made to get Joe Knight, Miami light-heavyweight aspirant, a return match with Maxie Rosenbloom.

C. U. Trackmen List 3 Indoor Events

Meet With West Virginia Will Open Schedule on February 16.

A NEAT little folder, trimmed in maroon and black, arrived on the sports editor's desk yesterday, listing Catholic University's sports program for this winter. The folder also tactfully advertises the fact that for $5.50 one can see 10 basket ball games, 7 boxing matches and 3 track meets.

The indoor track schedule, announced for the first time, will see the Cardinal thinclads in three important meets. They open on February 16 in the West Virginia meet. On March 10 they will compete in the Southern Conference meet, and on March 17 they are to run in the Brooklyn K. of C. games at New York.

Won Meet Honors.

Catholic U. won the nonconference honors in the Southern meet last winter, and Coach Dorsey Griffith hopes to make it two in a row.

On the cinderpath the Brooklanders will match strides with a half dozen opponents and run in the Penn Relays and local A. A. U. championships. The complete schedule is: April 12, Hampden-Sydney, away; 13, Wake Forest, away; 26, Penn Relays. May 4, Johns Hopkins, away; 11, Delaware; 18, Randolph-Macon (pending); 25, Gallaudet; June 2, D. C. A. A. U. games.

Boxing Schedule.

The boxing schedule, announced previously, includes matches with Bucknell, V. P. I., Temple, Duke, V. M. I., Western Maryland, Manhattan, Duquesne and Maryland. All, with the exception of Maryland, will display their wares in the spacious Brookland gym on Saturday nights.

Completely overlooked from a publicity angle is the fencing squad, which has two matches definitely scheduled and more pending. The Card swordsmen, who'll use only foils this season, will duel Johns Hopkins on January 9, and Baltimore Y. M. C. A. on February 26.

William and Mary and Virginia Military Institute may be added to the lists before the season gets under way.

Hunt Is Victor Over Senter In 2 Sets

Triumphs, 6-2, 7-5, After Rally; All Favorites Win Matches.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—All favorites came through successfully today as fourth-round brackets were filled in the National Indoor Junior and Boys Tennis championships.

Robert A. Low, of the Choate School, defending boys champion, and Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., of Washington, D. C., top-seeded junior star, led the advance of the favorites. Low crushed Christian Gide, of New York, 6—0, 6—2, and Hunt disposed of Jonas Senter, of Long Island University, 6—2, 7—5.

Hunt had a bit of difficulty keeping pace with the favorites. He ran into a Tartar in Senter, who had him 5—2 in the second set before the Capital City boy could rally and take the match by winning five games in a row.

An impressive exhibition was

American Auto Racer Wins in South Africa

East London, South Africa, Dec. 27 (AP).—Whitney Straight, young American auto racer, today drove his Maserati to victory in the first South African Grand Priz road race, averaging 95.43 miles per hour for the 90-mile course.

His brother, Michael, driving a Railton Terraplane, finished third.

Straight, a millionaire sportsman, has done most of his racing abroad in road events.

Nine Changes Are Aim of Minority

Game Will Be Better Off if Not Tampered With, Majority Feels.

Little Demand Evinced for Further Opening Up of Sport.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—Although 80 per cent of the football coaches voting on the subject have gone on record as flatly opposed to any radical changes in the college gridiron code for 1935, it developed tonight that a list of nine proposed alterations has been drawn up for the consideration of the national football rules committee.

This list, which will be put before the annual business meeting of the American Football Coaches Association tomorrow, includes proposals to put the goal posts back on the goal line, permit forward passing from any point behind the scrimmage line, and allow the defensive team to advance with a recovered fumble.

It was made clear, however, that a substantial majority of the coaches do not favor these or other drastic changes, the general feeling among the college coaches being that the game will be better off by keeping the present regulations intact.

Majority Satisfied.

Of 101 replies received to a questionnaire on rules, 58 expressed complete satisfaction with the 1934 codes, 23 suggested a few minor changes and 20 voiced dissatisfaction or urged drastic changes.

Through a standing rules committee, of which Lou Little, of Columbia, is chairman, the coaches' Association will convey the minority recommendations to the national rules committee, meeting here in February or March. The complete list of nine proposed changes follows:

1. Return goal post to goal line.
2. Allow incoming substitutes to communicate.
3. Clarify rule on definition of when "forward progress" of player in possession of ball is stopped.
4. Permit forward passing anywhere behind scrimmage line.
5. Compel umpire to notify coach when legal "time-outs" expire.
6. Allow defensive team to advance recovered fumble.
7. Allow any forward pass into end zone (except on fourth down) to be ruled as incompleted pass.
8. Apply penalty for second forward pass, during same play, to be inflicted from spot of foul and not at spot of preceding down.
9. Apply penalty for attempted lateral pass that results in forward pass from spot of foul, instead of spot of preceding down.

The association, as a whole, is expected to indorse recommenda-

Coast Pros Face Giants.

San Francisco, Dec. 27 (AP).—A team of outstanding Pacific Coast football players, selected and coached by Ernie Nevers, assistant coach at Stanford, will oppose the New York Giants, National Professional League champions, in the annual Knights of Columbus charity game here January 20.

Notre Dame Head Sees Football 'Safe'

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Football's place in American colleges "is probably secure," President John F. O'Hara, of Notre Dame University, said today, so long as "the public interest in football can be made to pay dividends that will supply loss of waning interest from endowment funds."

The Notre Dame president was addressing the Sportsmanship Brotherhood luncheon at Town Hall Club. He appealed for "sportsmanship in education," asserting schools were losing sight of "a well-rounded program of development" for the child.

At Notre Dame, he said, "we have almost as many candidates for the debating team as we have for football," adding: "but, for some reason or other, the public would rather watch 22 men play football than listen to 6 men debate."

Savage Sees Trend to Old Evils

Carnegie Report Author Views Improvement as Temporary.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—Sportsmanship, and in some instances the lack of it, in college athletics, elementary and higher education and in international relations was given a thorough going over today at the annual luncheon meeting of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood.

Howard J. Savage, author of the Carnegie Foundation's famous report of 1929 assailing the evils in college athletics, warned that the trend was again in the direction of shady practices after a temporary improvement following his expose of recruiting and subsidization.

Depression Is Blamed.

"A year and a half following April, 1929," said Savage, "there was certainly a distinct improvement in some of the darker phases of American college sport. Then there came a change. With 1932, indications grew fairly definite that in some parts of the country a retrograde movement was under way. The depression had begun to lay hold upon the colleges."

Some institutions that once appeared to be making progress toward clean sport have wavered, he declared; others that once had good records have forfeited them, and still others have continued and even intensified their shady practices. However, there are some institutions left, Savage said, which "exemplify the American concep-

Conference Sidesteps Question

Commits Self Only as Against "Illegitimate Subsidization.'

Payment of Athlete for Gridiron Work Draws Indirect Answers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—Spirits were willing but tongues were weak today as 250 college leaders attacked the problem of subsidizing schoolboy athletes at the round table sessions of the National Collegiate Athletic Association—and succeeded only in getting a new idea of Cornell's now famous stand on the subject.

Packing the conference rooms at the Hotel Pennsylvania the deans, athletic directors and football coaches of probably 100 colleges and universities gingerly tossed the subject around and committed themselves only with a unanimous show of hands in opposition to "illegitimate subsidization."

Even that expression was reluctantly forced from the gathering by Z. G. Clevenger, director of athletics at Indiana, after Dr. Edwin Fauver, of Rochester; Fielding Yost, of Michigan; Bernard Oakes, of Montana; Dr. H. H. King, of Kansas State; S. L. MacDonald, of Colorado State, and Dean H. L. Sackett, of Penn State, all had pressed either for definitions of proselyting, subsidizing and recruiting, or had pleaded for clarification of the subject.

Answers Are Few.

MacDonald asked in vain for an expression of opinion on the ethics of football coaches making "good-will" tours and speeches, and at the same time interviewing high school athletes. Dr. Harmon, of Boston University, alone would answer his own question, "Do you feel that an institution owes a student something for the time he spends practicing on a football field?" His answer was "no."

Clevenger was forced to draft speakers to reply to his own questions—whether it was right for a school to pay its football players; whether it was right to pay them for work before they did it; whether athletes should be paid a higher scale than other students doing the same kind of work. None would give a direct answer.

The closest anyone came to defending subsidization was Oakes, who explained carefully that he was not in favor of athletic scholarships, but did believe that as long as schools had athletics and no athletic scholarships, the evils of subsidization would continue.

He insisted, that wealthy alumni will always adopt financially

Gen. Phelan Is Not Dumbest, Baer-Levinsky 'Clarifier' Is!

By Jack Miley
(Pinch Hitting for Paul Gallico).

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—Today we wish to apologize to Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission. The good general, we imagine, will be both surprised and puzzled. He doubtless will suspect that there is a brickbat hidden in our olive branch, and so we hasten to assure him that his fears are needless—for we wear no false mustaches to deceive him and we have nothing up our sleeves.

For a long while we've regarded Gen. Phelan as about the dumbest geezer in sports hereabouts, and we've had no hesitancy in putting the blast on him for his daffy decisions and ridiculous rulings in connection with his bureau's supervision of boxing and wrestling.

Title Wrestling Bout.

There was that time last summer, for instance, when the guileless general, against the counsel of his capable colleague, Blunt Bill Brown, insisted upon designating a Londos-Browning wrestling exhibition as an actual contest for the world's heavyweight championship. Now, everybody but Phelan knew that Londos was to win. And when he had witnessed this hippodrome the disillusioned politico-militarist, on the

65-YEAR-OLD FORMULA
Made by the same formula as famous Old Forester Whisky—for years the standard of excellence in Kentucky whiskies.

EXPENSIVE SMALL GRAINS
The formula calls for a high percentage of small grains. More expensive to make but adding to body, flavor and smoothness.

Mellowness in "BOTTOMS UP" is not merely a word—it's a tangible, tasteable difference. Esters give all whisky its finer qualities. And in "BOTTOMS UP" painstaking care insures the greatest possible development of those esters. "BOTTOMS UP" is aged a minimum of ten months. After aging, it must measure up to definite standards of mellowness. If it doesn't then it stays right there in those deep-charred white oak aging casks until it does. In every case the prescribed standard of mellowness is reached before bottling, insuring uniformly high quality. Here's whisky you can depend on

Peace Treaty Victorious by a Head at Tropical Park, Pays $185.30 Mutuel

Filly Closes With Rush To Score

Bubblesome Near Track Record in Capturing Featured Event.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 27 (AP).—A $2 straight ticket was worth $185.30 to anyone who could find a reason for backing Peace Treaty in the opening event here today.

The 3-year-old filly, owned by Mrs. R. Arbique and ridden by Nick Wall, got up in a blanket finish to win by a head from Step Away, another rank outsider.

Hasty Belle, favorite, at 85 cents on the dollar, was nosed out of the place.

Peace Treaty, which had a string of poor efforts behind her, kept within striking distance of the leaders and closed wth a rush on the outside to win in the last jump.

Jockey George Seabo was suspended ten days for rough riding astride Tenless. The latter interfered with the winner and True Romance, which broke down badly.

Bubblesome Is Victor.

In the fastest run mile and a sixteenth of the meeting, Jake Lowenstein's Bubblesome and E. F. Seagram's Stand Pat came down to the judges a nose apart as named in the Stuart purse, featured event on the program. Stand Pat was a long shot, while Bubbblesome was a 2-to-1 choice, and the pair ran like a team from the far turn home, with the victor finishing the journey in 1:43 4-5, four-fifths of a second slower than Sabula's track mark.

The Peconic Stable's General Parth, picking up 10 pounds over his Royal Palm Handicap victory, finished third, two lengths back.

Royal Duchess Wins.

About the hottest tip of the meeting came up and went the way of most tips in the second event. Lady Wisdom, which had brilliant speed in her workouts, broke last and burned up gobs of money by finishing far back. Royal Duchess led all the way and had a length to spare over Pass Up, which forced the pace throughout. First Note was a poor third. The winner paid $22.10.

Flowery Lady staged a powerful stretch rush to beat out Dark War by a head in the third event. Full Up, a field horse, was three lengths behind in the third hole. Dark War looked a winner while setting the pace and entering the stretch daylight clear of Flowery Lady, but the latter responded gamely to Bobby Watson's call and made the grade in the final strides, returning $6.30.

Golden Vein Pays $11.

Golden Vein ran 5½ furlongs in 1:04 2-5, the fastest of the meeting and within two-fifths of a second of Mr. Sponge's track record, to win the fourth race by two lengths from Can't Remember. The elderly Dr. Freeland was headed out of second money. No Saint again failed after being the recipient of a heavy play. Golden Vein ran Vanished into early submission and drew clear to score with ease. The colt paid $11.

Wayne Wright rode his ninth winner of the meeting in the sixth contest. The Idaho boy lifted Taunton home by a head, returning $11. Major General was second, a length and a half before Sky Lad.

Ukraine, $11.40, was an easy winner of the nightcap. Second Money was second, two lengths back and three lengths before Transbird.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Tropical Park Race Track, Dec. 27.

Clocker Mike was not long in finding out that Trainer Joe was broke. This morning Joe touched Mike for 89 cents and the pair of them went around to the Chinese laundry to get Joe's wash out of hock. As they were waiting for Willie Lee to locate the bundle, Joe sniffs and says, "I smell punk." Mike came back with, "I know it. Just keep quiet and maybe the Chinaman won't notice it." The old mutuel-wrecking firm of Bennings, Inc., came through again today. We had three winners right in a row—Golden Vein, $11; Bubblesome, $6, and Taunton, $11. I was talking to Nick Huff, who used to ride for E. B. McLean's stable. He's a half-ton overweight now and makes the engagements for Jockey W. D. Wright, the best boy on the lot. Huff says Wright has been offered the mount on Gay World in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. But due to the long trip to the Coast, Wright is going to refuse. Jockey Alfred Robertson and Mrs. Robertson left for the Coast today from here. Robertson will ride High Glee in the big race. See you tomorrow. BILL.

First race—Little Argo isn't much of a horse or he would have graduated from the maiden ranks months ago. However, he meets his kind here and with Wright to do the riding I'm expecting him to gain his first set of brackets. Runs coupled with Hyras. Fan and Coil, close several times, to take the place and show.

Second race—Black Song is a fair sort and gets a 10-pound shift in the weights that may serve to hold Baker's Dozen safe in the stretch drive. Screen will draw backing and deserves attention.

Third race—Highest Point lacks some of the class of his opponents in this sprint but he is as sharp as a tack. Won recently in brilliant fashion and I'm pulling for him to score an upset here. Douglas F. and Merovech are on edge and should share in the purse distribution.

Fourth race—Fred Almy is a hot-and-cold horse and I have reason to believe he will be sizzling tomorrow. Is given 6 pounds by Feudal Lord, the class of the race, and Sammy Renick will do the riding. Wright will pilot Volta Maid and this one will be ready if the other pair falters.

Fifth race—Brindle showed closing ability throughout the Maryland season in his sprint appearance. Asked to go a mile tomorrow, I expect big things of him. May be handicapped by the large field, but I'm taking a chance. Little Cynic, Unknown Soldier and The Angel are a close fit for the other money places.

Sixth race—Just American and Sturdy Ark should fight it out for the chief award here. Both are fit and ready for a hard race. I expect them to finish in the order named. Cabochon was short the other day.

Seventh race—Sleepy Joe appears to have the edge on this group of distance platers. Trainer Joe says this one was not named for him. However, the horse is at tops. Barkentine and Representative for the other awards.

PEACE TREATY was bothered some just after the start, overcame the interference, circled the field and closed with a rush and won driving away. STEP AWAY displayed keen speed all the way and held on gamely. HASTY BELLE was slow to get into motion and finished very fast. RUSTIC CUBA, on the outside, ran a good race.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start poor. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:41. Winner, Miss M. E. Henderson's ch. f. (2), by Royal Minstrel—Grey Duchess. Trained by C. M. Henderson. Value to winner, $375; second, $75; third, $40; fourth, $10. Time, 1:04 4-5.

ROYAL DUCHESS away on her toes, rushed into lead, raced PASS UP into defeat and drew off at end. PASS UP was a stout factor from the start and was next. FIRST NOTE, away well in motion, moved up on the outside and finished very fast. QUEEN HELEN ran good race. LADY WISDOM broke last, moved up with a rush around turn, dropped back again, but came with a rush in the stretch.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming price $1,250. For 3-year-old fillies and mares. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:17. Winner, J. K. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLOWERY LADY, $6.30, $3.50, $3.80; DARK WAR, $7.90, $3.50; FULL UP, $4.80.

FLOWERY LADY worked her way up, came to inside around turn and then came around the field entering stretch and won in final stride. DARK WAR had plenty of speed and held on well. FULL UP broke fast and was kept close to the pace all the way. FAR VALUE followed the pace closely for five and a half furlongs, then tired as if short. The race should do her a world of good.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming prices $3,250 to $2,750. The Alachua. For all ages. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:47. Winner, F. GOLDEN VEIN got away fast, was rated off the early pace, moved into lead at turn out of the back stretch, saved ground and won easily. CAN'T REMEMBER handled his weight well and stood long drive gamely. DR. FREELAND, unable to keep up in early part, finished with a rush. GOLDEN FATE failed to show any speed. NO SAINT tired badly at end.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and one-sixteenth. Purse, $800. The Stuart. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:15. Winner, J. Lowenstein's ch. g. BUBBLESOME, under a good ride, followed the pace to the far turn, where he moved up and, racing along with STAND PAT to the finish, outgamed the colt. STAND PAT ran into a long lead going into the first turn, displayed good speed and held on gamely. GENERAL PARTH came from far back in the stretch and was a fast-going third. EASY SAILING, well up for seven furlongs, tired. CHRYSMUTE and STAR FIRE were both outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming price $2,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:41½. Winner, A. G. SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a furlong. Purse, $500; claiming price $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:11½. Off at 5:13. Winner, Mrs. F. Fair Grounds Feature Won By Kuvera

Pelleteri Entry Gets Home in Final Strides to Defeat Fitkin.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 27 (AP).—Kuvera, owned and trained by A. Pelleteri, got up in the final strides today to score in the featured fifth race at the Fair Grounds.

A. G. Tarn's consistent gelding, Fitkin, was beaten a head for the winner's award. B. F. Clark's Mature closed with a rush to annex the show honors.

The 5-year-old son of For Fair—Miss Cynthia led the field of five starters at the quarter-mile mark, but dropped back when interfered with. Grattan took the lead at the half-mile post, relinquishing it to Fitkin in the stretch. After getting settled in his stride, Jockey Haber brought Kuvera to the outside and fought it out with Fitkin to the end. Mature, slow to get going, closed with tremendous speed.

The winner paid $4.40 for a two-dollar ticket and the time for the 6 furlongs was 1:14 3-5.

Mrs. Martinez Ranked No. One in D. C. Women's Tennis for Fourth Straight Year

Group Rates Mary Ryan Second

Rises From 9th Position in 1933; Miss Tabler Ranked Third.

FOR the fourth successive year, Mrs. Ruth Martinez, black-haired Spanish teacher at Roosevelt High School, has been named the No. 1 ranking woman's tennis player of the District. Announcement of the 1934 rankings was made last night following the annual meeting of the selection committee of the Women's District Tennis League.

The only player with a record impressive enough to threaten Mrs. Martinez' title was Mary Ryan, the free-swinging young lady, who elevated herself from ranking No. 9 to No. 2 during the past season.

Clara Tabler, No. 4 ranking player last year, advanced a notch to No. 3, largely by virtue of winning the City of Washington championship, while Sara Moore, who eliminated Mrs. Martinez in a third-round match in the District championships, came out of an unranked status to win the No. 4 position.

Mrs. Miller No. Five.

Mrs. Dorette Miller, the veteran of the ranked list, fell from the No. 3 position to No. 5, while Mary Cootes, former Smith College champion, and an Alexandria girl, was ranked No. 6. Miss Cootes was unranked last year.

Miss Moore and Mrs. Miller easily were accorded the top-ranking doubles position with Mrs. Martinez and Bobsey Turney, ranked No. 2.

The announcement of the committee, composed of Mrs. H. C. Thompson, vice-president of the league, Mrs. Frances Walker Bassett, president; Miss Betty Whitfield, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Miller, tournament chairman, came as a distinct surprise in view of the fact that 17 players were ranked last year.

Hunt Is Victor In Junior Tennis

that of Donald Leavens, Northwestern University freshman, who is seeded fifth among the juniors. He accounted for his second 6—0, 6—0 victory when he crushed Lyman Crossman, of White Plains, in less than half an hour.

Another Northwestern victor was Russell Ball, seeded second among the juniors. He took on William V. Winslow, jr., of the Lawrenceville School and handed him a 6—1, 6—4 shellacking.

Jackie Behr, No. 2 junior, of the Scarborough School, won with his customary ease when he disposed of Melvin Lapman, last year's boys finalist, at 6—3, 6—4.

Several interesting matches are listed tomorrow. Hunt meets a strong foe in Wilson Rood, of Poly Prep; Joey Abrams, N. Y. U. freshman, is expected to put Ball to a stiff test, and Paul Spenrath, of Fordham Prep, should provide Low with a good workout in the boys division.

Play in the doubles got under way today, with Hunt and his partner, Charles Mattman, of New York, advancing by default.

Harrisonburg Five Expects Good Year

Squad of 20 Men Seeking Positions on Team.

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 27 (Spl.).—Harrisonburg High, district 4 champion for the last two years, expects another strong basket ball team, although two regulars are missing from last season's quintet.

Higgins, Helbert and Trumbo are available from last year and Webster is a promising addition. Coach Claude Warren will choose the fifth man from a squad of 20 hopefuls. The Blue Streaks suffered hard luck when Pete Showalter, stellar center, suffered a leg infection last summer and will be unable to play. LaMar Shomo, a forward, is attending V. M. I.

The schedule:

January 8, Shenandoah, there; 11, Covington; 15, Charlottesville; 18, Staunton; 25, Bridgewater, there. (two open dates on 4 and 22).

February 5, Shenandoah; 6, V. M. I. Freshmen; 8, Covington, there; 9, Clifton Forge, there; 15, Waynesboro; 19, Bridgewater; 20, V. M. I. Freshmen, there; 26, Charlottesville, there; (open dates on 1 and 12).

Stanford, at Pasadena, Has All Players Ready

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 27 (AP).—Another football team prepared to paint the Rose Bowl red on New Year's Day reached Pasadena today when Stanford joined Alabama.

Coach Claude (Tiny) Thornhill led 17 of his husky Indians from Palo Alto to town, the rest of the squad having come ahead for the Christmas holidays.

There was a reunion of the Cardinals this afternoon at Brookside Park when the first practice in southern California was launched.

Stanford Players Ready.

Coach Thornhill reported all his players ready to start. Bobby Grayson and Monk Moscrip, injured stars, were prepared to go into the backfield and at end, and game time will find the Westerners in much better condition than was thought possible three weeks ago.

As the Stanford lads practiced at Brookside, Alabama went through a drill at Occidental College. The Tuscaloosa contingent got the feel of the Rose Bowl and then retired to permit the groundkeepers to repair the ravages of cleated feet and manicure the turf for the annual classic next Tuesday.

Stanford will work briefly at the Rose Bowl later but the scene of the big field is familiar to most of the Indians. Practically the entire 1934-35 team played against Columbia in the Rose Bowl last New Year's Day.

Supporters of both the Crimson and the Cardinal were arriving today from afar and the week-end will find thousands of visitors on hand for the big game.

Los Angeles friends today received word from Ty Cobb that he would be a spectator. Tyrus Raymond will find himself in a difficult situation sentimentally. He is a native of Georgia, next door neighbor to Alabama, and now lives at Atherton, not far from Stanford.

2 Shifts Made In Maryland Line-up

IN AN effort to add to his team's offensive power, Coach Burt Shipley yesterday sent Bernie Buscher back to his old post at guard on the University of Maryland quintet, and assigned Bill Andorka to Buscher's vacated berth at forward.

This will be the only shift in the line-up when the Terps stack up against Ohio State tomorrow night in Ritchie Coliseum. Vic Willis will start at center and Al Waters, forward, and Coleman Headley, guard, will round out the team.

It will be Headley's last game of a brief career. Monday he intends to start training for participation in the Millrose Games. His place on the squad will be assumed by Bill Guckeyson, grid star, who reported for practice this week.

Guckeyson May Play.

Guckeyson probably will see action against the Buckeyes, as Shipley can utilize his height and scoring eye to good advantage. He has not played varsity ball before.

State's starting line probably will find Bruce Laybourne and Johnny Wilson, forwards; Sam Busich, center; Bill Beitner and Inwood Smith, guards. Wilson is a senior, Smith a sophomore, and the others juniors. This team has three consecutive victories to its credit.

Ohio's coach, Harold Olsen, is beginning his thirteenth season with the Buckeyes and his seventeenth of coaching. Since going to State Olsen has lifted the school from the position of a stepchild to one of the strongest aggregations in the Big Ten.

Seventh Last Year.

Under him Ohio State copped the conference championship in 1925 and after being in the top flight for several years tied for that honor in 1932. Handicapped by the lack of material last season, Olsen could do no better than direct his team to seventh.

The Buckeye coach also is responsible for the existing 10-second rule, which eliminates stalling or "freezing" the ball in close games. He argued in favor of the rule for two years before succeeding.

tion of what straight shooting means."

Sir Gerald Campbell, British consul general, apologized for his topic —"sportsmanship in international problems"—and explained "there is no sportsmanship worth talking about in international problems for the simple reason that, while sportsmanship implies a keenness to win, and a potential aptitude therefore, it essentially embraces the capacity to lose gracefully, and there are mighty few nations which can do that."

While nations find some solace and satisfaction in getting out of tangles if their faces are shaved, "they resent the imputation that some other part of their anatomy has been kicked," Campbell said.

Fletcher Silent On Eligibility Of West

Southern Conference Head to Act Only 'if Member Requests Ruling.

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 28 (Spl.).—In the absence of a formal protest, Forest Fletcher, president of the Southern Conference, today declined to rule on the eligibility of Jimmy West, University of Richmond star who participated in a professional football game last Sunday.

Richmond, Fletcher pointed out, is not a member of the conference and until a member college questions West's eligibility, no action can be taken, he said. It had been reported that Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite, of Richmond, had asked for a ruling on West's case.

Richmond, however, has made application for admission to the conference and if accepted, West's eligibility would be considered. In that event, however, said President Fletcher, the ruling doubtless would not be made by himself but by the conference's executive committee.

As the facts were reported to him, Fletcher said, he would have no alternative but to bar West from further varsity competition. The executive committee, though, may be inclined to consider any "extenuating circumstances" of the case, he added.

West was the star of the game in which the Richmond Collegians defeated the Federals, Washington professionals, at Richmond. He was recognized despite generous strips of tape which covered his features.

Commenting on reports that stars of other conference schools also participated in the game with West, President Fletcher declared that as yet he had received no protests. Should violations of the conference rule be brought to his attention, he said, action will be taken when member colleges submit their eligibility lists.

16 of 27 Coaches Select Alabama

No choice between two strong teams.

Eddie Casey, former Harvard coach—Alabama for me, especially if Grayson is not in shape.

Fielding H. Yost, Michigan—Alabama may have a little edge, because of better condition, but it's likely to be a great battle.

Dan McGugin, Vanderbilt—Alabama has its best team and should win, if it plays up to season's form. It has everything.

Schmidt Says Tide.

Francis Schmidt, Ohio State—Alabama, by a shade.

Charles Bachman, Michigan State—I like Alabama.

Lou Little, Columbia—It looks even, if Stanford's star men are in shape; otherwise Alabama deserves to be a favorite.

Bernie Moore, Louisiana State—Alabama is my pick.

Thomas McCabe, Holy Cross athletic director—Alabama, easily.

Howard Harpster, Carnegie—I favor Alabama because Stanford hasn't shown it has a real passing attack this year.

Benny Friedman, C. C. N. Y.—Too much ballyhoo for Alabama; I like Stanford.

Former Grid Star Dies.

Bottineau, NDak., Dec. 27 (AP).—I. P. Ertresvaag, 39, selected as an All-America guard in 1916 when he was a member of the University of Pennsylvania football team, died yesterday of pneumonia.

Baseball Injuries Lead List In Army Sports, Report Shows

BASEBALL, supposedly the least rugged and necessitating the least body contact of any major sport, proved more dangerous to life and limb than any other form of athletics in the United States Army during 1934, it was revealed yesterday by no less an authority than the annual report of the surgeon general.

Army hospitals received more cases of baseball injuries among officers and enlisted men than was provided by either football, boxing or wrestling despite the more strenuous nature of the latter sports.

Athletics of all forms accounted for 23.6 out of every 1,000 admissions to Army hospitals and proved the greatest single item among Army injuries of all forms last year. Compared to the 3,876 injuries from sports competition, only 157 casualties were recorded in airplane accidents among the Army forces.

Of every 1,000 Army hospital cases during the year, 7.8 were attributable to baseball injuries which topped football in the list. The football injury rato was 6.1, with boxing 2.9, and wrestling only .9.

Attesting to the fact that baseball has become increasingly popular in the Panama Canal Zone, that sector has led all Army posts in the number of injuries suffered on the diamond. Of every 1,000 injuries noted among Canal Zone troops, 14.3 were due to baseball. Hawaii's ratio of baseball injures was second, 14.3.

Athletic injuries among United States troops on foreign soil topped the injuries noted among American troops at home in every sport.

Wrestling proved the least dangerous of Army sports, the mat game accounting for less than one injury out of every 1,000 cases received by Army hospitals. Boxing's share of each 1,000 cases was 2.9.

Hubbell Leads Hurlers in National Giants' Ace Allows Foes 2.30 Earned Runs Per Contest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 (AP).—Although Dizzy Dean's feat of pitching the Cardinals into the National League pennant and the world championship almost single-handed made him the baseball man of 1934, Carl Owen Hubbell, the great southpaw of the New York Giants, again was ranked No. 1 when the circuit's official pitching records were made public today.

Hubbell didn't approach Dizzy's record of 30 victories nor his total of 195 strikeouts, but the averages of earned runs per nine-inning games were 2.30 for Carl and 2.65 for Dean, who was second. Curt Davis, the Phillies' brilliant freshman righthander, was the only other one of the first section of hurlers who allowed fewer than three earned runs per game. His average was 2.96.

Waite Hoyt, whose comeback with the Pirates was one of the season's sensations, made a 2.92 mark, but he hurled fewer than ten complete games and wasn't classified with the main group. Hubbell's average was far behind his 1933 figure of 1.66, which was the best in many years, but it was about even with the other league-leading marks of the past few seasons.

The year also saw a no-hit, no-run game, the first since Hubbell's in 1929. As might be expected, it was one of the Deans, Paul (the not so daffy one), who did it, setting the Dodgers down hitless and runless on September 21.

The rival flingers were called upon to do about the same amount of work during the season, Hubbell pitching 313 innings in 49 games, and Dean 312 frames in 50 times out, but outside the won and lost column, in which the rest of the team cuts a big figure along with the hurler, the Giant ace had a trifle the better of the going.

Hubbell led the league in complete games with 25, to Dean's 24. He gave fewer hits, fewer runs, both earned and unearned, came within shooting distance of Dean's league-leading shutout and strikeout marks and showed the best control of any of the first-group flingers. Hubbell faced 1,255 batsmen and walked only 37 of them, hit two with pitched balls and was charged with two wild pitches. The next best figure for any pitcher who hurled more than 250 innings was 51 walks off Fred Fitzsimmons, of the Giants.

Although the great Dizzy had to take second place in some respects, there were plenty of laurels left for him. His 195 whiffings gave him the lead for the third copsecutive year and he pitched seven shutout games. Hubbell and Paul Dean each recorded five blankings to tie for second place, while Hubbell fanned 118 rivals.

Davis, Mungo Busiest.

Davis and Van Lingle Mungo, of Brooklyn, were the year's busiest pitchers. Davis appeared in 51 games and Mungo pitched 315 innings, faced 1,329 batsmen, allowed 300 hits and issued 104 walks for four high marks. Silas Johnson, of Cincinnati, was the chief "goat." He was beaten the oftenest, 22 times, allowed 150 runs, of which 125 were earned, but oddly enough he came up with a 5.21 earned run average, which might have been a lot worse. The high mark was 9.29 by Reg Grabowski, of the Phillies.

Dumbness Finds A New Candidate

verge of tears, shook his thinning gray locks and murmured sadly, "It didn't look right, and I'm beginning to lose my faith in the sport!"

We could recount similar inanities until this space were filled, but we must not digress.

There is a gentleman out in Chicago, one Joe Triner, who can give Phelan cards and spades in the daffiness derby. His position in Illinois corresponds with the general's in New York. Triner is chairman of the Illinois Boxing Commission and in one brief broadcast he outfoolished Phelan for all time.

Baer-Levinsky Status.

Mons. Triner was asked to clarify the muddled status of a four-round pillow fight that Max Baer and Kingfish Levinsky will enact before Chicago's citizenry tomorrow night. Is it to be a no-decision exhibition or a genuine contest? If the Kingfish could tag the champ, what would that make him? Could Magnificent Max blow his title? The jittery Joseph pondered briefly before he came up with this gem of bungled thinking:

"If Levinsky scores a knockout he will become the 'unofficial' heavyweight champion. Baer would then be required to meet him in a 15-round fight to decide who is the champion. The Baer-Levinsky bout is not an exhibition, but a contest; only Baer can't lose his title. Of course, if Levinsky beat Baer, no one would call Max the champion after such a defeat."

Will Be and Won't Be.

In other words, if Levinsky, who once whipped Jack Dempsey in a similar exhibition, hands the paunchy and wheezing Baer a shellacking he'll be heavyweight champion, yet he won't be the official champion. And from now on, apparently, Illinois may recognize two sets of titlists—the official and the unofficial ones. All of which is pretty confusing to everybody except Mons. Triner.

And so this chilly morning we give Gen. Phelan our most profound and heartfelt apologies. He no longer is the dumbest guy in sports administration. Joe Triner has topped him and we doubt that John J. will ever catch up.

Through Edgren's Eyes

REMEMBER - WHEN FIGHTERS WERE TOUGH?
"MATTY" MATTHEWS, old time welter champion, had his eyes closed by Jack Bennett's jabs.
"Make a cut under my eye to let down the swelling," Matty told his second. The fellow made a small cut.
Matty batted the knife blade with his hand - making the cut a gash -
His eye opened - He K.O.'ed Bennett.
Didn't the knife endanger his eye?
"Oh, no," he explained. "I thought the bone would stop it!"

Leaders Stumped By Subsidization

worthy boys who are athletes, to the mutual advantage of both the school and the boy. He suggested that bringing the matter into the open, through athletic scholarships, was the healthiest method of dealing with the problem, more honest of the schools and fairer to the boy since it did not start his college education in deceit.

In closing the discussion, Maj. John L. Griffiths, president of the N. C. A. A., asked that the delegates not be discouraged by the obvious willingness of all to listen but few to speak.

"Defining subsidizing is like trying to define sin," he said. "In discussions like this we feel like the head of a family who knows his children are all right, but isn't so sure about the neighbors. * * * Presidents and faculties are honest men and want to do what they feel is right. * * * Perhaps they can't all agree what is right. * * * The general problem is deceit toward the boy, the specific problem is unfair competition. * * * In time it will cure itself. * * * Schools that do not want to subsidize will refuse to play those that do, and those that do will have to play among themselves. * * * For years organizations have tried to outlaw sin, others want to outlaw war. We want to outlaw subsidization. Legislation never will do it."

The delegates were visibly relieved at the explanation of Herman Diedernichs, chairman of the athletic council, who insisted that Cornell had changed its attitude toward subsidizing only on the point that athletes in the future will not be discriminated against.

Hans Lobert Signed As Captain of Phils

Philadelphia, Dec. 27 (AP).—Hans Lobert, old-time Phillies third sacker, has signed as captain of Philadelphia's National League baseball hopes for the 1935 season. He will handle Dick Bartell's former job in addition to the coaching tasks to which he returned last year.

Lobert, now 52, is a native of Wilmington, Del., and began his diamond career on Pittsburgh's sandlots. He entered the big leagues with the Cincinnati Reds in 1906.

Whitney's Thomond II Triumphs in England

Kempton Park, England, Dec. 27 (AP).—J. H. (Jock) Whitney's Thomond II today carried the American sportsman's colors to victory in the Gamecock Handicap Steeplechase over 2 miles 4 furlongs and 90 yards by eight lengths from M. Stephen's The Brown Talisman and four others.

The American-owned jumper, an odds-on choice, at 4 to 9, carried top weight of 175 pounds, but finished well in hand. The purse was 300 pounds. Mrs. F. O. Benzer's Nisona, at 9 to 4, won the Twickenham Hurdle race, over 2 miles, by a head from T. Ellis' Amoretto, a 20-to-1 shot, and 15 others.

tions for clarifying the "forward progress" rule, which resulted in numerous conflicting decisions on last season's gridirons. It also is likely to approve proposals 8 and 9, dealing with passing penalties, although there has developed little concerted demand for a more "open game."

Bible Against Changes.

"I feel the game is open enough now and that we should not get further away from the fundamentals of blocking and the use of the running game," said Dana X. Bible, president of the coaches' association. "It will cease to be football if we give the passing attack more leeway. I see no necessity, either, for changing our rules because of what the professionals are doing. There is a vast difference between college and pro football. We should keep the rules which have proved to furnish more safeguards against injuries."

Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, now first vice president, is slated to succeed Bible as president at tomorrow's session. The probable "slate" otherwise includes: For first vice president, D. O. McLaughry, Brown; second vice president, Harry Kipke, Michigan; third vice president, to be named by Pacific Coast Coaches' Association; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Cowell, New Hampshire.

Cornell's First Show Is Set For Jan. 7

Burl-Sarron Bout Is Given Approval; Hunt Club to Learn Fate.

CHARLEY CORNELL, recently appointed matchmaker for Joe Turner, yesterday was granted permission to stage his first boxing card at the Auditorium Monday, January 7, as the fate of the Riding and Hunt Club, now closed until certain fire regulations are complied with, hung in the balance.

Cornell will open with Pete Sarron and Eddie Burl, two of the best featherweights in the business, who were signed yesterday, in the top spot, with Jimmy Jones, of Baltimore, and Bob Lowry, Washington welterweight, possibly holding down the semifinal position.

The Monday night date ordinarily assigned to Goldie Ahearn at the Riding and Hunt Club, was granted to Cornell after Ahearn had reported to the Boxing Commission that he would be unable to resume boxing contests by January 7. Ahearn said he would reopen either at the Hunt Club or some other spot, later in the month.

One Show Per Week.

Ahearn suggested that one show each week, staged alternately by the Turner-Cornell forces and himself, would prove agreeable to him. Turner concurred in the suggestion and the commission indicated it would act favorably upon the idea when Ahearn resumed operations, allowing Cornell to keep the Monday night dates until that time.

Whether the Riding and Hunt Club will be available for boxing in the future probably will be determined at a meeting of officials of the organization tonight.

Wheat Values Decline as Cold Snap Abates

Cotton Rise Is Trimmed to Only Slight Gain in Late Sales.

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—Responsive to abatement of cold thoughout domestic grain territory, and to disappointing behavior of European markets, Chicago prices for wheat and corn today underwent downturns.

Warnings of a quick recurrence of extreme low temperatures were virtually ignored, and traders gave increasing attention to likelihood of cheap offerings of new-crop wheat soon from Argentina and Australia. The impending New Year holiday acted as more or less of a curb on speculative expansion, and served to give sellers the whip hand for at least the time being.

Wheat closed easy ¼@⅜ under yesterday's finish; May, 99¼@99⅜; Corn, ¼ to ½ down; May, 89⅛@89⅜; oats, at ½ decline to ⅜ advance, and provisions varying from 20 cents setback to a rise of 5 cents.

From the outset, grain prices were bearishly influenced by the circumstance that the Liverpool wheat market had failed to reflect yesterday's advance here. Reports of torrential rains in Argentina, with consequent crop damage, failed also to operate as a stimulus, the Buenos Aires market showing declines today rather than a leap upward. Talk, too, was current that with marketing of the Argentine wheat crop lying closely ahead, there did not seem to be at present any likelihood of a wheat shortage either in this country or elsewhere before a new crop in the United States would be harvested.

Cotton Market

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—A moderate early advance in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables was followed by reactions in cotton today under realizing or liquidation and hedging against cotton in one position or another. March contracts after selling up to 12.61 reacted to 12.54 in the late trading and closed at 12.55, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 1 to 2 points except for January, which was relatively firm on covering and closed 8 points higher.

Additional January notices representing about 4,000 bales brought out some near month liquidation in early trading, but the offerings of January were promptly absorbed by the trade and that position held relatively steady. There was some selling of later months, but the offerings were light and the active months sold 3 to 6 points net higher after the call.

This advance met renewed selling in the spring months, supposed to be connected with cotton pool operations, and there was some scattered liquidation. Trade interests continued to buy, but mostly on scale down and prices worked off during the afternoon.

Status of Fair Trade Practices Called Most Keenly Contested Issue in Readjustment of NRA Codes, Rather Than Provisions Involving Price Control.

New York, Dec. 27.—Perhaps the most keenly contested issue in the imminent readjustment of NRA codes and the framing of a revised recovery act will be the status of what have become known as fair trade practices, rather than code provisions involving direct price or production control.

Business men, while now rather sharply divided concerning the wisdom and practicality of price fixing and production control, are almost unanimously insistent that they be permitted to govern themselves in the matter of controlling trade practices, under Government supervision and possibly with Government assistance.

Fair trade practices and price and production control provisions are not nearly as distinct in their nature and ultimate effects, however, as recent business discussions might indicate. Practically all the codes, and the "fair trade practice conferences" of the Department of Commerce that preceded them, include trade practice provisions which are in effect methods of preventing price cutting. These include limitations on sales discounts, banning the use of premiums, prohibition of advertising allowances to retailers, and regulation of many other devices which a highly competitive trade is prone to develop.

Business men complain that the position of the Administration on this subject has never been made sufficiently clear to them, although it seems more tolerant of such provisions than of price and production control arrangements.

Will Have to Legislate Anew On the Subject.

Congress will have to legislate anew on this subject, if the numerous fair-trade practice provisions now included in the various codes are to retain their present standing after June 16 next, when the present recovery act expires. The same group of legislators and political leaders who led the fight against the price-fixing and production-control provisions of the codes are definitely on record as being hostile to many of these fair-trade practice provisions also. It was Senator Borah and some of his colleagues of the same general views, who, in the later days of the second Administration of President Coolidge, complained bitterly about the "fair-trade practice conferences" of that day, and succeeded in inducing President Hoover shortly after his inauguration to institute a "new antitrust policy."

The fire of these critics abated somewhat when they became fearful that the reforms they had been demanding might react against the interests of farmers, but conditions in that respect are rather radically different now.

By 1929 the fair-trade practice conference agreements numbered not far from 75 and covered as many branches of industry, from antihog-cholera serum virus industry to the oil trade. The agreement covering the former, which, of course, the Federal Trade Commission undertook to enforce, included a provision forbidding giving such articles as syringes to or repairing them gratis for purchasers of serum. The latter undertook to forbid sales on credit to tank wagons, service stations and filling stations.

Call Provisions Violations Of Antitrust Laws.

There were of course many other provisions in all, or virtually all, the agreements. Senator Borah and his associates then took the position that such provisions as these violated the anti-trust laws, theoretically in full force and effect, an opinion with which most lawyers not in the employ of the industries concerned agreed. They also asserted that these arrangements affected conditions under which business was conducted to the detriment of certain classes of enterprises and to the advantage of other. This view also was shared by many economists.

Now these same provisions which were found in the fair trade practice conference agreements have been carried forward, expanded and elaborated in most cases, into the NRA codes. All this is, of course, quite well known to Senator Borah and the others who fought such provisions five years ago, who forced extensive amendments to the national industrial recovery bill last year and who forced radical changes in NRA policy earlier in 1934.

What will their attitude be this winter when the subject of the enactment of a new law comes forward for discussion, as it must since the present measure expires on June 16, 1935? How large a following can they muster in any effort they choose to make to prevent industry from obtaining what it undoubtedly wants, a continuation of the privileges of setting up a variety of trade practice provisions free from danger of prosecution under the antitrust laws, and of working out its problems collectively by means of such agreements as those already described? To forward looking business men, these questions are of far more importance than current decisions and policies of the National Industrial Recovery Board concerning price fixing and production control.

Curb's Prices Close Mixed; Sales Jump

Losses and Gains About Even; Trading Rises to 405,000 Shares.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Erratic price movements prevailed on the curb exchange today and gains and losses were about evenly divided at the finish. The volume of trading rose sharply. Transfers, which approximated 405,000 shares, were the largest since February 15. This compares with a turnover of 274,000 the day before.

A substantial part of the session's turnover was accounted for by tax selling, today being the last this year that such transaction could be effected by regular delivery of stock. Deals for cash will be necessary tomorrow, Saturday and Monday.

Several wide moves occurred among specialties. Singer Manufacturing dropped 12 points on a meager transfer. United Shoe Machinery, Aluminum Co. of America and Babcock & Wilcox lost 1 to 2 points, while advances of around a point were recorded by Pan-American Airways, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Sherwin-Williams and Swift Internacionale.

Fractional declines appeared in American Gas & Electric, International Petroleum, Parker Rust Proof, Newmont, and Bunker Hill & Sullivan. Steady to slightly higher quotations were shown by American Cyanamid B, Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Swift & Co. and Wright Hargreaves.

Transatlantic issues held steady, but De Beers met selling from Paris. The market closed firm.

Paris—Rentes led a slight decline in prices on the bourse today. The closing was heavy.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was still of a holiday character today. The closing was firmer despite the extremely small turnover.

Daily Credit of Reserve Banks Averages $22,000,000 Higher

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended December 26, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,493,000,000, an increase of $22,000,000, compared with the preceding week, and a decrease of $205,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

On December 26 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,470,000,000, a decrease of $7,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $40,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and an increase of $30,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $41,000,000 in money in circulation, $18,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $4,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts.

There were practically no changes in the system's holdings of bills discounted, bills bought in open market, and United States Government securities. Holdings of industrial advances increased $2,000,000.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended December 26, 1934, were as follows:

Bond Market Sags Fraction In Larger Sale

Trading Displayed Nervous Tone; Dealing Climbs to $13,316,000.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—The bond market displayed a rather nervous tone today and moderately irregular price changes were the rule at the close.

The utilities found some support in the early hours and scattered issues managed to hold small gains. But, for the most part, the morning firmness gave way to further recessions in the final hour as the movement against power and light rates continued to develop.

Highest grade loans were quite narrow throughout. A number of the rails showed substantial recoveries and several industrials were in demand.

Effect of News.

The news, generally, was not too bearish, although the action of the Consolidated Gas directors in cutting the quarterly dividend from 50 to 25 cents was taken as an indication of the stress under which most of the utility companies are now laboring.

The trading volume expanded to $13,316,000, par value, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off one-tenth of a point at 85.4.

Among gainers of around 1 to 2 points were Chicago & Northwestern 4½s at 24¼, Chicago & Great Western 4s at 29, Denver & Rio Grande 4½s at 38½, Market Street Railway 7s at 62¾, International Mercantile Marine 6s at 46¼, Fort Scott 4s at 36½, Keith Co. 6s at 72, Northern Pacific 3s at 73¾, Frisco 5s at 14¼, Wabash 4½s at 18 and Western Pacific 5s at 33.

On Losing List.

Losers included Warren Bros. 6s at 34, Utah Light 5s at 62, Southern Railway 4s at 82½, Rio Grande Western Collateral 4s at 45, Postal Telegraph 5s at 40½, Philadelphia Co. 5s at 80, North American 5½s at 79¾, N. Y., Westchester & Boston 4½s at 26½, International Telephone 4½s at 57½, New Haven convertible debenture 6s at 44¼, New Orleans Public Service 5s at 52, M-K-T Adjustment 5s at 29, Milwaukee Electric 5s at 77½, Hudson & Manhattan 5s at 34½, Consolidated Gas 4½s at 97½, Consolidated Coal 5s at 31 and American Water Works 5s at 91.

U. S. Government securities were not unusually active, but they held advances ranging from two-thirty-seconds to twelve-thirty-seconds of a point.

The foreign section was mixed, with some of the South American turning a bit reactionary while obligations of Italy and Japan improved.

Stocks Gain One-Tenth as Sales Jump

Price Movements Turn Mixed; Trading Spurts to 1,641,665 Shares.

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Trading in stocks broadened out today into a typical year-end market. Price movements were mixed and confusing but the tone of the market improved as selling of utility shares diminished.

It was the final session of the year stocks could be sold for registering losses or profits for tax purposes through the regular delivery channels of the exchange.

Year-end tax selling, while less than in recent years, was sufficient to expand the volume considerably, combined with other year-end switching operations and adjustment of accounts. Turnover increased to 1,641,665 shares, the largest since last July 27, compared with 1,045,765 yesterday.

The market received the announcement of the halving of the dividend rate on Consolidated Gas common with composure. The company declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share, against 50 cents previously.

Following its decline earlier in the week into record low ground, the common rallied and finished fractionally higher, at 19¼. But the preferred sank to a new low and closed off a point, at 72¾. Other utilities rallied. Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works and North American closed up fractions to a point.

Encouraged by additional evidence of an upward trend in business, traders increased their share holdings on chances of a rally.

Some steel shares encountered buying on reports the companies were operating in the black on the year-end spurt in operations. Inland Steel touched a new peak, closing nearly 3 points higher, at 53. American Rolling Mill, Bethlehem and National Steel scored gains up to about a point.

A further increase in electric power output last week, as announced by the Edison Electric Institute, helped to offset news of the Consolidated Gas dividends reduction. Power output attained the highest level since February, 1930, and the gain over the corresponding week last year widened to 7.9 per cent from 7.7 the week before.

Radio preferred B, New York Air Brake, Spiegel-May-Stern and Westinghouse scored gains of 1 to 3 points. National Distillers finished up fractionally at 27½ after the company had declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, the first cash payment since August, 1932.

Tax transactions brought out of the ticker tape many issues which ordinarily are not active.

Among more active stocks, losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded in American Chicle, Allied Chemical, American Sugar, Corn Products, First National Stores, International Silver, Seaboard Oil and Monsanto Chemical.

A few sales for cash appeared on the tape but such transactions, usually associated with tax selling, were not expected in volume until tomorrow.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks advanced one-tenth of a point to 72.1.

U. S. Exports Of Autos Drop In October

Month's Valuation Totals $12,764,001, Showing Seasonal Fall.

Total exports of American automotive products during the month of October reached a valuation of $12,764,001, the Commerce Department reports. This figure indicated a continuation of the seasonal slackening which is customary at this period of the year, being $1,674,163, or 11 per cent under the September total of $14,438,164, but furthered the improvement over shipments recorded in 1933 with a gain of $3,862,155, or 43 per cent, as compared with October of last year when the total for that month was placed at $8,901,846.

The improved demand for American automotive products from the overseas markets is evidenced by the export total for the first ten months of the current year amounting to $171,997,988, an increase of 124 per cent over the figure of $76,617,086 for the corresponding period of last year. The demand for passenger cars, as compared with September, was reduced in each of the price groups. Shipments numbered 7,941 units, valued at $4,335,919, as compared with 10,159 units, valued at $5,539,207. However, the totals for the month under review represented gains of 37 per cent in number and 46 per cent in value over October, 1933, when the overseas requirements amounted to 5,802 units, value $2,-957,404. The Union of South Africa retained its position as the leading market for passenger cars during October, followed by Japan, British India, Argentina and Belgium. The three latter countries, together with Mexico, Palestine, Egypt and Netherlands East Indies recorded improved purchases as compared with September.

'Quiet Liberal View Is Pledged by Bilbo

Will Not Try to 'Out-Hooey Huey,' Mississippian Says.

"A reputation as a "quiet liberal" was described yesterday by Senator-elect Theodore G. Bilbo, of Mississippi, as the aim of his Washington career, the Associated Press says.

"The man Bilbo," as he calls himself, had been waiting a week for office space, and yesterday was assigned the office formerly occupied by the man he defeated, Senator Hubert D. Stephens.

"I'm not trying to out-hooey Huey Long," he said. "That's just what some of the papers said."

He stands for redistribution of wealth, but expressed preference for "the Roosevelt way of doing it."

"The old-age pension, unemployment insurance and payment of the bonus will redistribute wealth painlessly," said Bilbo, then added with a smile:

"Huey wants to take it right away from them."

DIED.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

DRAFTING of the pay restoration bill was completed yesterday by the American Federation of Labor wage conference and its sponsors in the House and Senate.

BAKER.

The bill calls for repeal of all provisions of the various economy measures which have the effect of reducing or limiting wages or salaries. A section is included which does not effect the Thomas amendment to last year's independent offices bill, which established the precedent of the five-day work week in Government service for approximately 50,000 mechanical employes and set their wage scale at not less than the weekly income as of June 1, 1932.

The wage conference, which is composed of A. F. of L. organizations, including Government employes, believes that this bill will solve the pay problem by eliminating all oppressive economy legislation. Another section is included which provides that nothing in the bill shall be construed as reducing any compensation.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, is reported to have consented to introduce the bill in the Senate. The conference will request Glenn Griswold (Democrat), of Indiana, to introduce the bill in the House. Mr. Griswold, who is said to be in Indiana, will "very likely" accept the invitation to pilot the measure through the House, his secretary said last night.

Included in the delegation which conferred with Mr. McCarran after the bill was drafted were Edward J. Gainor, vice president and member of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. and president of the National Association of Letter Carriers; M. T. Finnan, also representing the letter carriers; W. C. Hushing, legislative representative of the A. F. of L.; Frank Coleman, of the Plate Printers; E. Claude Babcock, president, the American Federation of Government Employes; N. P. Alifas, of the Machinists; W. D. Johnson, of the Order of Railway Conductors, representing the Big Four Railroad brotherhoods; W. M. Collins, Railway Mail Association, and Leo E. George and Gilbert E. Hyatt of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks.

Another tooth is added to American military strength as S. S. Green (F), War, has just obtained a patent for a water-coiled gun barrel. The device is designed to hold a reserve quantity of water in front of the muzzle end of the weapon.

John S. Beach Honored.

John S. Beach, retirement expert, Civil Service Commission, who will leave the service January 1, was honored at a banquet last night by the Joint Conference on Retirement which is composed of representatives of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Edward J. Gainor, president, National Association of Letter Carriers, was toastmaster after Robert H. Alcorn, conference chairman, called the meeting to order. Except for a few invited guests outstanding in the cause of retirement, all those attending were members of the conference including:

N. T. Finnan, Clarence S. Stimson, National Association of Letter Carriers; Leo E. George, Gilbert E. Hyatt, William Otte, John M. Torka, National Federation of Post-office Clerks; E. Claude Babcock, Esther Penn, American Federation of Government Employes; William M. Collins, Henry W. Strickland, Railway Mail Association; N. P. Alifas, Machinists; Harry H. McCall, A. T. McNamara, Bernard G. Ladd, Columbia Lodge; Fred S. Walker, Clyde M. Mills, Typographical Union; Edwin A. Eckles, Harry L. Stroh, Printing Pressmen; John H. Jaeschky, H. L. Cruman, carpenters; Harry M. Smith, James D. Sibbett, pattern makers; Robert H. Alcorn, William D. Reeves, Harry Beatty, moulders; Joseph B. Fitzpatrick, bookbinders; John A. McLean, Frank S. Kavey, electrotypers; R. B. Kelso, C. C. Gillikin, Harry Dehler, boilermakers; Thomas D. Stuart, Neil N. Graham, electrical workers.

Federal Housing Administration, now cramped in the new Postoffice Building and the old Southern Railway Building, expects to be comfortably established in the old Justice Building at Fifteenth and K streets northwest, by January 15. Some of the units are planning to move the first week in January.

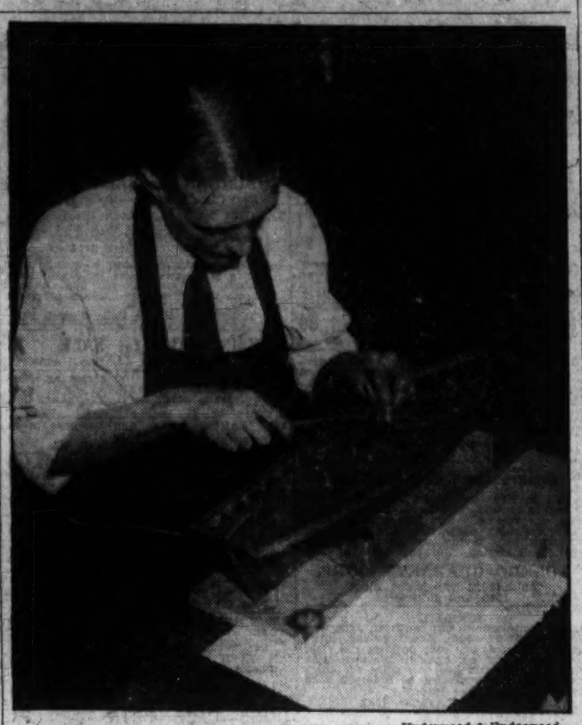
Employes at Interstate Commerce are mourning the death of F. L. Speiden, of Atlanta, chairman of the Southeastern Traffic Association. Mr. Speiden, who was also publishing agent for the Southeastern railroads, died in Baltimore yesterday after a month's illness. An expert on tariff, he was very popular at ICC.

Following the success of her Washington debut as a solo dancer, Miss Hedwig Eyle, stenographic section, Interstate Commerce Commission, is now busy in the evenings creating a program to be given next month at Fairmont School.

DR. S. F. HILDEBRAND (F), senior ichthyologist, Bureau of Fisheries, who was recently elected to honorary membership in the Panama Canal Natural History Society in recognition of his contribution to the knowledge of neotropical ichthyology, is well known for his work on Central American fishes.

Dr. Hildebrand was a member of the Smithsonian Biological Survey of the Canal Zone from 1910 to 1912, to which duty he was detailed by the bureau. After the death of Dr. Seth E. Meek, who appears as senior author, Dr. Hildebrand completed and published through the Field Museum of Natural History a volume describing about 94 species of fresh water fishes from Panama, and three volumes on marine fishes, describing some 757 species. His work has included studies in the waters around El Salvador, Costa Rica and Puerto Rico.

Miss Etta Greenblatt (F), formerly with AAA, is now a stenographer in the office of the special assistant to the director of the Soil Erosion Service.



Underwood & Underwood.

When he was a small boy, Wilford L. Dawsey's hobby was whittling odd toys and useful objects; today his youthful skill still serves a helpful purpose in his duties at the Smithsonian Institution. He is employed there as a "preparator" making lifelike models of various things from an early American steam engine to a scale model of a sailing vessel for exhibition in the U. S. National Museum. Mr. Dawsey (P), is shown here building a model of the Baltimore Clipper, which will be complete in every detail.

Colorado to Tax U. S. for Property Of Moffat Line

Denver, Dec. 27 (AP).—John R. Seaman, chairman of the State Tax Commission, announced today the Federal Government will be taxed for Moffat Railroad property, of which it recently took control, and if it declines to pay suit will be filed to test laws which provide tax exemption for Government property.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation recently assumed ownership of Moffat stock to protect $10,500,000 in loans.

Seaman said a theory that Government ventures into the field of private business are not tax exempt was upheld by the United States Supreme Court last May. The court ruled that State-owned and State-operated liquor stores are subject to Federal Tax.

Walt Mason, Himself

Safe Plan.

New candidates come up the hill, new statesmanship uprears; I'll vote for Andrew Jackson still, as I have done for years. In these abnormal, changeful days, with crises sad to view, some one must stick to ancient ways, suspicious of the new; some one must voice the poignant fear that we are breaking loose from all the things our sires held dear, without a good excuse. We once thought recklessness a sin, waste made our statesmen roar; and now we blow the billions in, and plan to blow some more. I am not wise enough to say where all this thing will lead; I only know that every day we're hitting higher speed. I look ahead and have the blues, for which there is no cure; I'd hate to wear my grandson's shoes when all the bills mature. I think about the frightful bill that some day must be paid, and vote for Andrew Jackson still, and hope he makes the grade. We're building highways everywhere, we build them wildly well, a gorgeous road to some cheap lair where forty people dwell; we're building highways through the swamp and up the mountainside, so that the folks, in state and pomp, on errands vain may ride. We're building highways through the brush and on the desert sand, where only wolves and rabbits rush—it costs to beat the band. Some one, some time, must pay the bill, in taxes that amaze; I'll vote for Andrew Jackson still, and for the old-time ways.

Curtailment Deplored In Bureau of Mines

A committee of the American Mining Congress yesterday asserted many important activities of the Bureau of Mines had been curtailed as a result of a reduced staff, the Associated Press said.

The committee said the bureau had been forced by an appropriation cut to reduce its staff 35 per cent simultaneously with an 100,000 increase in the total Federal pay roll.

"At the same time," it said, "emergency units, such as RFC and NRA, like many 'old-line agencies,' have been forced almost entirely to depend upon the Bureau of Mines for basic information relating to mining."

The newspaper said the sentences would be imposed Saturday.

Wanderbirds' Last '34 Hike Leads Them to Black Pond

Prospect Rock Also to Be Visited in Trip Starting at 10 A. M. Sunday; Century-Old Sycamore to Be Inspected on Riverside.

By Robert Shosteck.

The last trip of the year will take the Wanderbirds to Black Pond and Prospect Rock, two of the most scenic spots in the valley of the Potomac. The deep, crystal-clear Black Pond, the channel of the Potomac of millions of years ago, lies in a deep rocky gorge, huge granite walls over 300 feet in height flanking it on the left.

Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on this rough 3-mile trip will meet in front of The Post Building at 10 a. m. Sunday. The round-trip bus fare will be 45 cents and reservations must be made at National 4200 by midnight Saturday. It is advisable to bring along lunch and a cup, and to wear durable clothes.

The group will leave the buses on the Leesburg road about one-quarter mile above Bullneck Run and will follow a dirt road a short distance to the woodland trail to Prospect Rock, overlooking the river. Several species of native birds, including the junco and the hermit thrush, winter in the nearby pine woods. From this point, nearly 300 feet in height, one can gain a wonderful vista of the Potomac, from Stubblefield Falls to the south, and to Cupid's Bower above.

See Ancient Sycamores.

Descending Prospect Rock, the hikers will follow the riverside trail for about one-half-mile through the flats where many century-old sycamores are to be found. A fine spring is located about one-quarter-mile beyond Pawpaw Run, near a small stream called Persimmon Run.

The hikers will find little that resembles a trail in the area about Black Pond. It will often be a matter of skirting giant boulders and climbing over rocks to reach Difficult Run where a well-beaten trail is found. The million-year-old archean rocks of the region have an interesting history and reveal the fascinating story of Black Pond. These ingenious granites were formed by the solidification of the molten mass of lava in the early part of our earth's history. It is probable that at some later time—again hundreds of millions of years back—a tremendous lateral pressure combined with great heat altered the structure and properties of these original rocks. These great pressures and temperatures, far greater than any which modern science can make, crushed and twisted these rocks into all sorts of shapes and forms.

When Potomac Was Young.

Some layers were able to withstand erosion better than others because of greater hardness or because they contained more weather-resistant minerals. The young Potomac, making its way to the Atlantic from the Appalachians, cut the region now known as Black Pond, since this rock was softer than the nearby layers.

Long before the dinosaurs appeared upon the earth the meandering river changed its course, making a sharp turn toward present-day Cupid's Bower, and leaving the old channel dry. A part of this old course, now known as Black Pond, gradually was refilled by waters seeping in through fractures of nearby rocks. Even though the pond has neither inlet nor outlet, its level hardly changes from season to season, since evaporation is balanced by seepage.

The present owners of both Black Pond and nearby Yellow Pond have taken a great interest in the conservation of the wild life in and about these ponds. Many kinds of fish, notably the black bass, are found in Black Pond. Many species of salamanders, including the green triton, are found in nearby pools. Many interesting species of ferns, some evergreen, are found in crannies of the huge palisade overlooking the pond.

The mouth of Difficult Run is but a short distance from the pond. The hikers will make a crossing below Holly Island, following a good trail along the right bank of the run. The group will have a campfire and coffee near the spring, only a short distance from the Leesburg road where the buses will meet the group. The buses will reach the city about 5:30 or 6 p. m.

* * * *

Among the letters in the morning's mail was a Christmas greeting from the Spanish Main. B. F. Rogers sends his greetings "from a Wanderbird gone South with the rest of the birds." Mr. Rogers will be with us again in mid-January.

The Red Triangle Club announces a Sunday 3-mile hike around Rockville, the group meeting at 2 p. m. at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue.

Deaf, Dumb, Blind, He Chats in Signs And Weeps for Joy

New Orleans, Dec. 27 (AP).—Deaf, dumb and blind, George W. Boucherau, 74-year-old resident of the Touro-Shakespeare almshouse, who has sat in a world alone for months, spoke in the sign language today and wept for joy over the presence of one who could communicate with him.

Yesterday Henry J. Soland, who has his sight, but is deaf and dumb, visited the home inmate and communicated with him through finger clasps.

The old man realized that someone was present who could understand him and with his knowledge of the sign system he raised his hands and talked with the visitor.

It developed that the two men were old friends.

Boucherau formerly had his eyesight. Some time ago he sacrificed one eye in an effort to save the other, and later he was struck by an automobile and the blow blinded him in the other eye.
